RECIPROCITY IS FAVORED BY TWO-THIRDS OF SENATE

Poll of Upper House Shows 65 Out of 92 Senators Will Vote for McCall Bill, Reported by Ways and Means Committee

Passage of Measure in House Certain To-morrow; Wood and Paper Will Come in Free From Canadian Private Lands

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—A complete poll of the Senate shows that sixty-five Senators will vote for the McCall bill, carrying out the provisions of the Canadian reciprocity agreement, as it was modified by the House action to-day. There are ninety-two Senators.

This poll was taken in a manner that leaves no room for doubt, and is equivalent to sixty-five pledges to support the administration measure. The ascertainment of this fact and its publication puts it up clearly to a small minority of the Senate to defeat a measure for the integrity of which, and its good effects for the future, the President is now pledging himself officially and personally in the Middle West.

It is understood that there will be no output of argument or oratory on the administration side when the agreement reaches the stages of debate. If reciprocity Senators were to debate at length they would, by that fact, be parties to the waste of time.

Bill Reported in House.

The reciprocity bill was favorably reported to the House to-day by Representative McCall of the Committee on Ways and Means, who is in charge of the bill. Mr. McCall gave notice that he would call the bill up for consideration in the House immediately after that body meets on Monday.

Gaines of West Virginia, also of the Committee on Ways and Means, protested and asked that the bill be held back until Wednesday, so the minority of the Ways and Means Committee could prepare an adverse report.

"That will delay unreasonably action on this important bill," objected Mr. McCall. "I cannot consent to it. I shall call the bill up Monday."

Mr. Mann said that, as Mr. McCall had announced his plans, the minority of the committee could prepare its report and present it any time, but the House granted Mr. Gaines's request that the report may be filed by next Wednesday. Mr. McCall hopes to have the bill through the House and before the Senate Committee on Finance by that date.

The vote on the bill in committee to-day was twelve to seven, six Republicans and six Democrats voting for it, and six Republicans and one Democrat voting against it. Those who supported the bill were: Chairman Payne, McCall, Hill, Boutell, Needham and Longworth, Republicans; Clark, Underwood, Fou, Randell, Harrison and Brantley, Democrats. Those opposing were: Dalzell, Calderhead, Fordney, Gaines, Ellis and Dwight, Republicans; Brussard, Democrat.

Change on Wood and Paper.

The bill as it comes from the committee is changed only with respect to the wood pulp and print paper schedule. An amendment adopted provides that there shall be free exchange of wood pulp and print paper so far as applied to Canadian private lands, but not as applied to Canadian Crown lands, on which the Canadian Provinces have an export duty.

When this export duty is removed there is to be general free trade on wood pulp, news print paper and other paper and paper board manufactured from mechanical wood pulp or from chemical wood pulp, or of which such pulp is the component material of chief value, colored in the pulp, or not colored, and valued at not more than 4 cents per pound, not including printed or decorated wall paper.

Senator Beveridge to-day made public this letter, indorsing Canadian reciprocity, from Andrew Carnegie:

Approved by Carnegie.

"My dear Senator: I wish to congratulate you upon your stand in regard to the reciprocity. There is no possibility of injury to our own people from free trade with Canada. Conditions are very much the same in both lands and the cost of transportation of any commodity in com-

Count Up, Everybody! Have You Got $34.43?

That's What You Are Entitled to Under Uncle Sam's Latest Estimate.

According to figures which were flashed over the wires last night from Washington (Republican figures, of course), every mother's son of us is worth $34.43. If you've got any more than that, you have more than one person's share; if less, somebody may be holding out on you.

The total amount of money in circulation in the United States, according to the figures, is $3,211,550,465, which is really some money. Some 90,000,000 of us have got it.

Almost anybody can have a pleasant Sunday looking at these figures. All you need is a block of paper and a lead pencil. One person's share being $34.43, it naturally follows that Willie and Mollie and Tommy and Susie and Pa and Ma together have $206.58.

It's a whole lot of money, any way you look at it. Be careful of yours, and see if you cannot get somebody else's $34.43 before Uncle Sam puts his bookkeepers on the job again one year from now.

The census of ten years ago indicated that the per capita wealth of the United States was then $35.10. None of the experts attempts to account for the shrinkage.

AIRSHIP ATTACK TEST.

Navy Will Practice Firing at All Kinds of Balloons.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11. — The Secretary of the Navy has made arrangements for tests of attacks by war vessels on airships. The tests are to be opened with firing at balloons of all sizes, from the toy to the largest captive balloon which will give an ample range for the ordinary practice rifle and the machine gun.

Practising in a high wind against balloons will be as effective as shooting at the actual airship. The United States, however, is the first nation to plan a test from decks of warships. The experiments will take place off Hampton Roads during the Spring manoeuvres.

ALARM FELT FOR KAISER.

Emperor Must Undergo Operation Is Report.

BERLIN, Feb. 11.—Alarming reports as to the health of Emperor William were circulated here to-day. One was to the effect that he is soon to undergo an operation. In connection with this it was said that the real reason for the recall of Crown Prince Eitel Frederick from his Oriental trip was the decision of the Emperor to prepare his eldest son at once for the duties of state.

Encouraging reports of the Emperor's condition still come from his attending physicians, who state that he is suffering from a slight attack of influenza. But it is believed that this has resulted in a recurrence of the affection of the ear which has troubled the Kaiser for many years.

LORIMER UNDER KNIFE.

Senator Resting Easily After Operation in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Senator William Lorrimer is resting easily to-day after a slight operation which was performed upon him for an abscess which had formed in his ear. His friends say the Senator is doing well and will be out of the house in a day or two.

EX-GOV. SPRAGUE BETTER.

Rhode Island's War Executive Is Able to See Friends in Paris.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The condition of Rhode Island's war Governor, William Sprague, is decidedly improved. To-day he was so much better that he was able to see a few friends.

Mr. Sprague, who is in his eighty-first year, recently experienced a return of the effects of a rupture of a blood vessel four years ago, and for several weeks it was believed the end was near.

CORNELL DEFIANCE DANCE.

College Girls Disgruntled Over Slights at Junior Prom.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Disgruntled because only five of their number were invited to the junior "prom," the remaining 395 women students in Cornell University held a "Defiance Dance" of their own in the gymnasium at Sage College. No men were admitted to the girls' party, and the fee required was only ten cents, compared with the $5 required for admission to the juniors' ball.

The names of the winners in the AMERICAN'S EDUCATIONAL CONTEST will be published in the SUNDAY AMERICAN of February 19.

CHILD SET FIRE BY BROTHER IS DEAD

Pathetic Accident Follows a Charlestown Mother's Trip for Groceries.

BABY RUSHED TO DOCTOR

Despite Assistance Rendered at Relief Hospital Death Results Speedily.

The natural disposition of children to play with fire, and the necessities of a poor young mother forced to leave her infants alone while she went to market, resulted in the terrible burning of thirteen-months-old Margaret Murphy at No. 68 Sullivan street, Charlestown, early last evening and her death soon afterward in the Relief Station of the City Hospital.

The child's clothing is supposed to have been ignited by a burning wisp of paper in the hands of her brother, Alton, two years her senior. Just how the affair happened, however, will never be known.

The babies are the children of Mrs. George W. Murphy, who makes her home in the downstairs apartment of the story-and-a-half wooden house at the number given.

Mrs. Murphy was alone with the babies last night and extremely anxious to get out to the nearest grocery. She was expecting a relative to take her place momentarily with the little folks.

Finally the young mother decided to risk leaving the babies alone just long enough to slip out to the market. They were playing together on the floor. The mother spoke warningly to little Alton, admonishing him to take care of "Sister" and to be sure to keep away from the fire. Then, throwing a shawl over her head and shoulders, and locking the door behind her, she ran all the way to the grocery and back again.

When she unlocked the door of her little home she saw a sight that sent her into the street screaming for help. A citizen rushed to her aid and, hearing the word "fire," pulled in an alarm.

Mrs. Murphy ran back into the house and picked up her baby, its clothing burning and head and body already badly burned. The fire was soon extinguished.

The entire neighborhood was alarmed by this time and the shrieks of women brought Dr. Packard to the house. The physician applied the usual first aid and then suggested that the little girl be sent to the hospital. The damage to the interior of the house was estimated at less than $10.

Boy Can't Tell Story.

There was no witness to the tragedy, and the boy, only three years old, is unable to tell how his sister caught fire. Wisps of paper on the kitchen floor, however, indicated that the boy had been playing with fire and probably, desirous of pleasing the baby, had held out a burning brand to her admiring gaze.

Mrs. Murphy was almost crazed by the tragedy, her grief moving everybody who witnessed it.

MR. BURNHAM MUST PAY.

Government Won't Settle Clothes-Pressing Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—D. H. Burnham of Chicago, architect and chairman of the commission created by Congress to lend an artistic air to government buildings and statuary, must pay $4.75 for pressing his clothes, an item he charged up to the government in his expense account. He incurred the expense on a recent trip to Washington to attend a meeting of the commission. The charge seemed eminently proper to the auditor, for he passed it with his O. K. It was blocked by Controller Tracewell of the Treasury.

WOMAN, 70, SAVED AT FIRE.

Invalid Carried From Peril in Beverly Home.

BEVERLY, Feb. 11.—Mrs. C. T. Hanson, seventy, an invalid, was rescued from fire peril to-day by George Smith, who rushed into a burning building, upstairs to a second door room where she was lying helpless, and, picking her in his arms, carried her down stairs and into the home of a neighbor. The fire was in the two-story wooden dwelling on Essex street owned and occupied by Mrs. James M. Simes. Only the two women were in it when flames were discovered, and Mrs. Simes rushed into the street for aid. Before the fire was extinguished damage estimated at $1,500 was done.

Swift Quits Glover Case.

Since he can find no reason on which to bring action against any person for the murder of Clarence Glover, for whose murder Hattie Le Blanc, the little French Canadian girl of West Arichat was acquitted, Attorney-General James M. Swift will drop the matter. "There is nothing to be done farther that I can see," he said. "There is small likelihood of the mystery being solved."

ARCHBISHOP RYAN DIES IN PHILADELPHIA

HIGH TRIBUTE PAID BY BOSTON PRELATE

Mgr. O'Connell Praises Long and Distinguished Career of Pennsylvania Churchman.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 11.—Patrick John Ryan, Archbishop of Philadelphia, died at 4:07 o'clock this afternoon, after a long illness, at the age of nearly eighty years.

Archbishop O'Connell Pays Tender Tribute

Following is the tribute of Archbishop O'Connell to the late prelate of Philadelphia as he dictated it last evening to a reporter for the Sunday AMERICAN in the library of his home on Bay State road:

Archbishop Ryan was one of the most distinguished prelates of the last century in America. He was already fairly famous as a preacher half a century ago. One of his addresses, "What Catholics Do Not Believe," did quite as much as anything at that time to discredit the ridiculous and constantly repeated romantic tales about the church which had been handed down for generations and are still cherished as truth by many uneducated Protestants.

He was not especially a learned man, but he was a man of great practical good sense and endless good humor. He was Celtic to the core in the brilliancy and pungency of his wit, and particularly in his warm hearted amiability and his devotion to the church which he served his whole life long.

And yet no man was more truly American than Archbishop Ryan. He never tired of either glorious prophecy for the splendid future of this country or of giving sound council and warning in the face of conditions which threatened our welfare.

I am quite sure it is not generally known, but I know it to be the fact that, perhaps, no prelate in all America had won the personal affection of Pius X. in the degree that Archbishop Ryan possessed it. There was something similar in the two natures that seemed to attract one to the other, something of the same amiability and sweetness of character, mingled with a remarkable frankness when occasion demanded. And each was fond of his little joke. Some of Archbishop Ryan's witticisms have become world famous. His quickness of repartee was really oftentimes startling.

He was one of the school of prelates of the last century who literally saw the church in America grow from a feeble child to an immense giant under their very eyes. And in this wonderful progress of the church he certainly had a very large share, both in the West, in St. Louis as priest and bishop, and in Philadelphia.

HEART FAILURE IS CAUSE OF NOTED PRELATE'S DEATH

The gallant struggle of Archbishop Ryan for life has failed. The venerable prelate of the Roman Catholic diocese of Philadelphia passed away at the archiepiscopal residence in Philadelphia at 4:07 yesterday afternoon, after a long illness, which became serious nearly two weeks ago.

Weeping relatives and priests surrounded the bed when the famous church leader breathed his last. They had been hastily summoned when the patient's heart began to fail at 11 o'clock a. m.

The physicians knew that death was near, and the last rites for the dying were administered. In the words of one of the attending physicians, the aged prelate's heart had "practically worn out."

Victim of Overwork.

An indefatigable worker, he never had spared himself, and the illness that prostrated him right after last Christmas was the result of overexertion. From the first his attendants recognized that the gravest danger lay in the probability of heart failure, and stimulants to keep that organ strong were almost constantly administered.

The frequent rallies in the prelate's general condition had had little significance for his medical advisers, as from the first they had felt, and had advised those close to the Archbishop, that death would probably come from his overworked heart and that its coming would be sudden.

Had Archbishop Ryan lived until February 20 he would have been eighty years old.

Sketch of His Life.

The Most Reverend John Patrick Ryan was born in Thurles, County Tipperary, Ireland, on February 20, 1831. His parents

PEABODY'S FUNERAL IS HELD TO-MORROW

Services for Boston Banker to Be Held in Emmanuel Episcopal Church.

The funeral of George Lee Peabody, fiance of Miss Edyth Parker Deacon, will take place from Emmanuel Church, Newbury street, to-morrow, beginning at 12:30 p. m. The body of the clubman, who made such a courageous fight for life, was sent to Boston from Baltimore following his death in the Johns Hopkins Hospital in that city last week.

Miss Deacon, youngest of the three beautiful Deacon sisters, will attend the funeral. She was unremitting in her affectionate attendance upon Mr. Peabody during his lingering illness.

The services will be conducted by Bishop Lawrence, assisted by the Rev. Sherrod Billings, headmaster of Groton School and a close friend of the Peabody family.

Burial in Salem.

The burial will be in the Peabody family lot in Salem, where the commitment will be read by the Rev. Endicott Peabody of Groton School, a relative of the bereaved family.

It is stated that when Mr. Peabody's will is filed the document will show further proof of the deep love which he held for Miss Deacon. She is wealthy in her own right, but it is expected that she will receive from the will some of the large property which Mr. Peabody planned to bestow upon her as his wife.

The death of George Lee Peabody brought to melancholy end one of the most touching romances that Boston society has known. Mr. Peabody, until recently a member of the old banking house of Lee, Higginson & Co., Harvard graduate and member of smart clubs, won the love of Miss Deacon last Summer.

While playing tennis with her last July at Newport he suffered a sunstroke which affected his health so seriously that their wedding, planned for the Fall, was postponed. When Mr. Peabody became worse, Miss Deacon came to Boston and, while living with relatives here, visited Mr. Peabody at his mother's house as often as the physicians would permit.

Fiancee at Bedside.

Rumor arose that their engagement was broken. This was denied with spirit by Miss Deacon herself. Mr. Peabody failed to improve. He was taken to the Johns Hopkins Hospital for an operation on his head. Miss Deacon accompanied him South. She made daily visits to the hospital from the home of Mrs. George von L. Meyer in Washington.

Reports of Mr. Peabody's case were watched from day to day in Boston with keen anxiety. News of his death brought deep sympathy to his family and especially to Miss Deacon.

W. E. D. STOKES WEDS A GIRL FROM DENVER

Wealthy New York Hotel and Club Man Takes Miss Elwood as Bride.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—W. E. D. Stokes, the wealthy owner of the Hotel Ansonia, known equally well as financier, horseman and clubman, was married to-day to Miss Helen Elwood of Denver, who is a little more than one-third his age, and who has been living at the Ansonia with her sister and brother-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. W. O. Hendrix.

Mr. Stokes, Miss Elwood and a small party it is said, went in an automobile to New Jersey to-day and the ceremony was performed there. Miss Elwood is said to be prominent in Denver society. She is a beautiful girl of twenty-two years. The news of the marriage caused surprise among the many friends of Mr. Stokes, who is as well known probably as any man in New York.

As the fourth son of the late James Stokes, he inherited a large fortune which he has greatly increased by his financial operations. He built the Ansonia at great cost and has since managed it and made it his home. He also has a large stock farm in Kentucky where he devotes much of his time to breeding horses. His Russian horses have taken many blue ribbons.

In New York he is a member of at least a dozen clubs. His career has been marked by many varied incidents ranging from the buying of a Virginia railroad at auction to the presentation of three fake "brown geese" to the Central Park Zoo and then writing the Zoo managers letters of inquiry about them.

Freshmen team race—Yale won, Harvard disqualified.

Mile race (Hunter trophy)—A. R. Kiviat, I. A. A. C., won; Oscar Hedlund, Brookline "Gym," second; F. S. Harmon, Dartmouth, third. Time—4:29 1-5.

One-mile handicap—Won by C. S. Garland, B. A. A.; F. S. Berna, Cornell, second; E. Bosworth, W. A., third.

FOUR thousand followers of indoor athletics packed Mechanics Hall last night at the Mid-Winter carnival of the Boston Athletic Association, and cheered like mad when A. R. Kiviat, carrying the colors of the Irish American Athletic Club of New York won the feature event, the Hunter Mile, in the remarkably fast time of 4:29 1-5.

The Winter meet was the most successful in all the long history of the B. A. A. The leading milers of the country met in the contest for the Hunter cup. Other great features were the Harvard-Yale relay, and the one-mile relay.

The world of fashion and beauty touched elbows with the world of sport. The card was top-heavy with sensational events. The balconies were filled to overflowing. Enthusiasm was rampant.

Regular College Night.

Harvard was out, in overwhelming numbers, but anywhere in the hall one could start a rowdy cheer for Dartmouth, Yale, Exeter or Andover. Above everything else it was college night.

In the race for the Hunter cup, Kiviat was closely followed by Oscar Hedlund of the Brookline Gym, with F. S. Harmon of Dartmouth third. It was a great battle among the leading runners of the country.

Kiviat made a poor start, the bunch getting away in great shape with the New York star trailing. He hung on gamely until the half-mile mark. Then he let out.

In a half-raising sprint which brought the fans to their feet Kiviat forged to the front, getting the pole and forcing Hedlund to the bank. Hedlund forced the New Yorker on his outside but was unable to creep up on him. The great throng rose as a unit and cheered wildly as the New Yorker crossed the wire a winner.

Society Crowd Was Out.

All the folks whose faces are familiar at B. A. A. games were outin force, together with the rising generation. Among the young women present were noticed Miss Dorothy Forbes, Miss Helen Soule, Miss Marie Lee of Brookline, Miss Dorothy Mandell and Miss Dorothy Jordan. Percy Haughton, famous the country over as the Harvard football coach, was also prominent in the throng.

A big squad of police was on hand from the Back Bay station, but it was a good natured crowd and the policemen had little to do. The cheering, however, was reminiscent of the football field.

Details of the B. A. A. carnival, descriptions of the events, the summaries, etc., will be found in full on Page 3 of the General News, Section 3.

ARCHBISHOP RYAN DIES IN PHILADELPHIA AFTER LONG ILLNESS, AGED NEARLY 80

designed the lad for the church from the first, and while still in his teens he was entered in Carlow College, a theological school of great repute. Here the young man distinguished himself by graduating with high honors in 1852. Shortly thereafter he was ordained sub-deacon and moved to the United States to accept the chair of English Literature in the Carondelet Theological Seminary, in St. Louis, Mo.

His work soon gained the notice of his superiors and a few months after his arrival he was ordained a deacon. This honor was followed in 1853 by admittance to the priesthood, and he was assigned to the Cathedral. Here his work progressed as steadily as his popularity until he enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most popular clerics in the West.

It was Father Ryan who proposed and prosecuted schemes whereby the parish schools enjoyed lectures and addresses by prominent men, which were followed by discussions tending toward a broadening view of current events. So popular were his invitations and so interested did his superiors become that he was promoted to the post of rector.

Chaplain in War Prison.

About this time the Civil War broke out and the rector found a new field for his endeavors in acting as chaplain to the Gratiot Street Military Prison of St. Louis in conjunction with his other church work. Those troublous times found Father Ryan actively engaged in making the rounds of the prisons and hospitals administering consolation and overseeing the work of the Church. He was constantly at the call of the sick and wounded and lost no opportunity to help all who were in need of his services.

Besides his many works of charity and his manifold church duties the Archbishop found time to write two theological books, which gained a wide circulation among theologians. They are: "What Catholics Do Not Believe"; "The Cause of Modern Skepticism, Etc." and many other pamphlets and articles.

Tribute by Father Gasson.

Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College, gave to the AMERICAN reporter the following eulogy of the dead Archbishop:

In the death of Archbishop Ryan the church in America has sustained a great loss. He was a Prelate of the highest gifts, of broad experience, of rare eloquence, of wonderful administrative ability, of gracious manners and of apostolic humility. Possessed of a noble nature and of a deep piety, he was a man whose whole life was devoted to the spread of Christ's kingdom.

Throughout his entire career as a priest he always lived up to the highest standards and to those lofty aims which St. Paul prescribes for those who follow Christ in the sanctuary.

Praise from Mgr. O'Callaghan.

When Monsignor O'Callaghan of St. Augustine's, South Boston, heard the news of Archbishop Ryan's death from a reporter of the Sunday AMERICAN, he expressed the deepest sorrow. He dictated the following tribute to the memory of the deceased prelate:

The death of Archbishop Ryan is a great loss to the country and to the church. I don't know of a greater. Recently he preached a sermon in a western diocese that may well be called a most remarkable pronouncement. That sermon will stand as one of the greatest efforts of his life. No words of eulogy could be too exhaustive when one is speaking of Archbishop Ryan. No influence for good both for the country and for the church was greater than his. He lived his long life doing good for all, for priests and for people. And he has left behind him rich and golden memories. He was a great American. In his death his own beloved Ireland loses one of her staunchest and truest sons. The men and women of his race throughout the world will mourn to hear of his passing. May he rest in peace.

MAYOR FITZGERALD PROVES AGE IS 48

Records Made Him 46, but He Makes a Birthday Confession.

It came out yesterday when John F. Fitzgerald began the whirlwind celebration of another birthday that His Honor the Mayor had two years more than Father Time had been charging him with on the books.

The birthday brought mountains of flowers to City Hall. There was a number of pieces made up of forty-six roses each. Secretary Field counted two or three.

"Just right," said Richard, "forty-six!"

"Forty-six what?" asked Mr. Fitzgerald, between felicitations.

"Forty-six years," said Mr. Field, "your age!"

"I'm forty-eight; forty-eight to-day," said the Mayor.

They looked it up in the Municipal Register. Forty-six. They asked "Who's Who in America." "Who's Who," said forty-six.

"Well," said Mr. Fitzgerald, "I shall be glad to take those two years if they are coming to me, but I'm quite sure I've had them."

Blames It on Congress.

The City Registry was appealed to. Back came the official information that John F. Fitzgerald was born at No. 30 Ferry street, in the North End, February 11, 1863. Mr. Fitzgerald explained the common error of reference books and clippings by recollecting that a misprint, in the Congressional Record, when first he went to Congress, gave the date of his birth as 1865.

There was an ocean of callers at City Hall and there were some beautiful little birthday gifts. The daintiest consisted of a pair of lavender stockings, with cravat and 'kerchief to match. The Mayor wouldn't say much about this gift, even refusing the name of the giver.

"Trifle loud for Boston, anyhow," he said. He admitted that they may be come in it just at Palm Beach, and he leaves for Florida at 1 o'clock next Saturday morning with Mrs. Fitzgerald, Miss Rose Fitzgerald and Mr. and Mrs. John F. McDonald.

Remembered by Aged Woman.

The Mayor seemed to think a great deal of the pretty letter that came to him from Mrs. Laurancia Olivia Williams, of No. 665 Massachusetts avenue, South End. Mrs. Williams wrote:

"Dear Mr. Fitzgerald: Please accept my congratulations on your birthday, and may you be blessed with all that Heaven sends. Long life, long administration, and true friends! I am ninety years old myself, to-day."

When he reached the office at 10:30 o'clock Mr. Fitzgerald found a great basket of American Beauty roses on his desk. Dr. Laura A. C. Hughes called with a similar remembrance from the Professional Women's Club. James M. Dixon of Lynn, another best-wisher, observed that this was also the birthday of his son.

The Mayor's Itinerary.

8 A.M.—Mayor arose.

8:10 A. M.—Breakfasted with family.

8:30 A. M.—Talked over the telephone with Secretary Richard F. Field.

10:30 A. M.—Arrived at City Hall.

11 A. M.—Looked over morning mail and dictated letters to stenographer.

12:45 P. M.—Saw the reporters.

1:15 P. M.—Attended and presided over the dinner of the Mayors' Club and delivered address.

3:30 P. M.—Attended the meeting of the School Committee and the Schoolhouse Commissioners at the latters' office.

5 P. M.—Came back to City Hall and saw reporters.

7:45 P. M.—Left his home with his entire family for the B. A. A. Meet at Mechanics Building.

11:15 P. M.—Ate light lunch and went to bed.

Keeps Long Hours.

Between-times Mr. Fitzgerald told the reporters and some of his callers that he would dine with his family in Welles avenue last night for the first time on a week-day since he was last elected to the Mayoralty.

At a public meeting last week the Mayor admitted that since his last election he has never gone to bed on the same day he arose. His active day is seldom less than sixteen hours long, and he averages less than six hours sleep. He seldom leaves the City Hall before 8 p. m., and nobody relishes his mid-Winter vacation more than the hard-working members of his office staff.

"Fills in" at Lenox.

LENOX, Feb. 11.—David T. Dana, heir of the late Mrs. Richard Starr Dana, and son-in-law of Mrs. Dwight Collier, of No. 8 East Forty-eighth street, New York, is now acting as a teacher of the sixth grade in a Lenox public school. Dana is a member of the School Committee of Lenox. A teacher was obliged to leave her school because of death in her family and in the absence of all substitutes Dana took charge. He is a Princeton graduate, a former master of hounds of the Berkshire Hunt, and an all-around athlete.

PICTURES WANTED IN AMERICAN'S CONTEST

Contestants Are Expected to Send Photographs for Publication at Once.

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

CANDIDATES in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest are now invited to send in their photographs to the Contest Editor.

While you are getting out your photographs, Friend Candidates, please assist the Contest Editor by obeying the following instructions:

Send in good photographs, not tintypes, old battered photographs or photographs in any way unsuitable for newspaper purposes.

Put on the back of your photograph your name, address in full and your Contest District. Write this plainly. Still better, typewrite it. The best way of all is to typewrite it on a piece of paper and paste it on the back of the photograph.

If you send the photograph by mail, address it to AMERICAN Contest Editor, P. O. Box 227, Boston.

But if you bring it in person or send it by bearer, bring it to No. 272 Devonshire street, Boston, the headquarters of the Contest Editor.

Come on, then, with your photographs, you candidates. The more the merrier.

See the Advertisement.

Pay particular attention, when reading your AMERICAN to-day, to the four-column display advertisement by the Contest Editor on another page of this issue.

This advertisement is important. It contains, for instance, cuts of the capital prize and of some of the other splendid prizes in the $35,000 contest. The capital prize, you know, is an $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Charles.

The advertisement gives a list of the entire 1,000 prizes which are offered by the AMERICAN in this great contest, the most magnificent aggregation of prizes ever offered in a contest of this nature.

The advertisement will also give you again the list of the fifty-thee prizes offered in the Special February Contest. These fifty-three prizes are entirely additional to the $35,000 in prizes to be awarded in the main contest. The fifty-three prizes are solely for the fifty-three candidates, irrespective of districts, who poll the greatest number of votes BY SUBSCRIPTIONS between February 1st and February 28th, inclusive.

To-day is February 12. See how the month is passing. There are only sixteen more days left in which to forge ahead in the Special February Contest.

Remember, too, that every vote you get for the February Special Contest counts also toward piling up your standing in the main contest. Always bear that point in mind. All votes you get up to and including February 28 count in the February contest and in the main contest. You are helping yourself toward two prizes at the same time. It is an unusual opportunity, as one can readily see.

The Contest Editor has included, also, in his advertisement, the rules of the contest. Read them carefully, no matter if you have read them before. Read them again. Learn them so that you will not cause yourself unnecessary loss in votes by violating the rules. The rules are as few and as simply expressed as possible. But they are EXTREMELY IMPORTANT.

Be particularly careful to follow the rule about addressing all mailed matter for the Contest Department to P. O. Box 277, Boston. Do not mail anything to No. 272 Devonshire street, Boston. That is the place for you to BRING votes or subscriptions or photographs in person, or to call if you wish to see the Contest Editor.

And, speaking of seeing the Contest Editor, why don't you come in and see him? Every candidate who can do so ought to see the Contest Editor at least once during the run of this contest.

Face-to-face interviews help greatly. It is much easier to explain matters, to unravel any little point, by personal talk. A letter, or even a telephone communication, is less satisfactory.

The Contest Editor will be glad to see you, to talk with you. That's what he is here for. He can help you. He can give you ideas about getting votes and subscriptions, about planning your campaign, about systematizing your work in the contest. He can help you.

It is important to plan your vote-getting and subscription-getting to best advantage. A big contest like this should be no haphazard, hit-or-miss effort. Work intelligently and with system.

Another thing. Don't hold up your subscriptions till the last minute. If you have collected a number of subscriptions toward the special February offer, for instance, don't wait until February 26 or 27 before turning them in. By doing this you delay the delivery of the AMERICAN to your subscribers and you lose just so many votes. And every SUNDAY AMERICAN ballot counts for TEN votes, you know. See the point?

Subscribers—not contestants—receive two blank forms back by mail when you send in subscription orders with the requisite cash guarantee. Follow the rules in regard to those forms. Take them to your newsdealer. One is his order to deliver the AMERICAN to the subscriber. The other, a postcard, is to be filled out by the newsdealer and is then to be mailed to the Contest Department. Don't fill out the postcard yourself. Let the dealer attend to that. Follow the rules.

When you send in subscriptions fill the blanks out properly and legibly. The Contest Editor has no ambition to qualify as a hand-writing expert. Write plainly, please. On each subscription give subscriber's name, street and number, city or town and State.

In sending checks or money orders, remember that they must be properly endorsed and made payable to the order of the Boston AMERICAN.

Keep these superb prizes always in mind. Think of winning an $8,000 house and two lots, the capital prize.

Reflect, also, on the other big prizes. Look at District One, for instance. Its list of 294 prizes starts with a Stoddard-30 automobile, a costly, smooth-running, handsome machine.

Work—WORK—get more and more subscriptions to the SUNDAY AMERICAN. For subscriptions mean votes. And votes mean victory. And victory means—well, just look at that prize list again!

CHELSEA BOY IS ASPHYXIATED BY GAS

Seventeen-year-old Frederick Tyler of Chelsea was found dead from accidental gas asphyxiation yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francesco Giardiello, neighbors, to whose house the lad had gone after a quarrel with his parents the night before. His body was found by his mother, Mrs. Charles Tyler, who came in the morning to look for him.

Mr. and Mrs. Giardiello, who were married only a few months ago in Avon, were unconscious from gas. They were taken to the Frost Hospital. Last night it was said at the hospital that the husband would recover but that the young wife was still on the dangerous list.

The Tylers live at No. 200 Williams street, Chelsea. Friday night Frederick was scolded for some fault. The lad went to his room. He stole out of the house in his coat, sweater and underwear, and went to the home of the Giardiellos at No. 187 Williams street.

"Let's Buy a Waist at Houghton & Dutton's"

Three Great Waist Wonders

We introduce to the American readers, for the first time, "OUR OWN" Great Waist Specials. Waists of "Our Own" design, modeled to suit the special requirements of our patrons and made from "Our Own" specially selected materials in "Our Own" Factory, under "Our Own" supervision. We have already sold nearly 20,000 waists in three or four numbers alone. The reason for this immense sale is that no house in the city offers such wonderful values. And remember these great bargains are not offered for special sales only, but right along at the same low price, both in our store and by mail as well. If you want to dress well and at the same time be economical, buy your waist here.

Mail Orders Filled

The "Lady Vivian" Silk Waist

The reason we sell so vast a quantity of all our Special Waists, is that there is something distinctive about every one of them; something that makes each one so different from the others, that practically every woman needs them all, and, knowing the money saved by the transaction, sooner or later every woman is going to buy one. The distinctive feature of the "Lady Vivian" is its extra detached collar, which enables it to be worn for dressy occasions or home wear, as a Dutch neck waist, and also with a high collar. It is made of an excellent quality of silk messaline in plain blue and black, blue and white, black and white and brown and white stripes, and it is most effectively finished with dainty silk pipings and a charming embroidered yoke of exquisite colorings. It is a beautiful creation, actually worth $4. Our factory price is only 1.98

The "Eddysilk" Waist

This is the waist you have seen so many of your friends wearing and it has such a silky appearance and the patterns are so similar to those seen in silk foulards that you have wondered what it was made of, what it cost and where it could be bought. It is made of a serviceable, rich looking material called "Eddysilk," in a very smart tailored effect, the colorings being black and white and blue and white stripes, dots and small patterns; also in very handsome Persian effects. There are many times when you do not want to wear a very dressy waist, while at the same time you want to look well dressed, and you do not know what to put on. The "Eddysilk" just meets this want, and everybody can afford to buy one. It is actually worth $2.00. We supply it straight from the factory to the people at only.... 98c

The "Lady Muriel" Silk Waist

Mail Orders Filled

We would not like to appear in any way conceited about the matter, but we are bound to confess that we are somewhat proud, and we believe justly proud, of the exceeding popularity of this famous waist. It was one of our first productions. It is made of a superior quality of silk striped messaline, and we made it on lines that we believed would suit our patrons. The surprising sale of this waist has more than justified our belief that for elegance, quality and price it could not be approched by any other house in this city. The colors are blue and white, black and white and brown and white. We will have every size and color on our tables Monday, so that every one of our vast throng of Mill End Customers may secure one. These waists are actually worth $4.00 each. Our factory price is only.................. 1.98

FOSS SHUTS DOWN ON SALARY BILLS

Sad Disappointment in Store for Those Expecting More Pay or More Help.

A sad disappointment is said to be in store for men and women on the Massachusetts pay roll who believe that with Mr. Draper out of office this is the time to step up and ask for an increase in salary.

Governor Draper is said to have vetoed more salary bills than all the Governors who had preceded him in a dozen years. Governor Foss, if the Ways and Means Committee does not save him the trouble, will make his predecessor look like E. Z. Mark.

If the Legislature and the Governor should write their respective O. K.s on all the petitions and recommendations now filed on Beacon Hill, State and county expenses would be increased half a million dollars.

Some of the New Plans.

Some of the propositions which have been advanced include:

A new Commissioner of Industrial Inspection	$ 8,000
Milk Commissioner	5,000
72 Inspectorships, each $1,200 to	1,500
Salaries of Supreme Court Justices	10,000
Paying the Attorney-General	8,000
Suffolk County District-Attorney	8,000
Deer Island employees	1,200
Members of the House	1,000
State Senators	1,500

The proposed Milk Inspection Department will be discussed at a hearing on Tuesday. The $5,000 Commissioner will have two deputies, with some twenty inspectors at $1,200 apiece. Some of these inspectors would doubtless be transferred from other places in the State service, but the new department, it is said, would cost not less than $100,000 a year.

Factory Inspection.

The Commission on Factory Inspection has recommended taking the work of factory inspection from the District Police. The Department of Industrial Inspection might use many of the men now in the police service, but the plan calls for a Commissioner at from $6,000 to $8,000, two deputies at about $4,000, a registrar at about the same figure and inspectors from $1,200 to $1,500.

Then come the plain, every-day "increases," with all branches of the public service in the list from the porters in the State House to the justices of the Supreme Judicial Court. In cases where salary increases are not asked, authority is solicited to employ additional help.

The general public is also included, for one bill provides that all jurors shall be paid $3.00 per day instead of $1.00.

To offset the entire list of applications would take a column, but these cases are culled promiscuously from the docket.

Would Increase Justices.

Supreme Court: To increase salary of Chief Justice from $8,500 to $10,500; associate justices, from $8,000 to $10,000.

Superior Court: To increase the wage of the Chief from $7,000 to $8,500; associates, from $6,500 to $8,000. An increase of from $6,000 to $8,000 is sought for the State Attorney-General, and for the Suffolk County District Attorney an increase of from $5,000 to $8,000.

An increase of the salary of the secretary of the Boston Licensing Board from $3,000 to an amount to be fixed by the Governor and Council.

An increase of the salaries of clerks of courts, County Commissioners and County Treasurers, on the basis of the census, to be retroactive to last July. It is further provided that in the event of the population of such district having decreased no decrease shall take place in such salaries while the present incumbent holds the job.

State Police Department.

Here is what the State police chief wants in the clerical line alone. A new stenographer for himself, two new stenographers in the inspection department, and increases for the stenographers in the various divisions.

Permission is sought to increase the salaries of the justice and assistants in the Land Court to $8,000 each, from $6,000. Here are some others:

To increase first deputy secretary of State to $3,500.

The second clerk in the State treasury to $2,500.

The salary of second clerk in the State treasury to $1,500.

To start watchmen at State prison and reformatory at $800, to increase them to $1,000 and $1,200 after certain service, and to establish the salaries of turnkeys at $1,400.

To increase the salary of the assistant clerk of Hampden county to $2,400.

To increase salaries of assistant clerks of House and Senate to $2,500 each.

To increase salaries of female members State police to $1,500.

To increases salaries of medical examiners of Suffolk County to $4,500 each; associates to $1,500.

To increase salary of Charlestown municipal court justice to $4,000; clerk to $2,400; assistant clerk $1,000.

Assistant District Attorney.

To create an assistant district attorneyship in the Southeastern District.

To increase the salary of the register of probate in Middlesex to $5,000.

To increase the salaries of judges of probate for Middlesex to $6,000.

To increase the salary of the judge of the East Boston municipal court to $2,100.

Cashier State treasury to $2,500.

Salary of clerk who examines printing to $3,500.

To increase Suffolk probate judges to $7,000 each. Norfolk probate Judge to $5,000. Officer at West Roxbury municipal court to $1,500. Deputy warden and clerk at State prison and reformatory to $2,500 each.

Last, but not least, the members of the Legislature want increases for House members to $1,000 and for Senators to $1,500.

RUTH LAWRENCE, WHO IS BETROTHED TO LANSING B. REED.

MISS RUTH LAWRENCE.

BISHOP LAWRENCE'S DAUGTHER TO WED

SOCIETY circles of the Back Bay learned for the first time yesterday that Miss Ruth Lawrence, the charming and talented daughter of Bishop and Mrs. William Lawrence of No. 122 Commonwealth avenue, is betrothed to Lansing P. Reed, son of Rev. Edward A. Reed, D. D., a prominent Congregational minister, residing in Holyoke.

Mr. Reed resides in New York where he has an extensive law practice. He is a graduate of Yale in the class of 1904. Miss Lawrence is the third daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Lawrence. Her two older sisters are Mrs. Harold Peabody, formerly Miss Mariam Lawrence, and Mrs. Morton L. Fearey, who was Julia Lawrence.

It was intended to announce the engagement at a tea yesterday afternoon in the apartments of Mrs. Harold Peabody in the Hotel Charlesgate, but this was given up on account of the recent death of George Lee Peabody, an uncle of Mr. Peabody.

BATTLE IN COURT ABOUT YOUNG LAD

NORTHAMPTON, Feb. 11.—While his father and his foster mother are contesting for his custody in the Probate Court here, William M. Jennings, fifteen years old, is pursuing his studies, apparently unconcerned, at Williston Academy, Easthampton, although he is bitterly opposed to the desire of his father to take him from his foster-mother. Judge William G. Bassett of the Hampshire County Probate Court has heard the testimony and arguments in the case, and his decision is expected early next week. Young Jennings objects to making his home with his father and stepmother. His mother died when he was an infant, and since then he has made his home with Mrs. Annie Dwyer of Easthampton.

MUTT TO VISIT AT A BROCKTON SHOW

BROCKTON, Feb. 11.—Mutt and Jeff will be the features of the Big Y. M. C. A. minstrel show on March 6. Bud Fisher's characters will be portrayed by Carl Johnson, who will impersonate the clever-witted Augustus Mutt, while Arthur H. Cole will appear as Little Jeff. A sextette, which includes Isador Saltine, K. Fred Pitcher, Carl Anderson, Waldemar Jacobson, Fritz Lindelog, and Chester Swanson, will sing several selections. Allison G. Baldwin has been chosen interlocutor and the ends will be: Carl Anderson, Chester Swanson and Harry F. White, bones; K. Fred Pitcher, Carl Lindelog and Henry Johnson, tambos. Among the soloists are Eddie M. Davis, William Yeomans, Alfred E. Holmes, Marlow Hannah, Joseph Hall, Edson F. Tilden, Jr., Allison G. Baldwin, Carl Johnson, Maurice Cole and the ends.

Story of the King's Wedding Is Revived

Liberator Renews Report About Monarch, and Editor James Exiles Himself.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The story that King George of England was morganatically married at Gibraltar while Prince of Wales, was renewed again to-day in the Liberator, notwithstanding the fact that Edward Mylius, the writer of the first article, was recently sentenced to a year in London for libel. The Liberator today publishes an anonymous letter from a Catholic priest who declared he performed the ceremony. By this action Editor Edward H. James of the Liberator has exiled himself from England. In addition to the letter he printed to-day an eight-column criticism of Mylius's trial.

Opium Plot Revealed.

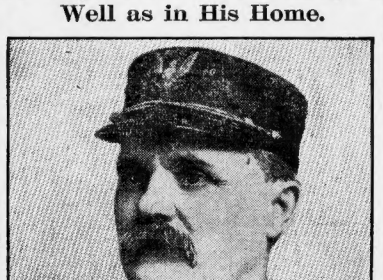
SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 11.—Plots for the smuggling of opium on a scale never before encountered by Federal officers have just been discovered in secret service agents, who have been investigating the traffic here under the direct supervision of the treasury department.

How to Get Rid of Pimples

It is truly remarkable how Cadum, the new remedy, causes pimples to disappear. Bad cases are frequently helped in a week, and sometimes even sooner. Cadum causes pimples to dry up and fall off, leaving the skin as soft and smooth as a baby's. Pimples are a disease of the skin, and are not caused by bad blood, as many people suppose. Cadum helps the most annoying and disfiguring facial blemishes because it can be applied direct to the pustule, and its soothing, antiseptic and healing powers stop the inflammation at once. Cadum is equally good for rash, blotches, scaly skin, chafings, eczema, sores, erysipelas, ulcers, insect bites, etc. 10c and 25c per box. At all druggists.

COL. HAMILTON

His Experience in the Army as Well as in His Home.



COL. HAMILTON.

Col. Arthur L. Hamilton, of the Seventh Ohio Volunteers, writes as follows:

"My command used your Peruna during our service in the Spanish-American War, and I will say this, that if the War Department records are consulted, it will be found that the casualties in my regiment were less than in any other regiment of the Army Corps while at Camps Alger, Meade and Bushnell. The total death in my regiment during the seven months' service, were seven out of a total number of 1400. I, of course, cannot help but think that Peruna certainly was a great benefit to my command."

In a later letter, Col. Hamilton says:

"I have used Peruna myself and in my family for the last seven years. I have already written you about the good results I experienced with your remedy during the Spanish-American War."

Mr. Samuel McKinley, 1215 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "I can honestly say I owe my life to Peruna.

"Traveling from town to town, having to go into all kinds of badly heated stores and buildings, sometimes standing up for hours at a time while plying my trade as auctioneer, it is only natural that I had colds frequently. Last December I contracted a severe case, which, through neglect on my part, settled on my lungs. When almost too late I began doctoring, but without avail, until I heard of Peruna. It cured me, so I cannot praise it too highly."

Mr. W. J. Harper, Lehigh, Cleveland Co., Arkansas, writes: "I do not know how to express my thanks to you for the good you have done me in treating me for catarrh.

"I was a great sufferer from the effect of chronic catarrh of the head and nose. I was continually hawking and spitting, and I had entirely lost my sense of smell. I had tried various remedies, but nothing did me any good.

"At last I tried Peruna as a last resort, and I am thankful to say that after using ten bottles of Peruna I am once more well of catarrh of the head and nose."

FIFIELD WILL CASE COMES UP MONDAY

The will of the late George W. Fifield, once Mayor of Lowell, will be offered for probate in the Middlesex County courthouse in East Cambridge to-morrow afternoon. No contest is now expected, although the testator left the bulk of his estate to his housekeeper, Mrs. Dora A. Chase, and by a codicil executed for long before his death cut a $50,000 bequest to his sister, Miss Addie M. Fifield of Belmont, N. H., down to $1,000. It is reported that an agreement has been reached whereby the sister will enter no contest and that she will be given at least $40,000 from her brother's estate, which is estimated to be between $500,000 and $800,000 in value.

Puts New Life In Hair and Scalp

(From the Fashion Review.)

"The old disagreeable method of washing the scalp is giving way to dry shampooing, which is easier and quicker, equally as cleansing, and does not leave the scalp dry and hard or make the hair brittle or stringy. The dry shampoo promotes a healthy, vigorous condition and gives the hair a bright, glossy and fluffy appearance.

"An excellent dry shampoo can be made by mixing 4 ounces of orris root with 4 ounces of thenox. Once a week sprinkle a little of this mixture on the head, then brush out carefully and it will remove dust and excess oil. If the scalp is dry and scaly, a few treatments will make it soft and healthy.

"This is worth trying if you want fluffy, luxuriant hair, or care to avoid the danger of catching cold that one is exposed to when taking an ordinary wet shampoo. There, too, thenox is said to be a genuine hair grower."

MAYOR AFTER SHAW EXECUTORS' TAXES

Mayor Fitzgerald has had the board of principal assessors investigate the personal taxes paid by the three executors under the will of the late Quincy A. Shaw. The Mayor believes that Francis C. Welch, Robert Herrick and Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., the executors, escaped payment of taxes to the city on millions of taxable securities through a clause inserted in their first report made to the probate court. The city has since tried to collect the taxes and the matter is now pending in the Supreme Judicial Court.

Since the executors received $210,000 for their services the Mayor was anxious that the city assessing department levy taxes on them for the share of the amount each received. The reply of the assessors to the Mayor's request for this information is as follows:

"Sir: In reply to your request for information regarding the personal taxes assessed upon the individuals who served as executors under the will of the late Quincy A. Shaw, would say that Robert P. Herrick, one of the executors, is not a resident of Boston; Francis C. Welch was taxed on $40,000 in 1909, and Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., was taxed on $25,000.

"Prior to fixing the tax rate for 1910, knowing that they were entitled, as executors, to a large fee, we called each of them (Mr. Welch and Mr. Shaw, Jr.), on $100,000. On October 20 Mr. Shaw appeared and made a statement under oath, of $69,300, to which fifty per cent was added, so that he paid a tax on $63,300.

"After the rate was declared, information came to us that the three executors received $210,000, but we have no actual knowledge as to how that was divided among them.

"CHARLES E. FOLSOM,
"Secretary Board of Assessors."

This fact at the makers and manufacturers, has led them to design waists for those who wear CORSETS as well as those who wear CORSET WAISTS as they are made.

BAR AND BOTTLE BILL IS DISCUSSED BY FRIEND AND OPPONENT OF MEASURE

THE first hearing on the repeal of the "Bar and Bottle" bill will be held before the Legislative Committee on Liquor Laws at the State House, March 1. A second hearing will be held two days later. The AMERICAN to-day prints arguments for and against the repeal of the bill. George C. Dempsey, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Massachusetts Allied Liquor Trades, has written his views on why the bill should be repealed. Representative Robert N. Turner, of Waltham, who led the fight last year for the passage of the bill, tells why the bill should remain a law.

By GEORGE C. DEMPSEY,

Chairman of Executive Committee of Massachusetts Allied Liquor Trades.

The so-called "bar and bottle" bill is prohibitive legislation; or, more mildly, legislation "tending to Prohibition," which is justified only in the theory that it makes for sobriety among those living in Prohibition districts.

Now, let us see what has become of State-wide Prohibition in New England. Every one of the New England states has tried State-wide Prohibition, and with the exception of the State of Maine, which is now preparing to abandon Prohibition and substitute the well-regulated license system, all of these States have discovered the folly of their early dreams.

Although it has taken Maine longer than it did other States to discover the difference between Prohibition which did not prohibit and a proper regulation of the liquor traffic, which is really what the people of that State desired, the lesson has been brought home with no less force, and we shall soon hear of Maine emerging from the cloud of dust which it raised about itself.

Prohibition was accepted originally by the good-thinking people of our State because its advocates promised that it would promote temperance. After a sufficient period of time the same good-thinking people demanded the repeal of the Prohibition law because it was producing just the opposite effect—promoting intemperance. The State of Maine is realizing this to-day, and that accounts for the general demand throughout the State for the repeal of the Prohibition law.

Let us glance at a few figures which may Cambridge is our banner no-license city! ting for this purpose figures taken from the annual report of the Police Commissioner of Boston showing the number of arrests for drunkenness during the year 1907. This compilation of figures is accompanied by a statement of the residences of the persons arrested, and combining those figures with other figures contained in the annual report of the State Board of Prison Commissioners for the same year, we are able to determine how many persons from any city were arrested for drunkenness.

A glance at the Police Commissioner's report tells us that 2,100 persons having a residence in Cambridge were arrested for drunkenness in Boston in 1907. The Prison Commissioners' report tells us that 1,756 persons were arrested in Cambridge for the same cause. The records show, then, that a total of 3,856 Cambridge persons were arrested for drunkenness during the year 1907, or 39.6 persons for every 1,000 of population in that city. And somewhere I have heard, as possibly you have, that Cambridge is our banner nolicense city!

No-License Not Sobriety.

Carrying this illustration so as to include other nearby no-license cities which like to feel that they are in the banner class of temperance cities, we find:

	Arrested at home.	Arrested in Boston.	Total arrests.	Per 1000 pop'tion.
Quincy	579	618	1397	40.8
Somerville	963	975	1438	28.1
Everett	329	516	845	29.0

The above table shows that no-license does not mean sobriety. Compare the number of arrests per 1000 population in the cities just mentioned with those in some of the license cities for the same year: Holyoke, 22.12; Fall River, 21.8; New Bedford, 19.3; Marlboro, 17.0; Lawrence, 31.6.

Glance at Lowell's record covering a period of several years, remembering that Lowell is a common centre, surrounded by a number of no-license towns, and that the number of arrests for drunkenness there include many non-residents: 1902, 41.0; 1903, 39.0; 1904, 37.0; 1905, 37.0; 1906, 26.0; 1907, 36.0; 1908, 33.0; 1909, 32.0.

The conclusion is irresistible—conditions are more conducive to temperance in licensed communities than in no-license communities.

And still—and this is a very important consideration—the so-called bar and bottle bill applies only to the licensed communities. This query is pertinent:

Would it not be more sensible to propose some kind of legislation that would apply to the districts where inbriety is greater, rather than to districts where sobriety is the greater?

The great bulk of the anti-saloon vote, which supports Prohibition legislation, comes from the so-called "dry" cities and towns. "I come from a 'dry' district, and I must vote against liquor or fail of re-election," is a State House refrain with which we are all familiar.

The Moat and the Beam.

This is the tolerance of the fair-minded Christian voters who wield the rod of public opinion in these districts. I gently and respectfully call their attention to the parable of the moat and the beam.

If I thought the advocates of the "bar and bottle" bill were in the right, if I thought this piece of legislation would tend to promote sobriety, I would not be urging its repeal. The drunkard is the curse of my business, an injury, not a benefit to it. I believe that drunkenness is a disease, and I do not believe that it can be cured with restrictive legislation.

Prohibitive and restrictive laws have done much towards promoting intemperance, as the experience Massachusetts has had with State-wide Prohibition will show. Everybody knows the story; if not, the State records, newspaper files and libraries are filled with evidence to bear out this point, and this is easily accessible to those who would have ideas, rather than feelings, as a basis of their decision on a matter of such wide-spread interest as the temperance question.

What reason is there to believe that there is good prophecy in the claim of the advocates of the bar and bottle bill—that it will decrease drunkenness? None, whatever. We have only the assurance of Messrs. Wood, Johnson and Hugo, and the sincerity of the latter may be doubted, as his liquor business would be likely to be benefited by such a change in the law.

It is just as reasonable to believe that they may be right in their present contention as that certain other like gentlemen were right when, in 1855, they promised that the "Maine law" would be a panacea for all evils of liquor—and no more so.

On the other hand, there is ample evidence that the so-called bar and bottle bill will not promote sobriety. Many persons say it should be given a fair trial, for a year, at least. It has been tried. The licensing boards of the State, ever since their existence, have had the power at their discretion to separate the sale of liquor by the glass and by the bottle.

The licensing board of Worcester caused this law to become operative in that city for some years (ten years, at least), a sufficient period, almost anyone will allow, to determine whether it promotes sobriety or not.

Do the advocates of this law—a law compelling licensing boards to do that which already have the power to do at their discretion—bring forward any facts or figures to prove that it has accomplished in Worcester what they claim it will accomplish if put into general operation throughout the State? None, whatever, at least, that I am aware of.

They know all about the comparative statistics of drunkenness. There is plenty of evidence of that in every local option fight, and in the city of Worcester, too. If the Anti-Saloon League agents have any statistics that show there has been a tendency towards sobriety under the operation of the law in Worcester, that it has helped the true cause of temperance, they have not presented the figures to the public.

Twenty-two cities of this State have been "wet" during the greater part of the past ten years, one operating under the separation of the glass and the bottle, and twenty-one under the non-separation of the glass and the bottle. A comparison of the records of these cities as contained in the prison commissioners' reports during this period will show that there has been a stronger tendency towards sobriety in those cities where the licensing boards did not enforce the separation of the glass and the bottle.

As a matter of fact, some eighteen or nineteen cities of the twenty-two which have been "wet" during the greater part of the past ten years, and operating under the non-separation of the glass and the bottle, have better records for sobriety than has the city of Worcester, operating under a law which it was promised would promote temperance!

CALLS THE BAR AND BOTTLE BILL BLOW TO DRUNKENNESS

REPRESENTATIVE ROBERT N. TURNER,

Who Led Fight for Bar and Bottle Bill in the Legislature Last Year.

Drunkenness is acknowledged by all to be one of our greatest social evils. The Bar and Bottle law is a direct blow at the evil of drunkenness. It separates the wholesale and retail departments of the liquor trade and is only a natural and proper perfection of the Massachusetts system of regulating the saloon. Such separation is entirely for the best public interest, as any combination of these two branches of the trade develops a tendency in the retail cusomer to purchase liquor on the wholesale plan.

When the present local option law was passed, there were created seven separate classes of licenses, each with its purpose of filling demands for the sale of liquor in the community at various times and places. It was not contemplated that licenses of any two classes should be exercised together upon the same premises, but that the wholesale and retail features of the business should be separate and distinct.

Otherwise a class of licenses would have been created providing for such combination in some such language as in the pending measures introduced in this General Court for the purpose of repealing the Bar and Bottle law before it goes into actual operation.

It was some years after our present local option law went into effect before it was discovered that there was nothing to prevent a liquor dealer from exercising two licenses of different classes in the same establishment, and the policy of granting wholesale and retail licenses together was thereafter put into operation by the acts of local licensing boards following the lead of the Boston board.

Within three years from the time that this policy went into general effect in Boston the arrests for drunkenness increased approximately 100 per cent. The fact that the figures have shown no such astonishing increase within any other three years under our present law, either before or after this policy went into effect, is proof in itself that the double license system means increased intoxication.

At present there are, roughly speaking, about 700 operating solely under double licenses and about 175 operating solely under fourth class or wholesale licenses. It is probable that the operation of the Bar and Bottle law would increase the number of the latter class to about 300, while reducing the number of first class, or retail, places to less than 600.

Two essential points to be here noted are, first. There are too many saloons in the crowded tenement districts and near the North and South Stations. This law will relieve the pressure at both points. Second: When practically every saloon has also a wholesale license there are far too many places where liquor is sold by the bottle and pitcher. This branch of the trade ought to stand on its own feet and should not be forced under the eyes of every poor family in the city. The bar and bottle law accomplishes this result. It will also decrease the granting of licenses in the residential parts of the city where the citizens least desire to have saloons placed.

The bar and bottle law will be a benefit to every city and town in the State, whether it is now under license or no-license. For the license community its operation will mean that the practice, which has for years been followed, of getting men half drunk by the glass and then when they are in such irresponsible condition urging upon them "bottled goods" of an amount and quality to lead to a prolonged debauch, can no longer continue. Even in a case where a man who has begun his drinking at the bar finally concludes to buy "bottled goods" for continued drinking, it would be much harder for him to get them, as he would be obliged to pass out into the open air and go some distance under observation before entering a wholesale establishment, and, if by the time he reaches the latter place he has developed evidence of intoxication, the licensee will admit him at his own risk; while in many cases the man will have changed his intention of purchasing more liquor before reaching the wholesale house.

The result will be that many more men will return home without such "bottled goods" than is now the case, and they will, in an increased number of cases, recover from the effects of what they have consumed in time to go to their work the next morning.

It also means for license communities that the "growler" trade, so-called, in pitchers, cans, etc., will be confined to the more respectable and comparatively few and scattered wholesale houses, where the women, who do much of this sort of purchasing, will not be exposed to contact with a large number of men who are drinking at the open bar.

For no-license communities, where, on an average, nearly half the men arrested for drunkenness are found to have bottles in their possession, it means a decrease in such arrests and in the amount of whiskey consumed in the home by those who have begun their debauch in the saloons of adjoining license places and have extended the influence of those saloons by the use of "bottled goods" into street cars, railroad trains, and finally the home, where it continues, many times, for several days.

By making less easy such occurrences as that just described, the Bar and Bottle law will be a help to the working man who has not intended to indulge in such debauches when beginning to drink at the open bar, in that he will have recovered his working ability by the time that his shop or other place of employment opens the next morning.

To the employer of labor it means increased output of whatever he is producing, in that he will find the number of his absentees owing to the use of liquor reduced and will find that his men who are present will have much clearer brains to guide them in their work.

Some of the Ice Carnival Performers Whose Feats Yesterday Won Trophies at Lexington

10,000 PEOPLE SEE ICE CARNIVAL SPORTS

WHAT we got yesterday was about as much like Winter as anything we seem likely to get, so they pulled off the Lexington Ice Carnival, out at Twin Elm Farm, and everybody for miles around was happy.

Fairly reasonable weather came yesterday and the Ice Carnival proved well worth waiting for. There were 5,000 on the six-acre Carnival plot in the afternoon and fully 10,000 in the evening. Governor Foss was the star feature, but Uncle Sam sent along a detail of fifteen men from the arsenal at Watertown, under Captain Horsfall, and Commissioner O'Meara contributed fifteen more from Station One, under Sergeant Barry. The soldiers from Watertown fired the Governor's salute of seventeen guns. The bluecoats made a fine appearance and had a delightful visit, for there was little else for them to do.

Brilliant Illumination.

The carnival was held first to give everybody a good time and secondly to help swell the armory fund of the Lexington Minute Men, who wear the Continental costume and are a fine credit to the town. In both respects the affair was a great success and there was much cheering and some regret when, at ten o'clock in the evening, the final set piece of fireworks was set off and the great crowd saw a 100 by 40 feet representation of what the M. M. Armory will look like when it is finished.

Mayor Gauerin of Montreal and Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston were unavoidably absent, but Governor Foss had the time of his official life. He dined in the great cave and he sa wall the sideshows, but they couldn't tempt him to look at he toboggan slide.

Among the novelties were the fancy exhibition skating of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Baker and the performance of Gordon H. Thompson of the Boston 1915 Skating Club, who jumped over nine barrels on skates.

While a great crowd was stil watching Thompson, open-mouthed, Harry Nyeius of Arlington jumped over four barrels backwards. Adolph Olsen, of Berlin, N. H., was a handy winner in the ski race. Later he thrilled the crowd with exhibition jumping on skis, turning a complete somersault in mid-air.

These were the chairmen of committees: Executive, J. Willard Hayden, Jr., of Newbury street; entertainment, James Floyd Russell; juvenile, Adjutant George F. Reed; civic reception, George E. Briggs; military reception, Major Alfred Pierce; transportation, Edward W. Taylor; sports, J. Chester Hutchinson.

The Summary:

Curling match—Won by Brae-Burn Country Club, defeating Brookline Country Club 11 to 10.

Snow shoe race, 220 yards for boys, under 20—Won by Phillip Wood of Arlington; second, Russell Briggs. Time—1m. 10s.

Same for boys under 15—Won by Edward Goulding; second, Winthrop Wood. Time—1m.

Obstacle race, 150 yards, over 4 snow walls—Won by Winthrop Wood; second, Phillip Wood. Time—50s.

Ski race, about 3 miles—Won by Adolf Olsen; second, F. Lungard. Time—8m.

Jump for distance, amateurs—Won by Samuel Olend, 38 feet.

Exhibition ski jump by Adolf Olsen—Distance 15 feet.

Fancy exhibition skating—Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Baker.

Police Chief Removed.

BEVERLY, Feb. 11.—Mayor Dodge removed Chief of Police William A. Ferguson from office and appointed as his successor Patrolman F. Walter Woodbury. Chief Ferguson has been head of the local police fourteen years. His administration of the affairs of the department was one of the issues of the recent mayoral campaign. Chief Woodbury is fifty-two years old. He was appointed to the force in 1897.

MUSIC LEADS TO STEVENS ROMANCE

PORTLAND, Feb. 11.—Between the lines of a recently published and commonplace item in a New York newspaper stating that Samuel Augustus Stevens of Portland, Me., and Florence McKay Mosher of New York had taken out a marriage license, reads an interesting romance that originated in beautiful Casco Bay.

Mr. Stevens is a patron of music and art, and in Miss Mosher he found a woman of high ideals and similar tastes.

Honest Statement of Well Known Citizen

An advertisement of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, which I saw in the St. Albans Messenger some time ago, induced me to give your remedy a fair trial. I was then suffering from terrible pains in the small of my back. The pain was usually greatest during the morning, and often when I attempted to arise from my bed to go to work I found I could not do so without the assistance of some member of my family. I am very grateful for the good your great remedy has done for me.

I thought I would have to use much more Swamp-Root than I did, in order to get well, but am absolutely cured of my kidney trouble and now without the slightest pain after using only seven bottles. Was cured about six months ago, and though I do heavy work in the shop where I have been employed for the past forty-four years, have had no reoccurrence of the trouble or pain in the slightest degree.

I am doubly thankful for this, and while now an old man, I again feel the strength of my youth, thanks to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. Many others also use it to as good advantage as I have.

Very truly yours,
JOHN FRAZIER,

Don't go around with a humiliating, disgusting mass of pimples and blackheads on your face. BROOKLINE WOMAN IS SUED FOR GOWNS

More Than $1,700 Charged to Mrs. Chester D. Coran, in Seventeen Months.

How many Boston women spend more than $1,700 in seventeen months on gowns alone.

This was the amount of bills contracted by Mrs. Chester D. Coram of Brookline, who was cited into the Poor Debtors' court yesterday under action brought by Mrs. Retta C. Thomas of No. 149A Tremont street, her gownmaker.

Mrs. Thomas's bill for gowns made for Mrs. Coram between October, 1906, and March, 1908, amounts to $1,725.47. Mrs. Coram is credited as having paid $829 on this up to April, 1908. Mrs. Thomas now seeks to recover the balance of $896.47. With damages and costs the total amount now sought by Mrs. Thomas is $1,061.41. Mrs. Coram's assertion that she is unable to pay this sum has resulted in the present poor debtor proceedings.

Mrs. Coram's husband, Chester D. Coram, is the son of Joseph A. Coram, who has been a conspicuous figure in the copper market for years.

In 1909 Mrs. Thomas was granted an execution against Mrs. Coram at Dedham. Last December a citation was issued. Last week a constable obtained service of the citation by going to No. 3 Reservoir court, Brookline, at 7 o'clock in the morning. Mrs. Coram was in, and service was made.

BROOKLINE ICE CARNIVAL.

Picturesque Entertainment Given on Country Club Pond.

Japanese lanterns and colored electric lights strung out over the ice pond in Clyde Park in connection with the second of the Winter's carnivals at the Brookline Country Club last night, made the place look like a fairy palace. More than 200 persons were present.

The festivities started at 8 o'clock and continued until 10, after which a luncheon was served in the club house.

Some of those present were: Joseph Walker, Jr., C. F. Cutler, C. L. Edgar, A. L. Thorndike, E. A. Taft, John L. Grandin, W. T. Winslow, W. S. Grendin, W. S. Youngman, F. R. Johnson, E. W. Steadman, George Clark, G. F. Brown, James Davis, Charles Davis, Jr., Alexander Brown, W. H. Clarkson, William Reed, C. B. Kellar, Dr. C. P. Robbins, E. L. Leyland, Dr. J. O'Neil and Osborne Howes.

Quick Relief From Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and It Costs Nothing to Try.

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive, home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty-six years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of these. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased mucous membranes and arrests the foul discharge, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach, as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 202 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

TWO THIRDS OF SENATE ARE FOR RECIPROCITY

petition with our neighbor gives sufficient tariff. The economic question can safely be disregarded, but the moral and friendly results to follow from the opening of the doors between us are incalculable.

"I have never known a subject so universally favored in and around New York. The Chamber of Commerce passed a vote unanimously in favor of it. I think the Produce Exchange vote also was unanimous. I note this morning two other societies are registered in favor of it. I talked with President McKinley on his way to make the great speech in Buffalo which the President has quoted, and rejoice that he recognized that conditions have changed; that we have no more infant industries needing protection.

"I expect beet sugar from this because it is not determined whether we can produce a home supply cheaper than we can import or not. Our friend, Secretary Wilson, thinks he is going to demonstrate that we can. I hope so. Even then the supply of the West would be protected by the cost of inland transportation. I see great results certain to follow from this friendly agreement between ourselves and our fellow Americans north of the line.

"With renewed congratulations, always very truly yours,

"ANDREW CARNEGIE."

LEGISLATURE HEARS TAFT IN SPRINGFIELD

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 11.—President Taft struck another sledge-hammer blow for Canadian reciprocity here to-day. In a speech before the members of the Illinois Legislature he issued warning that the policy of a protective tariff hinged upon the approval of the agreement reached between American and Canadian representatives.

"The very exercise of the policy depends upon our abolition of tariff where it is not really needed, under the principle of the last Republican platform," he declared. "If we persist in retaining it in these times of high prices and gradually exhausting food supply, and base our retention upon protection principles, we shall rouse an opposition that will know no moderation and will not cause radical economic changes until it has removed from the statute books the last trace of a protective tariff."

The President said in part:

The President's Address.

"I thank you for this opportunity to address you. I am honored by your invitation, and I hope I shall not violate the proprieties of the occasion if I ask your attention to legislation now pending in the Congress of the United States, which I regard of nation-wide and most critical importance. I refer to the so-called Canadian reciprocity agreement.

"The Payne tariff law contained what is known as the 'maximum and minimum' tariff clause, by which the President was authorized and directed to investigate into the tariff duties and trade restrictions imposed by each country with which the United States had dealings, in order to determine whether these tariff duties or trade restrictions were discriminating against the United States and her imports and trade, as compared with the duties and trade restrictions imposed against other countries. This led me, through the State Department, and with the assistance of Secretary Knox and experts whom he summoned, to an investigation of the tariff duties of Canada, and the negotiations thus brought about were carried to a successful conclusion by the assurance on our part that we would be glad to take up further negotiations, looking to further reductions of duties on both sides in the form of a reciprocity treaty.

"I Am a Protectionist."

"I am a protectionist. That is, I believe that there are certain industries in this country which need the encouraging effect of a tariff upon imports from foreign countries to enable them to pay good wages and furnish a reasonable profit to those who engage in them.

"There was a time when leading Republicans thought that there was no danger of having a tariff higher than necessary to protect any industry. But the temptation to combine by which the price could be controlled and thus the excessive tariff taken advantage of, led to a modification of the protection theory and to a declaration that the protection of any industry ought not to exceed in the tariff imposed more than the difference between the cost of production abroad, the cost of production here, and enough to give a fair profit to the domestic producer or manufacturer.

"This limitation of the protection theory necessarily took away any grounds for a tariff between this country and any country in which the conditions of productions were substantially the same.

"A reciprocity agreement is give and take, and my impression is that when you examine closely this agreement you will congratulate yourselves that we were able to make one that covered so wide a range of subjects.

"The criticism that it is a manufacturer's agreement, as far as it is a suggestion that we are prompted by manufacturers to avoid reductions on any of their goods, is wholly unfounded.

"The criticism, in so far as it points to a limited scope of the agreement with reference to reductions on manufactured goods, is due to the fact that already stated that Canada has herself a system of protection, that she fears the competition of our larger and better organized industries and that she could not hope to secure a confirmation of the agreement by the Parliament, if the reduction in duties on manufactured goods was made any wider.

"The truth is, as between Canada and ourselves, a reciprocity agreement must of necessity relate more to agricultural products than to manufactures. Here we stand upon more of an equality. Here in our three thousand miles of border we shall import agricultural products from Canada to the United States at one point and export from the United States to Canada of the same agricultural products at another.

"In other words, the great benefit of this treaty is the profit in mutual exchange that will come in respect to the agricultural products of both. I do not wish to minimize the advantage that Canada has given us by this treaty in the reduction on manufactured articles.

"We already export into Canada the greatest variety of manufactured articles and merchandise over the tariff wall that she has raised—$212,000,000 out of a total of imports into the country from close where of $375,000,000. Those reductions on manufactured goods are quite certain to increase this proportion and to enlarge the control which the United States is likely to have over their market for manufactured goods.

"But the farmer says that he is entitled to protection as much as the manufacturer. Under the principle of protection laid down in the platform, that depends upon the question whether the cost of production is different in Canada from what it is in the United States; and, speaking in large terms, the conditions are the same. If anything, with respect to the agricultural products, the United States has the great advantage, because the products of its soil are of much greater variety, and the use of the soil can be diversified much more profitably than in Canada.

The President then described in detail the basis of agreement in the treaty and the various reductions that have been made in import duties by Canada and the United States. He described how Illinois farmers and manufacturers would benefit by reciprocity. Continuing, he said:

"The increase of our population and the reduction of our farm exports are going on so rapidly that unless a great increase in production is brought about within our borders we shall soon consume all that we raise and shall need a source of food supply like that of Canada, right at our doors. We shall be blind, indeed, if we reject this golden opportunity to add to the strength and virility of our country by thus increasing our self-supporting capacity. We do not annex Canada politically, but she and we do become united commercially in such a way as to add great strength to both.

"There are those conservative protectionists who hang back from an approval of this agreement on the ground that it is a departure from the principles of protection, and is the opening wedge to let in free trade. My own view is that no step could be taken more in the interests of a reasonable policy of protection than the approval of this treaty. The very existence of the policy depends on our abolition of the tariff where it is not really needed under the principle of the last Republican platform.

Warning to High Tariff Men.

"If we persist in retaining it in these times of high prices and gradually exhausting food supply, and base our retention on protection principles, we shall rouse an opposition that will know no moderation and will not cease radical economic changes until it has removed from the statute book the last trace of a protective tariff.

"That is why I am so strongly in favor of an expert tariff commission or board. I want the evidence upon which a proper and reasonable protective tariff may be determined and a just one and if the existing schedules are too high that they should be lowered to the measure declared in the Republican platform. No one familiar with the conditions can be blind to the fact that duties against Canadian products are not within this rule as to the measure of protection.

"We have taken up these things that are involved in a Canadian reciprocity treaty because opportunity offered. Now is the accepted time. Now Canada is in the need. She is at the parting of the ways. Shall she be an isolated country, as much separated from us as if she were across the ocean, or shall her people and our people profit by the proximity that our geography furnishes and stimulates the trade across the border that nothing but a useless, illogical and unnecessary tariff wall creates?"

LONGYEAR HEIRESS WHOSE WEDDING IS SET FOR TUESDAY

MISS JUDITH F LONGYEAR

A SIMPLE ceremony and an utter lack of ostentation will attend the wedding of Miss Judith Folsom Longyear, youngest daughter of John M. Longyear, of Brookline, to John M. Richardson Lyeth, a New York lawyer.

The wedding will take place in the Longyear mansion on Fisher Hill, the house made famous by having been torn down in Marquette, Mich., and transported stone by stone to Brookline, there to be set up again as one of the costliest and handsomest residences in that town of many mansions.

Mr. Longyear became a many-times millionaire by the sale of his iron ore lands in Michigan to the Steel Trust, but he and every member of his family continued to show a very democratic spirit. The wedding consequently will be almost as simple in its details as if the bride's father still was a prospector in the ore fields.

The mansion will be simply but effectively decorated, the gowns of the bride and those of her two sisters, who will be her attendants, will be rich but simple in design and there will be no elaborate festivities in honor of the occasion.

The bridegroom to be, John M. Richardson Lyeth, Harvard, '07, and Harvard Law School, '10, is a practicing attorney in New York City. The best man will be Eliot Parkhurst of Providence, a classmate of the bridegroom at Harvard, and the ceremony will be performed b ythe Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann of Trinity Church. The bride's attendants will be her sisters, Mrs. Alton Roberts of Michigan, formerly Miss Abbie Longyear, and Miss Helen Longyear.

Although the prospective bride is one of the greatest heiresses in the country, she has not appeared much in society. She is a graduate of Radcliffe and has kept up her interest in study since receiving her diploma from that college. In common with her sisters she has fitted herself to be able to earn her own living as a teacher if necessary, and is regarded as one of the most accomplished and widely cultured girls in Brookline.

POINT WON IN FIGHT FOR CHEAP LYNN GAS

City Council Will Give Hearing to Nichols Reduction Petition on Feb. 20.

George M. Nichols, publisher of a weekly newspaper in Lynn who has been fighting for fifty-five-cent gas in Lynn, has won another round in his campaign. The Lynn City Council yesterday granted him a hearing, setting the date for Monday evening, Feb. 20, when it will listen to arguments on both sides.

At present the price of gas is eighty cents per thousand cubic feet. This, Mr. Nichols believes, is too much, for the company last year issued a dividend of thirty-eight per cent. on gas and forty-six per cent. on electricity stock.

When he could not get the Lynn Gas and Electric Company to reduce the price from eighty cents to fifty-five cents, Mr. Nichols petitioned the City Council for a public hearing, alleging that the big corporations of Lynn, like the General Electric Company, were getting lighting power at a price one-fifth less than that paid by ordinary citizens. This petition the council yesterday allowed.

Some time the Lynn Gas and Electric Company petitioned the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners to b eallowed to issue $1,800 worth of new stock. The commissioners gave the permission.

Charges Stock Manipulation.

Mr. Nichols alleges that this cannot be done legally. He says he can show that the stock is issued to outsiders, and that therefore the sael of stock would be illegal. He declares that the issuance of this stock would mean taking from the consumers the sum of $350,000, because it is nothing more nor less than stock manipulation.

He has also asked the Council to instruct City Solicitor Arthur G. Wadleigh to petition the courts for an injunction that shall restrain the Gas and Electric Company, its directors and officers from declaring or paying any dividends on a new issue of stock until the courts decide as to the legality of such issuance.

In his efforts to get at the bottom of the matter Mr. Nichols says he endeavored to purchase one hundred or even more shares of the stock at $250, and that the company turned him down, although the company is to sell its new stock at $235. He says that two months ago the present stock of the company sold at $425.

Another step taken by Mr Nichols to compel the company to reduce its gas was two weeks ago when he petitioned Governor Foss to instruct the Attorney General to issue an injunction against the State Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners. This, he says, was done by the Governor, but that the Attorney General told Governor Foss that he had no right to interfere with the board.

Letter to Brandeis.

A letter has been sent to Louis Brandeis by Mr. Nichols asking the former to take up the matter, but as yet no reply has been received by Mr. Nichols.

The Lynn Gas and Electric Company promises the citizens of Lynn seventy-five cent gas after April 1, this price being the lowest in the State. It is asserted by the company ha it canno afford o give a further reduction. Mr. Nichols declares, however, that if the company can reduce gas to seventy-five cents, it can go still further and reduce it to fifty-five cents. He says he will carry the matter to the courts if necessary in his efforts to get cheap gas for his city, for he believes that the company is monopolizing the business in Lynn and getting rich at the expense of the citizens.

JULIAN ELTINGE SHOPS IN BOSTON

Washington Street Shop Favored

Eltinge Orders Boston-Made Gowns and Hats for His London Engagement.

Though he has traveled over a large part of the civilized world and is an authority on women's wearing apparel, Julian Eltinge, known as the best-gowned female impersonator on the American stage, shops in Boston. Though Paris has always been acknowledged as the centre of fashions, and the place from which most of the new creations in women's wear come, yet this greatest of all impersonators of the society woman finds better workmanship and more artistic models in Boston, and at the present time is having made a most elaborate evening gown and several hats by the J. G. Small Company of Washington street.

This addition to his extensive wardrobe is being got up for his London engagement, which opens in April, in "The Fascinating Widow," now playing at the Boston Theatre. No expense has been spared in the building of this gown and hats, for they are of the best material and from the latest models from designs of most artistic experts.

That the public, and more especially the shopping public, may have a chance to see this part of the great impersonator's wardrobe, the J. G. Small Company will, on Monday and Tuesday, show one of the gowns and hats on living models in their Washington street show windows.

The gown is an evening gown of brocaded satin, veiled with chiffon. In color it is Helen pink, the latest shade employed by modistes and milliners. It is made in the new empire effect, the satin being almost entirely covered with chiffon. The skirt has a deep flounce of ecru oriental lace of delicate pattern with a broad band of black velvet at the bottom. The chiffon, which is draped low on the sides and caught up at the back, is daintily embroidered by hand, with roses of the same shade worked in silk floss. The whole gown is trimmed in decorative design with silver crystal and beads.

The corsage is slightly decollete, and the sleeves are short and cut on kimono lines. The back of the gown is finished in long panel effect, ending in a long panel train. Like the rest of the gown the panel is also embroidered with roses and finished with silver crystal and beads. The dress buttons in the back, with high girdle effect.

One of the odd shaped hats ordered by Mr. Eltinge is that known as the Egyptian hat. It is canoe shaped and fits down over the head, nearly concealing the hair. It is of French blue rajah cloth, trimmed with velvet medallions appliqued on and has a heavy gold braid running around the edge. A fancy marabout pompon is set in, giving a rather military effect to the hat. The whole effect of the hat reminds one of the military hat shown in pictures of the great French Napoleon.

The bathing cap hat is another of the new creations that the J. G. Small Company has designed for Mr. Eltinge. This consists of a shape like the approved French bathing cap, having a black satin crown and a Yedda straw band in ivory white running around the bottom of the crown, this being caught up in a large bow in front. The hat is a very dainty and artistic style, fitting down over the head like a turban.

For a dress hat suitable for evening wear there is the large French Tagal hat in black, flaring back directly from the face. It has a wide brim falling toward the shoulders on the sides and back. Two large white willow plumes stand up off the back, falling gracefully over the crown. This hat is of Tagal straw, and on each side of the front where the brim is caught up are two small sprays of Mexican roses.

In direct contradiction to the large French hat is a small evening toque. This is made of gold lace and is trimmed with French plumes in the back. It is much plainer in shape, yet more fancy in material than the larger French hat. This hat sets well off the face.

These hats have been designed by experts who have made a thorough study of the coming styles, and in no instance have any old ideas been used. They are after the latest models of French hats, bearing all the earmarks of being far in advance of the styles shown by most milliners and designers for Spring hats.

Not only will the dress be exhibited on living models, but the hats will also be shown, the J. G. Small Company desiring to show the practicability of trading in Boston stores, of buying Boston made goods at Boston prices. It is believed that the merchants of Boston should unite in keeping the really high-class trade in Boston, and such exhibits as are to be shown in the J. G. Small Company windows should prove conclusively that Boston has artists in the line of women's wearing apparel fully as good as any in the world.

Not only are these additions to Julian Eltinge's wardrobe to be shown, but a choice line of the pantaloon gowns, now becoming so popular with the athletic woman, will also be exhibited on living models. These gowns are from the latest designs that have been shown in Paris and New York, and show the improvement made in women's dress from the clinging draperies that impede free movement of limbs, to the free, baggy model fast becoming popular with women of the present day.

ROOSEVELT URGES DIRECT ELECTIONS

Also Favors Reciprocity in His LIncoln Anniversary Speech at Grand Rapids.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 11.—The election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people is favored by Former President Roosevelt. He believes the Constitution should be so amended as to provide for popular election. In a Lincoln Day speech here to-night Colonel Roosevelt came out squarely in favor of the movement.

"One of the progressive policies upon which I think the great majority of progressives are agreed, is that United States Senators should be elected by popular vote," said Colonel Roosevelt. "The Constitution should in my judgment be so amended as to provide for this."

Asserting that the present method of electing Senators was a "relic" of old times and should be remedied, the Colonel also declared himself in favor of abolishing the electoral college in electing a President.

DoYouEnjoyYour Meals?

One of the Most Important Questions to Consider in the Search for Happiness and Health.

The burning question to you is, "Are you getting all the pleasure and the health you are entitled to?" If not, why not?

No matter whether every organ and member of your body is in a normal state of health and strength if your stomach is in any way disordered, you are not going to be "yourself." You are going to be a worried, out-of-sorts, nervous or sullen individual, whose whole tone will reflect your condition inside, and people will naturally avoid you.

The world wants to smile and be cheerful, and unless you are cheerful and smile, at least occasionally, you will have few friends, fewer opportunities, no success, and you will go down in defeat—defeated by dyspepsia and a bad stomach.

A good and thorough digestion has a quick, wonderful reaction upon the brain. You must have noticed it many times, for the brain and stomach are as intimately connected as a needle and its thread, one can hardly be used to advantage without the other. If your stomach is slow and lazy in digesting food, it will produce as much a slow, lazy and cloudy influence upon your brain. Mark it! If your stomach has absolutely quit work, and fermentation is poisoning your vitals as a result, surely your brain is going to be sluggish and correspondingly decreased. No one need tell you that.

But why continue to suffer all the miseries and torments that a disordered stomach brings you?

If your stomach can not digest your food, what will? Where's the relief? Where's the cure?

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the relief and the cure. Why? Because, as all stomach troubles arise from indigestion and because one ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is able to thoroughly and completely digest 3,000 grains of any kind of food, doesn't it stand to reason that these little Dyspepsia Tablets are going to digest all the food and whatever food you put into your stomach? Science nowadays can digest food without having to use the stomach for it. And Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the result of this scientific discovery. They digest, and digest thoroughly and well, anything and everything you eat.

So, if your stomach refuses to work or can't work, and you suffer from eructations, bloat, breath, fermentation, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn, dizziness, indigestion, or dyspepsia of whatever form, just take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and see the difference. It doesn't cost you much to prove it. Then you can eat all you want, what you want, whenever you want, if you use these tablets, and you can look the whole world in the face with a beaming eye and you will have a cheerful spirit, a pleasant face, a vigorous body and a clear mind and memory and everything will look and taste delicious to you. That's life.

Get a package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store on earth for 50c a package.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Sisters in Alienation Suit

Husband Demands $25,000

William K. Delorey and his young wife, from whom he is estranged and whom he charges received attentions from her sister's sweetheart.

MRS. ANNIE F. DELOREY.

FALLING in love with two sisters, one of whom is married, as a result of which the married sister has been estranged from her husband, is the substance of charges that are made against Charles A. Eaton, a wealthy Dedham farmer, against whom William K. Delorey has brought a suit for $25,000.

The married sister, whom Eaton is alleged to have paid too much attention is Delorey's young and pretty wife. Delorey charges Eaton with the alienation of his wife's affections. The wife, in an interview yesterday, denied that she had done anything wrong.

The other sister with whom Eaton is alleged to have spent much time is Miss Margaret F. Kenny. She is older than Mrs. Delorey. She brought a suit against Eaton for breach of promise of marriage. It was settled out of court.

Miss Kenny has also brought a suit for alleged alienation against her aunt, Mrs. Annie Southern, of No. 977 Hyde Park Avenue (or 55/100). The young woman declares that her aunt made remarks about her that caused Eaton to break off their engagement and desert her for her married sister.

Mrs. Delorey, who is about twenty years of age, talked frankly about her domestic trouble. This is what she had to say:

"I hardly know which way to turn. There has been no wrong committed. I was not responsible for Mr. Eaton's calls at the house. My aunt invited him and allowed him to come and spend his evenings. He used to call there to see Margaret. My aunt did not like my husband, and when he came back from Maine she refused him the house and we did not meet.

"Within three weeks I picked up my belongings in her absence and leaving a note telling her I had gone, I took my baby to the home of family friends and we have remained here ever since.

Wife Alone in the World.

"We were married three years ago, about the time I came to the States. My husband was a shoemaker until his health failed. I think he is practically well now, but I haven't seen him for several weeks. Neither have I seen Mr. Eaton nor my aunt nor sister. I am practically alone in the world with my child. Fortunately, I have good friends in Boston, else I do not know what I would do."

When Delorey went to Maine last Summer in search of health his wife went to the home of her aunt. It is charged that the aunt tried to break off the friendship between Eaton and Miss Kenny and countenanced the acquaintance of Eaton and Mrs. Delorey.

Mrs. Annie Southern, aunt of Mrs. Delorey and defendant in the suit brought against her for slander by her other niece, Miss Margaret Kenney, made this statement to a reporter from the Sunday AMERICAN:

"I never allowed Mrs. Delorey and Mr. Eaton to step in my house until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Eaton never called here to see Mrs. Delorey when he did call he came to see me and not her.

"It is not true that I stopped Mrs. Delorey from coming to this house to see his wife. He left my house of his own accord. Mr. Delorey, his wife and child came to my house last June and on July 6 Delorey went away without saying a word to his wife. A few days later Mrs. Delorey received a letter from her husband saying that he was not going to live with her any more.

"I tried to have them live together, but they wouldn't. In all that time that they stayed at my house Mrs. Delorey paid me just $20.

"They have no grounds for suing Mr. Eaton. As for Margaret, my other niece, she certainly has no grounds for suing me. They shall not take my little home away from me and drive me out into the street."

PERFECT COCKTAIL MAY BE FOUND HERE

Look Over the List; the Best Mixers in Boston Give Their Recipes.

Bibulous Bostonians are still searching for the Perfect Cocktail. There be cocktails and cocktails served in Hub hotels, restaurants and saloons and all of them have advocates, admirers and partisans, but a referendum shows nothing at all approaching unanimity of opinion as to the Perfect cocktail.

Paraphrasing the profound truth uttered many years ago by Kunnel—or was it Malah?—Silas P. Boggs of Kaintucky, that "all whiskies is good, but some of 'is is better than others," cocktail lovers in Boston declare that all cocktails are good, but the gentlemen one Dry particular mixologist mixes has all other "skins forty ways."

No Faking in Search.

In the search for the Perfect Cocktail there is no faking. No Old Doctor Cook has gone a short distance along the cocktail route and returned with a weird and wonderful story of having lured galleted and prancing Eskimo barkeeps by means of gumdrops to show him the secret of the Perfect Cocktail. A North Pole may be faked on the King of Denmark, but you have to SHOW Bostonians when it comes to cocktails.

Maybe the Perfect Cocktail never will be discovered. Even if it had been so many folk in Boston who will be perfectly satisfied with what has been accomplished in this line of research and investigation.

However, there be hope. Fearless and experienced experts are keeping on the pursuit for the Perfect Cocktail and the results of their efforts in the research work are given below. Of course it is understood that the Perfect Cocktail will be found will be purely a Boston product. The old-fashioned Manhattan and the Martini and the later Bronx, though still favorites, are not listed as entries in the Perfect Cocktail stakes. Only the three mighty new ones made by Boston wizards of class are mentioned.

Dean of the Mixers.

At the Brewster, George Swain, dean of Boston's mixers and a pioneer in the field of original cocktail research, stands by an old-fashioned mixture made as follows:

One lump of sugar, three dashes of lemon peel, small quantity warm water, muddle together. Room's bitters, cube of ice, half glass of white key. Stir well and serve in old-fashioned cocktail glass in which it is mixed.

"Professor" Swain also has created the germs of the "Swain" cocktail, which has not received in the contest the prescribes and compounds it as follows:

One-eighth orange juice, muddled thoroughly. Martini & Rossio vermouth, one-third, two-thirds dry gin, and three dashes absinthe, the whole frapped.

One from the Thorndike.

"Professor" Robert Morton of the assortment of cocktail research at the Hotel Thorndike is playing the Frenz cocktail. It's components are:

Dash Boonekamp bitters, dash French vermouth, dash Plymouth gin, dash Italian vermouth, muddled with bit of orange peel. Shake very quickly in a cocktail glass and serve with sugar with a cherry on one side and an olive on the other.

"Cocky" Sullivan at the Hotel Lenox has evolved the Lenox cocktail, which patrons of that hotel rather fancy. It is made like this:

One-third orange gin, two-thirds unsweetened Italian vermouth, dash of orange bitters. Shake well with cracked ice and serve with a cherry.

An "F. D. Special."

Gus Poggi at the new Frost & Dearborn restaurant on Pearl street mixes an F. D. Special that is popular. Here it is:

A dash of Maraschino, one of grenadine, jigger of dry gin, white of one egg and the juice of one-half a lime shaken and served in a cocktail glass.

Signor Poggi has devoted much time to cocktail study and as a result has also evolved the Boston Curb and the Sagas of Life. Here is the Boston Curb:

One-eighth vermouth, Italian or French, one-eighth each maraschino and orange curacoa, three-quarters Frost & Dearborn gin, dash orange and Angostura bitters, all stirred in ice and served in bar glass.

The Signs of Life listens well and its makeup is attractive:

Jigger dry gin, dash Parfait Amour and maraschino, yolk and white of egg, juice of half a lime all shaken in ice and served in cocktail glass.

Harry and Henry, mixers at Rich's Grill on Federal street, satisfy their patrons with a Rich's special cocktail. It is composed of:

One-third part Solar vermouth, two-thirds Plymouth gin, a twist of orange peel and served with a roasted filbert in a bar glass. Some people call it the Squirrel cocktail.

SERVANT IN $20,000 SUIT FOR ALIENATION

Unusual Legal Aspect in Action of Mrs. Florence Marshall Against Mother-in-Law.

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 11.—The unusual legal spectacle of a servant girl being made a co-defendant in a $20,000 action for alienation of a husband's affections is afforded in the suit filed by Mrs. Florence E. Marshall. She is the young and pretty wife of Allen R. Marshall, son of one of the richest women in Westfield and of a wealthy western ranchman.

Mrs. Marshall's mother-in-law, Mrs. Marcia B. Marshall, and her housekeeper, Miss Mary A. Clifford, are named as defendants, the plaintiff accusing them of having slandered her to her husband, as a result of which she has lost his love. The husband, formerly principal of an American school in Porto Rico, now conducts a pool room in this city.

Mrs. Marshall now is visiting friends in Lawrence. To a reporter she told the story of her married troubles, as follows:

"It is simply a case of too much mother-in-law. I was married in Minnesota, where I met Allen, who had just been graduated from the State University. He was very nice to me and I thought him an ideal young man. I found him so as a husband, and I believe plan we are.

"The trouble has been entirely with his mother and Miss Clifford. They are the ones who kept us apart. We were married September 10, 1908. Allen was practicing law in Morris, Minn. Just after our marriage we sailed for Porto Rico. Allen taught in the American school there and also tutored.

Happy Until Return.

"Our life there was ideal. We came back to the States in 1909 and went to Westfield. There in the Marshall home was the mother-in-law and with her was Miss Clifford, the housekeeper. Then trouble began for me. They had a nice home, but I began to see at once they preferred to have me away from there. They sent me abroad in a business school in Albany just to get him away from me. Then they told me I must go too, and one day Mrs. Marshall gave me money to go back to Minnesota and very nicely reminded me it was only a one-way fare and that I wouldn't expected back.

Borrowed Car Fare.

"This was in December, 1909. I went to Minnesota and remained there until last May. I borrowed money to come back and lived in Springfield until November. My husband had gone into a business venture in Springfield, but I couldn't live in the home at Westfield for, in the presence of Allen and his mother, the housekeeper, Miss Clifford, assumed me of having a sundy past in Minneapolis. I could sue and did succeed this through her sister, who lived there. Then Allen's mother tried to induce him to begin divorce proceedings.

"I never have seen my father in law, who is a wealthy ranch owner in one of the Dakotas. He has not lived with his wife for many, many years."

TRUNK DEATH TRIAL BEGINS TO-MORROW

Nalbandian at Bar of Justice for Killing His Friend in Lynn 2 Years Ago.

The trial of Vahan Nalbandian, the Lynn shoe cutter who was captured by the police of that city after a chase that led them to Bulgaria, for the murder of his friend, Minas K. Moullan, will begin in Salem to-morrow.

The preparations for the trial, which the accusers of Nalbandian declare will bring to a close the Lynn trunk mystery of two years standing, were completed to-day. A special venire of 100 talesmen has been summoned.

Judge Sanderson, former district attorney of Middlesex county, who assisted in the prosecution of Charles L. Tucker, will preside at the trial.

The murder of Moullan occurred in the Lynn boarding house where Nalbandian lived a year ago last July. The place is known as the Harrison House. Moullan's body was found crammed into a trunk in Nalbandian's room several day after.

After several months Nalbandian was located in Bulgaria. Two officers of the Lynn force were sent there armed with extradition papers. They returned with the prisoner and he had been in the Salem jail for eight months.

DR. DWIGHT TALKS ON CATHOLIC CHARITY

"The St. Vincent de Paul Society" was the theme of Dr. Thomas Dwight, professor of Anatomy at the Harvard Medical School, before the League of Catholic Women yesterday afternoon in the Notre Dame Academy, Berkeley street.

Mrs. James Dwight, who presided, announced that Dr. Dwight's lecture was the first of a series given to arouse interest in Catholic charity work.

Dr. Dwight, who succeeded the late Oliver Wendell Holmes at the Harvard Medical School in 1883, told of the formation of the St. Vincent de Paul Society in France by Frederick Ozanam in 1833.

"The trials, troubles and tribulations of Frederick Ozanam and the fierce hatred of the Anti-Catholic toward him did the work by which he was raised beyond despair," said Dr. Dwight.

"His genius in speaking out a plan to dissipate the enmity against Catholicism and the charitable work in which he was engaged later won for him, however, the support of those who were the first to throw the stone of malice at him."

BOSTON HAS 23 REAL VALENTINES

Boston Directory Reveals Some Information of Interest on the Holiday.

Next Tuesday belongs to twenty-three people and two firms in Boston.

It's their day, all their own, named for 'em, in fact.

The discovery was made this way. The Boss says:

"Let's have a Valentine Day story for the Sunday paper—something new—write it in a new way. It's been done to death—think hard, write fast, and by the Board title be able to regulate reporters and judge their efficiency. No material shall be given to the newspapers, but through these reporters. The recognition by the newspapers of these reporters will be extra."

It will be noticed that all the reporters are members of the Press Board. Thus each reporter girl can tell what every other reporter girl gets for her pound. It is evident that there won't be any chance for "scoops."

The above plan was adopted under him that, unless it went through, the license of the college reporters would be taken away.

All right. Who owns Valentine's Day? The Valentines, of course. Well, who are the Valentines?

"We had our daughter vaccinated. Before her arm healed she began to have sore eyes. Soon she was blind in one eye and could see very little with the other. Five doctors said she would be totally blind. She could not stand the light. We then gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla. When she had taken eight bottles she could stand the light, and now she can do the finest needlework." Mrs. J. Beardsley, Elmira, N. Y.

Ban on 'Scoops' Hits Wellesley News Girls

New Rule Forces Reporteress to Show Stories to Rivals and Get Approval of Censors.

Newspaper reporting at Wellesley College is to be more strictly edited hereafter. Some "reporteress" must have written live news to her paper, judging from the following new press regulations adopted by the Wellesley Student Government Association:

"The Press Board shall comprise all the reporters, one faculty member, one member of the Student Government Executive Board, one member of the News Board and the president of the Student Government Association, ex-officio.

"Each reporter shall hand in her work to the Press Board and thus the Board will be able to regulate reporters and judge their efficiency. No material shall be given to the newspapers but through these reporters. The recognition by the newspapers of these reporters will be extra."

It will be noticed that all the reporters are members of the Press Board. Thus each reporter girl can tell what every other reporter girl gets for her pound. It is evident that there won't be any chance for "scoops."

The above plan was adopted under him that, unless it went through, the license of the college reporters would be taken away.

"JIM CROW" LAW STANDS.

Circuit Court Decides Constitution Not Violated.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 11.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals decided that Oklahoma's "Jim Crow" law is constitutional. Judge E. H. Adams filed the opinion which was concurred in by Judge W. H. Hook. Judge W. H. Sanborn, presiding judge, filed a dissenting opinion. The court held that the Oklahoma law is not a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution. The Negroes, who had brought the action, declared they were not being denied equal protection under the constitutional amendment.

FOSS FAVORS MORE JUDGES, MORE PAY

With the two-fold object of observing their annual banquet and extending their congratulations to Joseph F. Quinn, one of their members, who has just been appointed to the Superior Court bench, four hundred members of the Essex County Bar Association assembled in Young's Hotel last night and listened to Governor Foss and other speakers among whom was the newly appointed Justice.

Governor Foss advocated more judges and more pay for them.

William H. Niles of Lynn, president of the Essex County Bar Association, was toastmaster, and the speakers were Judge Robert G. Harris, Judge Elgar J. Sherman, Attorney General James M. Swift, Alfred Hemenway, Benjamin L. Wiggin, James H. Sibley and District Attorney Henry C. Attwill of Lynn.

In Massachusetts we are fortunate in the character of our legal profession; we are fortunate that laws are plain, that our courts unimpeachable, our lawyers public-spirited. Let us see to it that this condition never changes except to grow even better. Let us see to it that the judiciary of Massachusetts is never weakened in the slightest degree by either personal or partisan considerations of any sort of protest.

The prompt and businesslike settlement of legal matters is essential to good government as overcrowded court dockets renders it impossible to do so. Simple, exact, clarity, our imprisonment is imperative if civilization is to retain its present form. I ask the support of the people.

We must, therefore, cooperate with them to get their work facilitated; we must see that justice is not delayed; we must see that justice and they should have more justices and they should have larger pay.

It is a fact that the public expenses in this State already amount to a nine million dollars, declared they were is appalling; yet it is rather the inefficient service than the number which should be the amount itself, which is wrong.

NORDICA GREETED BY SOCIETY AT MATINEE

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

With Mme. Nordica as an attraction at the opera matinee yesterday all there were of the fashionables left in town turned out to greet her, and despite the fact that the majority were off for the week-end in the country, there was a goodly showing of the smart set all out in Winter furs and cold weather toggery.

Among the interesting young girls attracting much attention was Miss Ruth Anthony, who entertained in her mother's box. She wore black velvet with bodice of gold cloth and a large picture hat of black trimmed with black plumes.

One of the pretty debutantes was Mary Homewell in black velvet and small black hat with a party of her sister-in-law in a box having a merry time with cubes during the intermissions. Miss Nora Tuckey, who has recently returned from a trip South, was in brown velvet and brown chiffon, with a pretty touch of red on the bonnet.

Picturesque Box Party.

A picturesque box group was made up of Mrs. Henry Russell and her two sons. Mrs. Russell looking more stately than ever in a flowing gown of black satin and a small close fitting black turban. With the Rosetta part of the time was Mrs. J. W. Converse in black satin, black hat and black furs.

Mrs. F. L. Breese, with a number of friends, was in the corridor during the mission holding a little reception on the side. Mrs. Breese looking slender and stately, as she usually is, in a trig suit of black velvet and a large black velvet hat. Among those surrounding her was Mrs. Henry Quincy in a fur satin and chiffon, and her pretty daughter Elinor, in black velvet and a large black hat, trimmed with white plumes.

One of the handsomest matrons in the house was Mrs. S. Stanley Dana in black velvet and chiffon with a touch of deep red amethyst on the corsage and a large black hat, trimmed with amethyst plumes

MAYOR URGES STATE BOARD OF FINANCE

A strong plea for the support of the mayors of all cities and of town officials for the bill creating a State finance commission was made by Mayor Fitzgerald before the members of the Mayor's club at Young's hotel. He declared that the Boston Finance Commission, the creation of which was due to his initiative, had proved its worth, and that an extension of its jurisdiction to other cities and towns or the creation of a State finance commission, would benefit the State in general.

The Mayor said that when he urged the creation of the Boston Finance Commission he felt himself justified by conditions which made a strict and impartial investigation of the financial affairs of the city necessary. He had told the councils not to "go ahead and investigate to the limit" and he was certain he deserved would agree with him that the councils soon had done so.

"Either the jurisdiction of our Finance Commission should be extended to take in the other cities and towns of the Commonwealth," said the Mayor, "or we should have a State commission for the whole."

A State Commission is certain to discover conditions in the various State institutions that call for immediate changes. The plan has worked well in Boston and it should be extended to the rest of the State.

"TIMILTYS" WILL DANCE.

James, the Head of the Club, Is to Lead the Grand March.

"Jim" Timilty. Ever hear of him? Sure you did. He represents Wards 18, 19 a 22 in the Senate. He has a club of his own, too. Most of the city employes will be in fine fettle next Friday night. He and his close members, and as many of the faithful Democrats of Ward 18 who can find time to attend, will don their Sunday best, slick up their hair and take their "best girl" to Odd Fellows' Hall, corner Berkeley and Tremont streets, for a dance on the polished floor until the wee small hours. James will lead the grand march with Mrs. Timilty.

Dr. Cook (Than Whom) Becomes a Submarine

Famous Arctic Lecturer Buys a Ranch Below Sea Level in California.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook of North Pole notoriety is going to settle down 110 feet below the level of the sea. He has bought a ranch near Brawley, in the famous Imperial Valley Southern California. There he will establish an all-the-year-round home.

Brawley, the community which is to be distinguished by having Dr. Cook as a townsman and rancher, is an enterprising place. It takes a local pride in being 110 feet below sea level. It boasts the Brawley Submarine Band, so-called on account of its below sea-level location.

The Imperial Valley contains natural wonders. The Salton Sea lies at its northern end. The Southern Pacific Railway crosses one arm of the Salton Sea. In the sea are fresh carp, stocked there by the government. The colored waiters in the Southern Pacific dining cars throw scraps of food into the Salton Sea when the trains pass over its waters daily. It is an actual fact that the Salton Sea carp not only look for these dining-car scraps, but even know when the trains are due, and crowd in schools alongside the track waiting for their meals.

Passengers fish for these carp from the car windows. Instances are known of carp being caught in this way while the train was running at full speed.

This is no fish story in a slang sense, but is literally true. That's the kind of a country to which Dr. Cook is going.

ELK HERD STARVING.

Fully 5,000 in Want of Food in Wyoming.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Feb. 11.—Word has been received from Jackson's Hole that 5,000 elk are in danger of starvation unless help is provided at once. The State Legislature recently appropriated $5,000 for hay, but its purchase has not begun.

$4,000,000 IN SEARS PROPERTY UNTAXED

The major part of the $5,000,000 worth of taxable personal property which was announced by the State Tax Commissioner recently as having been unearthed in Nahant by the special State assessors, consists of $4,000,000 of property, left by the late Frederick H. Sears of Boston.

There was considerable wonder, when the discovery of the special State assessors was announced, as to what this Nahant property was, also as to why the Nahant assessors were not aware of it.

Charles I. Vary, chairman of the Nahant assessors, knew all the time about the Sears property.

"Such criticism in regard to our board overlooking such a large amount of personal property is unjust," said Mr. Vary. "The assessors know their work well and they were well aware that this property, which was not put on the April levy, could be taxed last December. We were awaiting the decision of the court on the Sears estate litigation."

The executors of the Sears estate claim that the $4,000,000 worth of Sears personal property has been removed from the jurisdiction of Nahant. The town officials recently filed a bill of facts in the Supreme Court as to why the property should be assessed by them. Mr. Sears died three years ago. The estate has brought suit against Nahant to recover $46,000 of taxes in the 1908 assessment, which was still under protest. The case of that tax and of subsequent unpaid taxes is still before the Supreme Court.

Chairman Vary said that the other million dollars of Nahant personal property said to have been discovered by the special State assessors includes estates whose inventories were not filed up to April 1, last.

C. E. Building Fund Grows.

The Christian Endeavor Building Fund now amounts to $27,700, and the latest list announces new contributions to the aggregate of $1,622. It is proposed to raise $150,000 by subscriptions obtained everywhere to build in Boston a structure representative of this world-wide religious movement.

Prescriptions

Most all of us, at times, are unfortunate in having illness in our family and we should certainly give the matter of the filling of prescriptions some consideration. You are not always in a great hurry, and there is no necessity for you to call here or there. Select the most convenient place when there are several equal in convenience in question.
Quality and accuracy are of greatest importance, and then comes the matter of saving in cost. No other stores are fitted with the facilities that are to be found in Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores, insuring absolute accuracy and absolute purity. No other drug stores are in a position to buy to as good advantage, and their prices must necessarily be higher.

INVALID AND CHILD RESCUED FROM FLAMES

MOTHER SAVES SICK GIRL

Young Man Nearly Overcome by Smoke, Takes Helpless Man to Safety.

A little girl and a man, who is a helpless invalid, were rescued by being carried to the street through smoke and flames in a fire that shot up the elevator well between Nos. 5 and 7 Durham street last night. The fire burned its way through a number of apartments and did considerable havoc before the firemen got it under control. The rescued invalid was James M. Knapp.

The girl who was rescued is Eleanor Haynes. She is the daughter of John O. Haynes. She was critically ill. She was carried to the street by her mother, Mrs. Isabel Haynes. There were two other Haynes children, Harold, three, and Helen, eighteen. They ran to the street.

When the flames burst through the roof they were seen by Robert Matheson, of No. 207 Huntington avenue, who hustled over to the burning building.

Found invalid on Top Floor.

He dashed up through the various floors calling out, "Is there anybody here?" When he got to the top floor he found Mr. Knapp. He took time Matheson was almost overcome by smoke. Knapp lay in a helpless condition.

Matheson staggering blindly through the acrid light, grabbed him.

Down through the smoke and grime of the building that had become terrorized, Matheson carried the man whom he had rescued.

Mrs. Knapp, the wife of the invalid, saw the smoke curling through the building and became frightened. She dressed to the street to ring in a quick alarm. She could not carry her husband and she realized that in a moment.

Damage About $7,000.

After giving the notification of the fire Mrs. Knapp ran back to the rescue of her husband. When she had reached her floor she found that Mr. Matheson had him in his arms.

Down through the blinding hallways Matheson with his charge in his arms, and Mrs. Knapp felt their way.

When they reached the street Mr. Knapp could hardly speak because of the thrilling experience through which he had passed. They carried him across the street to the home of a friend. It was estimated that the damage in the fire was $7,000.

Martin has been at Chalons, the Wright school at Pau for some time. He recently made several successful flights in a Farman biplane, one embracing nine miles. Martin will return to this country early in the spring as a professional aviator in the employ of Grahame-White.

ITALIAN DUEL ENDS IN REGULAR BATTLE

Seconds Take Up Fight When Principals Are Too Hurt to Continue.

ROME, Feb. 11.—The blood-test duel of a decade was fought to-day under the tower of the Ruie chapel at Frascati, between Count Savel Salvoni and Count Alderano Cotanti, while soldiers searched through the hills to prevent the affair of honor.

The policemen, both of wealth and large estates, had quarrelled over the affections of the seventeen year-old daughter of a rich Italian nobleman residing near Frascati. The chapel is built under the shadow of a mountain secluded from the main highway. With their seconds they met at dawn.

Both were accomplished swordsmen. Count Salvoni drew first blood by cutting Cotanti in the forehead. The blood flowing into Count Alderano's eyes blinded him. When the seconds tried to stop the duel Salvoni turned upon them. For half an hour the men battled with grim fury. The flow of blood from Cotanti's wound was staunched and he joined his seconds. Count Salvoni's seconds then took part in the affray. Two men fell with wounds believed to be fatal before the police, attracted by the sound of the battle, arrived up the scene and parted them. The authorities knew the duel was to take place, but were unable to prevent it.

CANAL TO BE OPEN TO SHIPS IN 1913

At Least, Col. Goethals Makes Prediction Concerning the Work in Panama.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 11.—Colonel George W. Goethals, chief engineer of the Panama canal, said to-day the canal would be completed sufficiently for the passage of ships by September 1, 1913, at a cost of $300,000,000. This is two years ahead of all earlier estimates for completing of the canal, and fully $50,000,000 less than many engineers figured as the total cost.

President Taft has made similar recommendations and bills for this purpose have been presented by Senator Flint and Chairman Mann of the House Committee, each of which gives the President authority to act or to designate some one else to do it, but is silent as to a maximum and minimum charge.

Goethals to Give Lecture.

Colonel Goethals could not say what would be a fair charge, but thought that $1 per net ton of a vessel would be a heavy tax on vessels using the canal, but would give the transcontinental railroad competition on freight from New York to San Francisco.

Plans are afoot to turn the hall of the House of Representatives over to Colonel Goethals Monday night that he may give an illustrated lantern slide lecture on the Panama Canal, the progress of the work, conditions of the workmen, character of the work and descriptive scenery in and about the Canal.

It is suggested such a lecture would prove instructive to many members of Congress and would facilitate Canal legislation. The cost of the Canal, the machine shops at Balboa, the Pacific terminal, the coaling stations at both the Atlantic and Pacific terminals and those supply stations are all included in Colonel Goethals' estimate of $300,000,000 for the entire cost of the great waterway. He also believes it will be possible to build a dry dock within the estimated limit of cost of the canal.

Would Control Coal.

It is essential, Colonel Goethals said, that the government control the coal supply stations so as to prevent private interests, by monopolization of this supply indirectly to control the operation of the Canal through their rates for fuel.

The International Navigation Congress which meets in London in June, for the purpose of readjusting world rates, will probably take up the question of the canal, and Colonel Goethals declared it imperative that they at that time have information as to the charges to be made by the government.

Football Coupons and Canadian Hotel Key Will Be Other Exhibits Against Fay B. Kendall, Lawyer.

By and by he sent around a note,
Here's the very note,
This is what he wrote:
Can't get away
To marry you to-day,
My wife won't let me!

LOVE letters, coupons for seats at Harvard Yale football games, a Canadian hotel key, a copy of "Science and Health" and scores of presents will be among the legal exhibits in the breach of promise suit that Miss Mildred M. Elliott, a beautiful Allston girl, has brought against Fay B. Kendall, a Boston lawyer, for $50,000 damages.

Some of the letters were written from New Hampshire summer places where he spent much of his time "canoeing in the woods," drinking buttermilk, which he carried five miles in thermos bottles, and dodging girls in his automobile who persisted in crying out to him:

"Ain't you awful lonesome."

Advertised His Bondage.

It was for the benefit of these anxious young women, Kendall explained in one of his letters to Miss Elliott, that he had a sign painted and fastened on the rear of his machine, which read:

MY WIFE WON'T LET ME!

The sad love story of Miss Elliott and Mr. Kendall began when she was employed as confidential secretary and stenographer for his law firm, Sprout & Kendall, of No. 18 Tremont Building. That Kendall was one of the most ardent wooers ever seen in real life or depicted in fiction is the assertion of the young woman upon whom he lavished his affection.

Some of the answers to the letters which he wrote last Summer to Miss Elliott follow:

Dear Millie: What kind of a jolly are you giving me about five letters to Montpelier. I sent up there and received one letter. To-day is pleasant and it is the first pleasant day that I have seen since my arrival here. It has rained for nine consecutive days. Then it commenced to pour and then it was a cloudburst, and by the time I arrived at the hotel I was looking like a drowned rat. I changed all my clothing and I dressed up and again started down town.

It commenced to rain again and I scrambled under a piazza to avoid a second ducking. This is the kind of weather they have in New Hampshire.

My life here is very uneventful. Nothing to do but read. It is something awful though when I start out to ride. Women, young and old, holler at me: "Oh, ain't you going to give me a ride?"

If I meet a bevy of girls in the road they exclaim, "Ain't you awful lonesome?" Now, when I see any girls ahead of me in the road I open up the cut out and go past them at the rate of thirty miles an hour.

I have had a card board sign painted and hung on the rear of the car, "Oh, my wife won't let me."

I. B. K.

Out for Mushrooms.

Then follows one in which the writer treats interestingly that he is busy repelling the advances of young women.

Dear Millie—I have been out looking for mushrooms and I suppose that they are toadstools. Then they will kill me. But then I wonder who will care?

It is perfectly lovely up here. It is just the place to take a rest. I read a great deal every day.

I see some odd women here, but I do not have much to say to them and in truth all around here are quite aged. I keep much to myself.

I take walks when it is fine weather, but lately we have been having something dreadful up here and it has rained nearly all the time.

When are you coming up? Let me hear from you at once. Yours,

F. B. K.

On a Buttermilk Cruise.

The next letter is full of personal gossip and has to do with the writer's quest for buttermilk:

GRISCOM WILL WED 'LOST' MISS ARNOLD

Admits in Atlantic City That He Expects to Hear From Girl Within a Week.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Feb. 11.—Clement C. Griscom, Jr., broke away from the restraint of secrecy imposed on him by the family of Dorothy H. C. Arnold, the New York heiress, to-night, and made it clear that he expects to get definite trace of the missing girl within a week.

From what Griscom told a representative of the AMERICAN in the suite at the Hotel Chalfonte it appears that he must have known the Miss Arnold had sufficient reason for leaving home. He freely admitted that he and the heiress were in love and that an engagement of marriage existed between them.

On top of this admission it developed that Griscom the day after his return from Europe on the Berlin caused to be sent from a New York paper a "personal" advertisement trying to attract the girl's notice and saying that she would hear from him by next Tuesday. The AMERICAN has learned that Mrs. Arnold, her mother, made Griscom promise when she saw him at his hotel in Florence, Italy, that he would place such an advertisement in a newspaper, signed with a name that Miss Arnold would recognize.

Although Griscom would not confess to night that he had actually put the advertisement in the New York newspaper the AMERICAN learned from him that the precise name used in the personal column "Junior" was the one that Griscom signed to cablegrams which he sent to the Arnold family from Florence while they were making desperate efforts to learn if he knew anything that would lead to the discovery of the girl.

The permit that Griscom caused to be inserted in the New York newspaper read: "Everything is going all right. You may expect to hear from me Tuesday.

"JUNIOR."

MRS. PLANT HER OWN DETECTIVE IN DIVORCE ACTION

Followed in Person the Many and Varied Clews Which Have Resulted in Her Surprising Suit Against Manufacturer

Romance Revealed of Humble Young Lunch Room Girl Who Rose From Waiting at Table to Luxury in Apartment House

THE secret romance in the life of Thomas G. Plant was uncovered to the world yesterday when startling allegations were made public in the divorce suit which has been brought against him by his wife, Mrs. Caroline Griggs Plant.

The story is one that would surpass the imagination of Laura Jean Libbey—the story of how a factory man worth $40,000,000 had fallen in love with a working girl—a waitress in his employ—and had lifted her from her lowly position to one of affluence.

Mr. Plant is the head of the big shoe factory in Roxbury. He is a figure in Boston society. He is known all over the world. He has a beautiful wife. The world thought they were happy.

Wife Keeps Secret.

All that money could buy was theirs. Then came a suspicion in the mind of his wife that all was not right. She kept it to herself. Discreetly and with remarkable cleverness she went forth as a woman amateur sleuth to see if there was any truth in what she had been led to believe.

She hoped that the cloud that had gathered over her home would vanish—that it was a mirage.

But her investigation, made personally, served to make the cloud blacker. What the detective wife learned convinced her that her husband had fallen in love with a little girl who had served him with luncheon in his factory.

The girl is Kitty Hadley. She is an English girl. She went to the Plant factory with no idea in the world except to earn a modest living. She is pretty, but not a girl who would be called beautiful. She is extremely modest and slightly tame—a girl that may have dreamed a romance but had no other reason to think it would come true.

Worked in Lunchroom.

Miss Hadley worked in the lunch-room a position that so many girls get in Boston, and for which so many girls are looking, regardless of the fact that the salary is so small that it hardly suffices for room rent.

One day there came a vacancy in the private room where the "boss" took his luncheon. The "boss" was Mr. Plant. To wait on him was to some girls a great opportunity to gain favor, and to others a constant terror.

Miss Hadley, with no foolish visions floating in her mind, was frightened when she was asked to take the vacant place in the private room.

"Oh that is a very hard place," she cried. "I am not an expert at waiting. May be I cannot please him. I would rather not."

But she took the place. She did the best she could. She was modest. She was considerate. She was attractive. For six months she was there, serving Mr. Plant with various things—on Saturdays, it is safe to say, with baked beans and brown bread and coffee. On other days she brought him the finest looking doughnuts she could find, with a fish cake now and then.

Then, Girl Disappears.

And then Kitty, the beautiful waitress, disappeared.

It was about that time that Caroline Griggs Plant, the society woman detective, got busy.

Mrs. Plant found Kitty. She was in New York in a sky-scraper apartment. She styled herself Kathryn Haberley. With her was a woman who gave her special instruction in all sorts of things which are supposed to make a lady out of an ordinary waitress, as it is seldom done in every day life and often in romance writing.

In her suit Mrs. Plant does not mention Miss Hadley. But she says that there is "a woman in the case" known to her "only on information."

A friend of Miss Hadley made this statement yesterday:

"Kitty came from England when she was about nine years old. She began work in the restaurant four years ago. Her neatness was her chief characteristic. When

SLATER MILL FIGHT REVIEWED BY WIDOW

Legal Battle for Property, She Says, Is for Sake of Her Son.

WORCESTER, Feb. 11.—Mrs. Mary Hunt Slater, whose husband, who died in the spring, left possession of his $8,000,000 estate at Webster in her family quarrel for ruling AMERICAN today, a decision in which she was the principal figure in possessing that estate, is somewhat reconciled with the result of the litigation. Mrs. Slater, who was seen at her home in Webster, said:

"I am glad it is over. I was pained to have my motives misconstrued, but I suffered it all for the sake of my son. I felt that I was right, and I knew that I would be vindicated in the end. I am glad that it is all over, and that I can now live in peace."

Mrs. Slater's interview with Charles H. Warner, counsel for the trust company, and Judge Rugg, counsel for the executors, lasted about an hour. Mrs. Slater was accompanied by Mrs. Frederick Stevens of Webster, who is a relative.

Judge Rugg said that the question of the possession of the Slater mill at Webster by the trust company was settled by the decision, and that no particular hearing would be held.

Engaged as Companion.

The story of Miss Hadley's life in New York was told to Mrs. Plant by Miss Hadley's companion and teacher, who said:

"Some time late in the Summer of 1909 I replied to an advertisement asking for a companion to a girl whose education had been neglected. To my letter I received a reply from a man whose name alone was sufficient recommendation. He called on me once and I liked the girl I was expected to educate. He said:

"The girl had been actually neglected since she brought up in England by her aunt after the death of her parents, and through a mere whim happening she found a wealthy relatives. In this country I investigated and I decided it was to us to see that the girl's letters berated and is given her position in society."

This is what the man told me and I agreed to take the position. Ten days later I took charge of my pupil, who had an apartment in a fashionable hotel in New York. She said her aunt had made a drudge of her and that she had worked as a waitress until her benefactor met her and finding she was a distant relative prepared plans for her education.

Calls From Benefactor.

"As my instructions were to give the girl constant attention, she was away from me only at such times as her benefactor came to visit. Then she accompanied him to dinner, but always returned at a certain time, as I had instructed her. It was understood that the man's relatives on his wife's side did not care to receive the girl, and I therefore thought nothing of her correspondence and I believed that she would make her debut as soon as her education had been completed.

"The first time that the girl absented herself was during the Hudson-Fulton celebration, when she said she was going to visit friends in Ruggles street, Boston. She stayed away a week. Again, during the Christmas holidays, she was away for some days. It was during that time that I got the letter which gave me a great surprise.

"This letter with other papers is now in the possession of Mrs. Plant or her lawyers. Before I found the note I had made a careful investigation of the personal relations which the girl's benefactor gave me and I was perfectly satisfied when I consulted the man's lawyer in the Slugger Building. Up to the time of finding the letter the girl had made considerable progress in her education.

Attendants at Opera.

"We were regular attendants at the opera and saw the best shows in the city. The young woman received riding lessons and it was planned to have her take a musical course. We had also arranged to go on the identical cruise in Europe to complete her education.

"When I confronted the girl with the letter she broke ... and told me that ... She ... the girl ... had no knowledge of ... after her benefactor ...

Writer Has Accident.

Another letter dated at Arlington, but mailed at Bakersfield, Vt., has this to say:

Dear Millie: I meant to say nothing about the accident to you publicly. I am coming out ... right, however. Expect to be home in a few days. Will let you know when I start.

About Mrs. Hack: I wish I could forward her letters. It is absolutely ridiculous to assume that there is any sentiment on my part or on her part, for that matter if I can aid her by advice it is my duty to do so. Nothing doing up here for sentiment. I spend most of my time out in the woods snooping. Are things in the office running smoothly?

I am beginning to feel that I ought to get into the harness again. The mail will close in five minutes so will get this letter off. I think it would do you good to take a few days off at Newport. Yours,

Postal Inspectors Called.

Postoffice inspectors were called into this unusual case yesterday to investigate an anonymous letter that Miss Elliott received. The letter was scurrilous in character. It was written on a typewriter. Because of the peculiarities of the letters in the typewriter, and of the paper upon which it was written, Miss Elliott told you ... Hack last night she thought ... to go to me to assist the inspectors in tracing the letter.

An effort is also being made to find a man who called the young woman on the telephone a few evenings ago, when this conversation took place:

MAN—Is this Miss Elliott?

MISS ELLIOTT—Yes, who is this, please?

MAN—Why, I met you at the Lenox. Don't you recall?

MISS ELLIOTT—No, I don't. What do you mean? Is this some underhand trick?

MAN—No, no. I want to call around this evening in my car and get you.

MISS ELLIOTT—Don't you dare talk to me! Don't you dare call me up on the telephone. This is some more of the dirty work that is being done against me.

Nearly Smothered With Love.

For nearly four years, Miss Elliott says, Kendall almost smothered her with his love. He gave her more than 200 presents during that time, she says. He gave her two diamond rings, and, she asserts, he represented to his nephew in New York that she was his wife. There is a pathetic note in her story of how she was crowded out of his hours and his office.

"They finally hired another girl to work in the office," said Miss Elliott. "They gave her $10 a week. When she came to the office I began to feel that it was a move against me. But I could not make myself believe that it meant what eventually happened—froze me out of the office.

"Then one day Mr. Kendall's partner came to me and began to talk. I heard him saying something about giving me a recommendation to the effect that I was the best secretary and stenographer in Boston if I would release Kendall—give him up.

I could hardly believe my ears. My heart almost stopped beating. Then my indignation burst forth.

"'Any one may talk to me,' I cried, 'you who have had us at your home and who have introduced me to your family, know ... who have been going on.... No, I shall not give up the man I love. I shall not be a party to this outrageous manner.'

"You ought to go up and see "Madame X." You ought to see the heartless man in that play when he turns his wife out of her home—throws her out, as I am being thrown out. That story would open your eyes to the enormity of the sin which is being done me.

"Why, what do you mean—what do you mean? You know how well and how long Mr. Kendall has loved me. Oh, this is unbelievable."

BRIDE WILL BRING RICHES TO HAUGHTON

Mrs. Howell, Who Will Marry Harvard Athlete, Wealthy as Well as Beautiful.

PERCY D. HAUGHTON, Harvard's head coach, and known nationally as a great athlete, spent a busy week-end receiving the congratulations of friends in New York and Brookline when his engagement to Mrs. Gwendolyn W. Howell of New York was announced Friday.

Mrs. Howell is a very rich woman. She is a grandniece of James McNeil Whistler, the famous American artist, and Howe descendant of Rev. Richard H. Howell. Mrs. Howell has been a famous beauty in her native city of Baltimore, in Paris and in New York. Her parents were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Indiana minister of Baltimore. She divorced one of the guests at her famous fancy dress balls and to her intimate friends is known as the "Queen of Hearts."

Mrs. Howell's second marriage is hardly more romantic than her first to Dr. Howell. He was known as America's richest clergyman. He died a year ago. When she went abroad as Miss Gwendolyn Whistler to finish her education she happened one afternoon to overhear Dr. Howell as he stood entranced before one of the masterpieces of her great-uncle in the Paris art gallery.

Dr. Howell could hardly find words to express his enthusiasm. It was to much for Miss Whistler and she ran away impulsively and seized Dr. Howell's hand. "I just couldn't help it," she said, "it is so good of you. You know he was my great-uncle."

It took Dr. Howell some minutes to get over his surprise, but in fewer seconds he realized that Miss Whistler was a very attractive girl. He called on her and two years later she became his wife.

They have two children now, two and four years old. She inherited $5,000,000 from her husband. His property included three New York hotels—the Aberdeen, The Regent and Bretton Hall.

Mr. Haughton is with Hamlin & Nichols, bankers and stock brokers, of New York and Boston. Before he went to that firm he was the assistant secretary of the City Trust Company.

CROCKER WINS POINT IN BRIBERY CASE

Decision Gives His Counsel the Right to Inspect Prosecution's Evidence.

A decision of Judge Stevens in the Suffolk Superior Court criminal session on important point for ex-City Treasurer George I. Crocker, who is one of eight conspirators to a trust juror in connection with the famous Crocker will case, but also establishes a precedent in Massachusetts political procedure. The decision of Judge Stevens, made despite strong objection by District Attorney Pelletier was that Charles F. Choate, counsel for Crocker, be allowed to examine all documents, letters and memoranda in the possession of the District Attorney which are to be used as evidence in the Crocker case.

After the court's decision was made the District Attorney said, in part:

It is the first time in the history of criminal trials in this state so far as I am aware, even to suggest, that the court has gone so far in compelling a district attorney to show his evidence to defendants counsel before trial.

"It means that hereafter in all criminal cases, counsel will seek to have the court allow them to see the exhibits of the government to assist them in the preparation of their defense."

Knocked Out by Water.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 11.—George Bowles, a Pittsburg specialist, who collapsed after drinking a large quantity of lemonade following his fight with Jake Able, Tuesday night, is still in a comatose condition. Physicians consider his recovery doubtful.

"Tapping the New Bock"

TOMORROW, February 13, the new "Harvard Bock," both draught and bottled, goes on sale. It will then be six months old.

We brew it from the best Caramel Malt obtainable, from the choicest Bohemian Hops, and clear sparkling Artesian Well Water in our model brewery.

It has all the flavor and tonic qualities which have made the Harvard Brew famous. Drink it at your favorite tap and order a case sent home.

Ideals in Merchandise

THERE is character building in merchandise, just as there is in men. We learn to know and to appraise goods by the same standards that we apply to people, although perhaps merchandise represents a double standard, for interwoven with its own character, good or bad, there is also the impress of the character of the maker.

We recognize the value of goods by appearance, quality of material, workmanship, finish and fitness and frequently by something else—a trade mark, a name—representing in concrete form the character, quality, and fitness of the maker; and when this is present it establishes the value of the goods more definitely than all else.

This is especially the case in older communities, where generations have labored toward the perfection of a product, and where this process has gone hand in hand with a determination to improve the goods, as well as the manner of their marketing, shall bear the impress of their builders, and represent their highest ideals in manufacture and their truest conceptions of the integrity of traffic.

Generations continuing the same line of manufacture present striking instances of goods so perfectly developed, so thoroughly known and accepted, that they have become a standard of excellence and value everywhere. Competition has devised no force potent enough to crowd these goods out of a market to which they have proved a supreme right through unnumbered days of steadfastness to honest value and to honest dealing.

For nearly three centuries of manufacturing, New England has been developing to a high plane these ideals of merchandise. Not in her cities alone but in unexpected places among her hills and beside her swift-running streams are found factories and mills out of which come goods known throughout the world; and the trade mark and "New England Made" stamped upon them, and the character for which they stand, make these goods, like the king's seal, pass current wherever there are civilized men.

Chisholm, Yale, [illegible] scratch, won hurdles in 6 [illegible], tieing record made by [illegible] of Williams [illegible].

600-yard handicap—Won by A. H. Whitman, Harvard.

IN the greatest athletic meet in the history of Boston, A. R. Kiviat of the Irish American of New York defeated Oscar Hedlund of the Brookline "Gym," and P. S. Harmon of Dartmouth in the Hunter mile, the feature event, at the B. A. A. games at Mechanics Hall last night.

Kermit Rooselt, son of ex-President Roosevelt, suddenly withdrew and did not start in the mile handicap. Nobody knew why he failed to appear.

Boston Men Carry off the Honors

There are many contests which brought the fans to their feet, the relay races, the [illegible] and the field events proved to [illegible] attractions.

The foremost athletes in the country competed against the Boston boys, but the [illegible] put it all over the visitors in nearly every event. Shepard, Horner and the other stars from outside put up a [illegible] race in respective events but [illegible] to come to the [illegible] in the finals.

It was the greatest athletic carnival in the history of Boston. It was far better than that held last year. No records were broken, yet the great throng which packed Mechanics Hall saw exhibitions seldom equalled in the annals of athletics.

Two-thirds of the crowd were from Harvard, the remainder were outsiders who liked to see good sport.

While Harvard did not show strong in the early events, the Crimson came near [illegible]ping Yale in the final relay race of the night. There were many sensational finishes. The event that brought [illegible] to their feet [illegible] was the Hunter mile [illegible] in which the foremost stars of the country [illegible].

In the [illegible] dash to the wire A. R. Kiviat, the Irish American A. C. of N. Y., [illegible] Oscar Hedlund of Brookline. P. S. Harmon [illegible] Dartmouth [illegible] third. He gave the leader a good battle.

Bonhag and Monument did not enter the [illegible] somewhat from the event.

[illegible] Horner of the University of Michigan lived up to his reputation. He won [illegible] of the B. A. A. in the [illegible] dash invitation and second in the [illegible] of the 45-yard hurdle race. In this race [illegible] equalled the track record of Mechanics Hall [illegible] of Williams, five years ago.

Interest in Standing Jumps.

The three standing jumps event excited much interest. Platt Adams of the N. Y. A. C., [illegible] champion of the country in this event, won [illegible] feet from Healy of Andover, who was [illegible] on scratch. Third went [illegible] of the N. Y. A. C., who had a [illegible] 1 ft., 3 in.

[illegible] B. A. A., Horner of Michigan and McDonald of the I. A. A. C. [illegible] the 16-pound shot put was 43 ft. 4 1-4 in. The best Horner could do was 41 ft. 10½ in. Whitney of Worcester Academy, with a handicap of five feet, won first, being credited with 47 ft. [illegible] in.

The [illegible] event of the night in which every spectator and common interest was the class. Hunter mile race.

Such entries as Bonhag, Kiviat, Monument, Hedlund, Noble and Farr had drawn hundreds to the hall. But Monument and Bonhag did not enter because of poor condition.

Rooted for Hedlund.

Everyone craned their necks as the runners lined up for what was to be practically a one-mile dash. Kiviat of the Irish A. C. and Hedlund of the Brookline "gym" were the favorites, with practically every man, woman and child pulling strong for the local boy.

Harmon, a Dartmouth youngster, who has not yet won his letter, made a hard fight and finished third.

Kiviat easily showed not only his wonderful running powers but also his knowledge of the game for he kept Hedlund from passing him and won by a slim margin.

Never in the history of Boston athletic meets was there more live enthusiasm than last night. Harvard was there strong, likewise Yale, Exeter, Dartmouth and all the other colleges.

It was one big night. The volley of noise that echoed and reechoed at [illegible] event reminded one of the finish of a football battle.

The women were the best ever. They put the men folks away to the bad as far as the cheering went. Time after time women rose in their chairs and cheered their favorite as he battled with his rivals in a desperate heart-breaking contest.

Harvard on the Job.

Harvard men were on the job early and the way they made themselves known was characteristic of students across the Charles.

Boston society was well represented at the meet, taking much interest in the Harvard runners, and especially Kermit Roosevelt, entered in the mile with a seventy-five yard handicap.

Sitting on the floor and platform were Dorothy Forbes, Helen Sears, the season's debutante, Marie Lee of Brookline, Dorothy Mandell and Dorothy Jordan. Percy Haughton, the Harvard football coach, was on the platform with his fiancee. Their engagement was announced last week.

Every available seat, every bit of standing room in Mechanics building on the platform floor and in two balconies was jammed.

Sergeant Guard of the Boylston street station, with a squad of police, handled the crowds admirably. It was estimated that fully four thousand spectators witnessed the events.

Harvard supporters were downcast when they lost the relay race to the Yale freshmen. The Crimson crossed the tape in the lead, but Harvard was disqualified for not touching its man on the fourth relay. It was a grand race, the Harvard [illegible] batting it all over the Yale freshmen. The time 3 12 was fast.

The three mile special scratch, a 40-laps event, appeared at first to be a race for the second and third place cups. In the first mile the field strung out badly and the first five men dropped out as soon as they were lapped.

At the end of the first mile, Collins of the I. A. A. C. led the field, running it in 4 48 4-5. McVicar, however, took the lead for a few circles. Collins again swept in to the lead with McVicar at his elbow. Joseph Curran of St. Stephens, Worcester, stuck closely to the two leaders.

At the opening of the third mile Collins led, the time being 10 min. 2 sec. McVicar began to fall back after the third mile [illegible] and Curran took his place, crowding Collins. Curran, an unknown, then set the crowd wild by leaping to the lead in a gamey sprint.

At its close McVicar was over a half lap behind, but in the last two laps Collins showed his form and won handily. The crowd got a surprise when on the last corner Willard of the Providence A. C. beat out McVicar, who finished fourth.

After the Yale freshmen had refused to accept the cup won by Harvard's disqualification the Crimson men offered to run again, but Yale declined. The cup will be returned by the B. A. A.

In the Cornell-Penn relay race Cornell showed great [illegible] McArthur, [illegible], Ford and Eisenhaus. They ran the 1560 yards in 3 09, which is near a record.

Fast Yale Relay Team, In Race With Harvard Star Runners In Great B. A. A. Meet Last Night

Bonhag, in the centre, [illegible] two of the chief competitors in the Hunter mile open race, which included the star milers of the country. Kiviat won the race, but Bonhag at the last moment, withdrew.

BASEBALL NEWS NOTES

Tiemler, the giant third baseman, tried out by the Yankees in the Fall of 1910, has been signed by Manager George Heckert of Trenton. Heckert owns the Williamsport franchise in the Tri-State League and says that in all probability he will dispose of it to Wilmington, Del.

Governor John K. Tener of Pennsylvania, recently inaugurated at Harrisburg, was for five years one of the leading pitchers of the National League. He played with Cap. Anson's famous [illegible]. Tener retired from the game in 1890 to enter the banking business in Charleroi. Since [then] many honors have been showered upon Mr. [Tener]. He held the office of grand exalted ruler of the Elks and later went to Congress.

President George Moreland of the Ohio and Pennsylvania League is in East Liverpool. O., urging the citizens to retain their franchise in his circuit. A mass meeting will be held in the town [Thurs]day night, when an effort will be made to have the town folk raise the funds necessary to handle this year's club.

Roger Bresnahan has finally exchanged [illegible] [Ed]die Phelps to [the] Eastern League. Bresnahan declares that he will catch as many games as George Gibson of the Pirates the coming season. Roger figures, evidently, that he is catcher [enough].

Fred Clarke will take thirty-three players to Hot Springs. Of this number seventeen are pitchers. The leader of the Buccaneers is bent on securing a [great] pitching staff. He should be able to dig [up] a few here from such an array of talent. With good ones the Pirates might have beaten the Cubs last season.

Joe York, a native of New York, but recently of [Portland], [illegible] the Winter months has ac[cepted] terms to officiate in the Western League [this coming] season. York was an umpire in the [illegible] and [illegible] League in 1910, and was one of the best members of the staff.

"Mollie" McLean, outfielder of the White Sox, was married on Saturday last to Ruth Crawley, a sweetheart of McLean's bush league days. Just before the ceremony was performed McLean called at the offices of the White Sox and signed for the coming season.

"Bob" Messenger, the outfielder, and W. R. Jones, the first baseman, from the St. Joe (Western) League club, have signed with the White Sox.

HOCKEY NEWS

Marlboro High and Framingham High have had a hard time to settle superiority on the ice. The teams decided to play a three-game series and Marlboro won the first. Framingham the second and the third was settled by an accident. The teams had been battling to their utmost, but neither could score. When the excitement was at its height Roche, the goal tender for the Marlboro team, kicked the puck into his own goal and Framingham took the victory, 1 to 0.

Brookline High finally got its chance at the Newton High team and defeated it in a Preparatory League game at Blue Burn 2 to 1. It was one of the closest games played by either team and an extra period was required. It was thought after the game that the Newton team would protest on the ground that the Brookline team had several players in the line-up that were ineligible.

Fred Hoey, the [illegible] Dorchester Combination hockey star, who has played the game [at] Franklin Field, Dorchester, for the past ten years and is considered an expert [illegible] [illegible] referee [illegible] the Boston Arena.

Bill Carleton, the crack hockey player of the Dorchester Combination hockey team of the past season, is playing the game of his life with the strong Brookline hockey club. Carleton, who lives in Dorchester, is one of the fastest [illegible] players in the amateur ranks and his good work for the Brookline aggregation has enabled them to win the majority of their games this season.

Milton Academy, although winding up its schedule the coming week, is expected to play off a [number] of games that were postponed on account of weather conditions. It is believed the team will also [extend] its schedule into March and will try to [arrange] a series of games with fast [illegible] [illegible] Milton Academy has had a very [illegible] season on the ice as a whole.

The Milton High School seven are nearing the end of their schedule and have had one of the most successful seasons on the ice of any team that ever represented the school. Washington's birthday will wind up the team's games, as far as the schedule is concerned, when they play the Somerville High seven on Cunningham Pond, East Milton.

Clarence Wannemaker of the championship Melrose High seven has achieved more fame. In the Interscholastic League game against Dorchester High at the Arena Monday he caged the puck eight times, the schoolboy record. Phillips of the Milton Academy has been a larger scorer this season, but has not yet reached eight.

Police Captain George A. Hall of the Dorchester station has called the schoolboy and professional hockey clubs at Franklin Field very much this season by detailing Patrolmen John C. Clark and Alfred Bourcier, two fast skaters, to look after the field in general and to keep the crowd outside the boarded rinks when a hockey match is in progress.

Roxbury Latin and Boston College High played a great game, with the score at 2 to 2 after an extra period. Both teams played great hockey and every goal was hard fought. The Boston College players had a little the best of it in the first half and had the Roxbury team 2 to 1, but they could not keep up the pace throughout.

Milton Academy added another game to its long list. They defeated the Noble & Greenough Independent hockey seven 6 to 1 in a one-sided game. Phillips and Handy fought the whole contest for the winning team and scored all the goals, the former caging the puck four times and the latter twice.

As soon as Captain Fritz of the Rindge Manual Training School gets out of the game the team [goes] to playing away below its standard. In the game with Winchester High, Monday, that resulted in a 2 to 2 tie and went to fifteen minutes' extra playing, Fritz was out, and he was greatly missed.

The Somerville High hockey team has hit its stride again. It won its fourth consecutive game Thursday by defeating the Cambridge Latin team, [illegible] Townsend and Laurie played good for the Red and Blue and scored three goals between them.

Phillips, of the Milton Academy team, has been [illegible] his seven as Clarence Wanamaker has [been to the] championship Melrose High team. Phillips, Wanamaker, Fritz of the Rindge M. T. S. and [illegible] of the Arlington High team would make a wonderful set of school forwards.

In the Brookline-Newton High game Thursday, the first goal was scored by Baldwin of Newton early in the first period and the tying goal was made in the last few minutes of play in the second half by Murphy of Brookline.

Clarence Wanamaker holds the season record for the number of goals in one game. In the league contest against Dorchester he scored eight out of the total of his team.

Wright, Greene and Edgarton are putting up a good game on the ice for the Cambridge Latin team. The seven lost two games during the week but it wasn't the fault of these three players.

Hemenway of the Noble & Greenough Independent team, after playing a great game, received an injured arm and will be out of it for some time.

Lowe, cover point for Arlington, and Baldwin, a forward for Newton, each scored two goals for their teams Wednesday. Both players put up a fast game.

The strong Milton Academy team will wind up its schedule the coming week with a [illegible] playing two of the best teams around Boston. Friday they will cross sticks with the Arlington High seven on Cunningham Pond and look for a hard game as Arlington has a fast team. Saturday the Milton aggregation will play Andover at the Boston Arena. Manager H. August Vogel considers this to be one of the most important contests of the season.

The strong Milton hockey club, which is connected with the Cunningham gymnasium, East Milton, and is made up of the fastest players who could be procured in Milton by the director, Dr. L. R. Barnett, has made arrangements for a game with the Melrose High school champion seven, to be played at Cunningham Pond, Saturday, February 25. The seven are playing a grand game at present and will make Melrose go some to defend their title.

New, strong, highly elevated electric lights have been erected on Franklin Field for the benefit of the skaters and those desiring to enjoy a game of hockey on the rinks in the evening. The lights are placed on the ice at short distances, and when going illuminate the field to great advantage. Groundkeeper Jeremiah Downey keeps the ice there in fine shape, having the ice as smooth as glass and thoroughly cleaned off.

Arlington High won its second game of the week Wednesday, when it defeated the Newton High seven, 4 to 3, in their annual game at Brae Burn. The Arlington team has been used to playing on open ice, and when it went inside the boards could not muster its usual speed and team work. Arlington led at the end of the first half, 2 to 0, but Newton came back strong in the second period and gave the opponents a hard run.

One of the easiest goals ever made in schoolboy hockey was made by Cambridge Latin in its game against Arlington High. Buttrick, the best goal tender in the schools, has been stopping the puck all kinds of ways throughout the season, but in the contest with Cambridge Latin he became careless, chased a substitute away, left the goal uncovered and Captain Baker pushed the puck in.

The Wellesley High seven has not played a game for several weeks, on account of no ice in that section. Previous to the layoff they were going in great style and had won several straight games. Many of the players have been keeping in condition, however, by playing basketball.

Stacey Sears, the guard of the strong Milton High seven, has blocked numerous goals this season and is considered a wizard at the position. Besides being connected with [his] high seven, he is a member of the Milton hockey club, where he has also played a great game.

The three Godde brothers have been putting up a good game for Winchester High this season at the forward positions. They are good skaters and can follow the puck in fine shape. In the game with Rindge, Paul and Will scored the goals, the only two made.

CONNIE MACK FEARS THE HIGHLANDERS

Declares the Team That Beats Them Next Season Will Win the Pennant.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 11.—Just because the Athletics carried off a few gewgaws in baseball last season it does not necessarily follow that Connie Mack considers them unbeatable.

"Do you think that the Athletics will have this year's pennant clinched by April 30," the manager was asked to-day.

"We expect that race this year and a hard one," said Connie. "Certainly nothing has happened to cause me to lose faith in my team, but championships are never decided at this time of the year. For the Athletics to repeat, the team must be in the best of condition and never let up for a second. We were fortunate last season on the question of injuries and I may not be so lucky this year.

"There are two or three clubs who did not figure last season that should be dark horses this year. Two of the clubs I have in mind are Chicago and Cleveland. Both Duffy and McGuire have added immense strength to their teams during the Winter and it would be foolish for anybody to count those teams out of the pennant running.

"Detroit is always dangerous. The Tigers have tremendous batting strength and are game fighters to the last. They should be better this year than last, which means that the Athletics will have to work hard to beat them.

Boston always has a good club. They have a grand outfield and infield and a fine pitching staff. I can't understand how it could go bad this year.

The real team in the league, however, is New York. I am equally more afraid of the Highlanders than any other rival club. Their pitchers and catchers are young and should even do better work this year than last. They showed more scientific and inside stuff last season than any of their opponents.

I consider Hal Chase one of the greatest players in the country and believe that it won't be long before he is rated just as highly as a manager. The team that beats the Highlanders next season is going to win the pennant.

REVERE HIGH LOSES.

St. John's Prep Five Is Winner by Score of 40 to 13.

The game was clean and very interesting. Lynch, the star forward of the Prep team, and Sheehan, the big center, played well for St. Johns. Lynch shot eight baskets, while Sheehan shot five. Smith played well for Revere, scoring half their points. The line-up:

ST. JOHN'S PREP.		REVERE HIGH

HARVARD SPRING SPORT SEASON BEGINS IN RUSH

Baseball and Crew Candidates Will Be Called Out To-morrow—Long, Hard Pull of Training Starts at Cambridge—Great Prospects for Crew; Baseball Improved

By E. V. B. PARKE

SPRING SPORTS at Harvard open in earnest to-morrow with the calling out of the baseball nine and the varsity crew candidates, and from then on it will be one long hard pull for both of these aggregations until Yale is met in New York and on the Thames, respectively.

The Winter season, which actually means only hockey at Harvard, is to all intents and purposes concluded, for only the final game of the season remains and that will be played in New York.

Rattling Good Crew and Nine.

Harvard enters the Spring sporting term with excellent prospects for the varsity eight, and a good outlook for the baseball team, as far as material is concerned, and this, coupled with the appointment of a new and experienced coach for the nine, makes the outlook still brighter.

Ex-Captain Jesse Waid at No. 7, E. C. Bacon at No. 5 and R. H. Whitney at bow, are the only men who will be missed from the squad, while to take the places of these there are two exceptionally promising oarsmen—namely R. T. Hooper and G. P. Balch, the latter holding a seat in the four. Both are experienced.

Although the freshmen crew last year [illegible] above the average, A. M. Goodale [illegible] might displace [illegible] the captain of the varsity eight at stroke in the big shell.

Should Goodale take the first seat, Cutler will [illegible] which [illegible] power [illegible] position, which is practically as important [illegible].

[illegible]

Voorhees, coxswain of the varsity four, [illegible] get the position on the eight. King, [illegible] and Acenos, the freshmen coxswain last year, has hardly had the experience to warrant putting him in the varsity shell at once. Other promising men from the freshmen crew last year, who may be [illegible] upon in forming the varsity four, are P. H. Keays, G. Stratton, [illegible] and G. von L. Meyer, Jr.

New Outlook for Baseball.

Until about four years ago Harvard was [illegible] sure winner in the baseball championship series with Yale. Despite the fact that since that time, the Crimson has had fully as good material as in the days when she always pulled out the championship, and Yale has had merely average material, Harvard fell into a losing streak.

It is the opinion of Harvard men that poor and inefficient coaching, which failed to get the best out of the players, was [illegible] of the [illegible] downfall. The former coach resigned just before the final game with Yale in New York last June and Dr. Frank Sexton was appointed to succeed him.

Harvard's candidates for the nine this year are good, although two of its most dependable players last year were lost when Captain Lanigan, third baseman, and Hicks, the premier twirler, took their degrees. In addition Gardner, a substitute fielder, finished his course, as did also Marshall, the shortstop.

The veterans eligible for the nine are Captain McLaughlin, who can hold down the initial sack or do a stunt in the box with credit; Babson, Minot and Keays, outfielders, and Potter, the second baseman, and one of the best players in this position that Harvard has had for a long time. These men will do to form a nucleus and there is a good group of candidates to fill in the other positions.

Many Box Candidates.

For the pitcher's job, to help out Captain McLaughlin, there are a number of good men. McKay, the big tackle on the eleven, has not been eligible for the nine for two years, but this year he will keep in good standing. He has a fast ball and a good assortment of curves for a college pitcher. Felton is another good man, who was ineligible for his freshman team last year. Then there is Frost, a sub twirler on the varsity, and Bartholf and Hardy, sub box artists last Spring.

For [illegible] Lewis, the [illegible] end, is the most likely man, and although he has done no playing in college, he [illegible] being ineligible for his freshman nine last Spring, he is an able and heady player and also a good hitter, an asset which Harvard sorely needs. Reeves is another candidate for this position and he will be backed up by Graves and [illegible], the freshman back stops.

First and second base are accounted for with McLaughlin and Potter, while [illegible] a sub, seems a likely man for the [illegible], although he is inclined to hurl the pill over the Stadium frequently in his endeavors to catch the runner at first. His wing can be clipped, however, and as he is a steady fielder, he may go.

Tomes, an all around man on the freshman, may well take the third sack job and do good work there, as he can wield the stick to advantage.

The Harvard outfield last year was rather weak, and as Minot, Kelly and Babson, who are veteran candidates for the position, may easily be displaced, the freshmen outfielders will [illegible] look in their [illegible] in their work in the garden. The [illegible] promising men from the freshmen are Coon, Lowrey and Hollister, all fair hitters.

YALE OARSMEN PLAN THREE BIG RACES THIS YEAR

Besides Harvard Regatta Dual Event at Princeton Is on the Card.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 11.—Plans for the [illegible] season [illegible] to-day by the Yale rowing management make it the most active of any program ever projected by a Yale crew. Three races are [illegible], including the annual regatta with Harvard and a dual event at Princeton, the first intercollegiate race rowed by the Tigers since [illegible] has been installed as a regular sport there.

While the rowing officials said to-day that no arrangements have been completed for [illegible] it is [illegible] that the event with Harvard [illegible] Princeton will [illegible] on the schedule when it is announced.

[illegible]

Frost Favors Cornell Race

[illegible] believes that this would [illegible] addition to the rowing [illegible] the distance to [illegible] The entry of the crew into the American Henley races at Philadelphia is also favored by some of the rowing men.

Jack Field Is Promising.

[illegible] week Jack Field, the football player, has been kept at [illegible]. Although he is a novice in rowing, his work is the most promising of that of any of the [illegible] candidates for [illegible].

[illegible] Philbin of the freshman crew [illegible] has been promoted to No. [illegible] York, Oldenborg and Patterson, all football men, are in the waist of the shell.

Van Sinderen, who rowed No. 5 last year, has been kept at stroke for a month [illegible] seems sure to be retained in that position for at least one of the regattas [illegible] the program.

[illegible] and Livingston are stroking the other two crews. Howe, of the [illegible] eight of last year is being tried at stroke. Buckingham has not been rowed in the varsity eight the past week.

Closing Events in Outing Club's Winter Carnival.

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 11.—The final events in the Dartmouth outing club's Winter carnival were held this afternoon. The opening race was the 100-yard snow shoe event in which J. L. [illegible] of Portland, Me., finished first, in 13 seconds. G. B. Wallis, '13 of Franklin, N. H., second and A. S. Hoiway, '12 of Sandwich, Mass., third.

The 220-yard snow shoe race, which followed, was close and exciting. A. S. Holway finished first, with a record of thirty-eight seconds, J. L. Day second, and W. T. Jones, Jr., of Brooklyn, N. Y., third.

Only six men qualified for the 100-yard ski race. A. T. Cobb, '12 of Berlin, N. H., finished first in 18 4-5 seconds, with L. [illegible] Shattenberg of Alston, Mass., and K. H. Harris, '11 of Brattleboro, Vt., second and third.

The 220-yard ski race had seven entries. Near the finish all but the three leaders were in a bad spill. A. L. Cobb added another win to his list in this event with C. S. Shumway, '13, of Bradford, Vt., second, and F. H. Harris third.

In the class snow shoe relay race the sophomore and freshman teams tied, with the juniors and seniors following. The relay course was 100 yards for each man. This race developed into a comedy of accidents, nearly every contestant taking a fall before the finish.

After the race the hockey game between Dartmouth and Mass. Aggies college took place. Dartmouth's 4 to 0 victory was not easily secured. During the greater part of the game the Aggies kept the puck in the vicinity of the Dartmouth goal, and at all times played an aggressive game. Norris, Dartmouth's goal tender, kept the wearers of the Red from tallying.

EASY FOR CRESCENTS.

The crack Crescent Hockey team found little difficulty in defeating the Milton "Gym" seven by a score of 10 to 1 at the Cunningham rink, Milton, yesterday afternoon. Last year's champions played their usual fast game, their whirlwind playing sweeping all before it. The Milton seven put up a good game, but was not quite equal to the varied attack of the Crescent players.

The stars of the game were Skelton, Telford and Davenport. It was due chiefly to the star playing of these men that the Crescents were able to win so decisively. For the losers Keep and Belton played the best game.

The lineup:

CRESCENTS.		MILTON GYM.
Tuck, f	f.,	Keep
Brown, f	f.,	Forden, Curley
Skelton, f	f.,	Currier
Telford, f	f.,	Belton, Herick

Score—Crescents, 10; Milton Gym, 1. Goals—Skelton 4, Telford 2, Davenport 2, Brown, Tuck, Belton. Referee—Halmstead. Umpires—White and Clark. Time—[illegible] halves.

CANADIANS PLAY BOSTON.

The hockey "fans" have seen teams from Canada at the arena this Winter, but this is the first time that a championship seven will display its skill here. The crack McGill College hockey team, which won from Harvard, was trimmed by the Sherbrooke team.

PAPKE IS DEFEATED BY "CYCLONE" THOMPSON

Claimant to the Middleweight Championship Loses to American in Australia.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Feb. 11.—Johnny Thompson outpointed Billy Papke in a twenty-round bout to-day. Both are American middleweight pugilists. Thompson received the decision on points. This defeat is the second since Papke's invasion of Australia last fall. Although he claims the middleweight championship since the death of Stanley Ketchel, he has already been beaten by Dave Smith in Australia.

Thompson came to Australia with Papke, but was never considered a top-notcher.

This effectually disposes of Papke as a middleweight world's champion. "Cyclone" Thompson is a comer, but has not been classed as a near-champion.

Klaus Meets Houck In Elimination Bout

Part of the Middleweight Problem May Be Solved at Armory A. A. Encounter.

The [illegible] which the middleweight championship [illegible] itself at present may be [illegible] up Tuesday night when Frank Klaus and Leo Houck, both claimants for the title, meet at the Armory Club. This is the second time the men have been matched, the first occasion resulting in a no-decision contest. Houck bases his claims for the championship on the fact that he has twice decisively beaten Harry Lewis. Houck, while a good worker, is only one of the many who try to make the public believe they have the goods. Jimmy Gardiner, Billy Papke, Cyclone Thompson, and a whole lot more are in this class.

Billy Papke's claims are set at naught, however, by his loss to Cyclone Thompson yesterday at Sydney, N. S. W. Accordingly it looks as though the title left by Stanley Ketchell is still hung in the air.

Klaus and Gardner have fought three times. On the first occasion Gardner was handed an awful walloping, going down in the first few rounds. He came back again in the second [illegible] defeating Klaus decisively, and proving that he was not in form when he first met the Lancaster man. The third meeting came two weeks ago when the decision was a draw.

The betting is fairly even, neither man's supporters willing to give odds. Klaus must show better form than he did in his match of two weeks ago before he attempts to prove his claims to any title, but at the same time the coming scrap may have a lot to do with the ultimate settlement of this affair.

THRILLING BATTLE BETWEEN LEADING CANDLE PIN CLUBS IS WAGED IN GREATER BOSTON BOWLING LEAGUE

Chelsea Square and Murray & Irwin Teams Are Fighting for Every Inch ... an Effort to Carry Off the Championship

By ED. COGSWELL.

THERE is nothing in sight this week to stop the leaders in the Greater Boston City League from retaining their relative positions in the thrilling race now in full sway. Chelsea Square is scheduled to meet Allston and should capture all four points, while Murray & Irwin, which is three points back of Chelsea Square in the standing, has equally as soft a spot in hitting Winthrop.

The star match appears to be Carruth playing Revere at the latter's alleys, as the race is close between the teams for third and fourth places, two points only separating the fives. With these two

The results of the last matches made a shift in the individual average, Fitzgerald of Chelsea Square taking the lead from Walsh of the same team by a few pins. Armstrong and Rouse are right in the hunt for this prize, however, each having an average of fractions over 101. Regarding averages, the wonderful bowling of Jimmy Burns' Chelsea boys is attested by their total pinfall to date showing an average of just 500 for a string, sixty strings having been rolled.

[illegible] battling, it gives J. Sullivan's Maiden team the opportunity of going up a notch, as [illegible] Cambridge is its opponents over the Auditorium alleys. The other matches are Elks at Adams Square and Boylston at Prospect.

BLOOD POISON

One thirty-day course of Berlino Pills will make you feel that you never had the disease. All aches, rash, copper-colored spots, throat symptoms removed in nine days; stops falling hair in ten days. If covered with ulcers they disappear in eighteen days. If one course destroys enough germs to get these results, it must convince you how simple your permanent cure will be. Quit fooling with free-trial treatments and bottles "guaranteed to last a month." Berlino does to-day all we claim for it. Ninety-five out of a hundred of those afflicted with Paralysis, Blindness and Locomotor Ataxia come from this disease. Let us save you these legacies. BERLIN REMEDY CO., Spalding Building, 29 West Forty-second street, New York City.

BOSTON'S BIG MOTOR SHOW WILL BE BETTER THAN EVER

Acquisition of Horticultural Hall Does Not Give All the Space That Is Required to Care for the Increased Number of Exhibitors.

By J. C. KERRISON.

Now that the two big national automobile shows have become things of the past the manufacturers of the country, as well as the dealers of Boston, are preparing for the Ninth Annual Motor Show under the auspices of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association in Mechanics Building and Horticultural Hall, March 4 to 11.

The Boston show has always been a leader of the so-called local shows and while it is classed as such, it really has every right to be considered as a national exhibit. Especially is this so since it is generally admitted that the results of the Boston exhibit always equal, if not surpass, those of New York and Chicago.

Certain it is that in character and volume of exhibits the local show takes precedence over either of the two nationals. Boston has more floor area in Mechanics Building alone than either of the two national shows.

THE EXHIBIT WILL BE GREATER THAN EVER.

What will make Boston a bigger show this year than ever, is the fact that both the pleasure and commercial cars are to be displayed during the one week, the belief being that greater results can be obtained by having the interest centered in one week than to have it drag over a period of two or more.

Then again the inability to secure adequate exhibition space for the second week has had a most important bearing on this question. Extreme pressure was brought to bear upon the management to accommodate the late comers who were anxious to exhibit in the show, and even with the acquisition of Horticultural Hall, the committee is even now forced to devise ways and means to provide for these late arrivals.

When it became known that Horticultural Hall had been secured the increased rush for space was so great that almost every inch of exhibiting room in the building was sought, and the exhibit in Horticultural Hall alone will be fully as attractive as the one in Mechanics Building.

Boston has always been considered as the place where the decorative theme is brought to an artistic finish, and in this manner the show this year will be fully the equal of those that have gone before. The management promises decorations on a most elaborate and artistic scale, entirely original with Boston and when such promise is made by these men, it is always fulfilled.

That this year's automobile show will go down in history as the greatest event of its kind is beyond question, and from the [illegible] interest and enthusiasm shown, the attendance will break all previous records and will tax the capacity of both halls to the limit.

The latest models are always to be seen at the Boston automobile show, as by that time every manufacturer of automobiles, trucks and accessories of every kind and description has his latest product to exhibit and prospective purchasers are [illegible] to obtain what they have waited for.

RAMBLER BREAKS RECORD.

Kenosha Concern Surpasses All Previous Marks at Chicago.

The world's record for rapid sales of automobiles was again broken at the tenth annual Chicago automobile show, when 181 Rambler cars were sold at an average price of $2,500, making a gross total of [illegible] for seven days sales.

For three successive years the Thomas B. Jeffery Company has held the [illegible] record for the largest automobile show [illegible] of the country. Last year the sales aggregated [illegible] or 175 cars at an average price of [illegible]. At the show of the year before 100 Rambler cars were sold at an average price of [illegible].

From every section of the country reports have come of increased demand for pleasure cars, and with the rapidly changing business conditions sales for 1911 will unquestionably exceed those of 1910, the record year of the industry.

City of Lawrence Has Truck

NEW WHITE MOTOR TRUCK

MOTOR TRUCKS PROVE EQUAL TO STORM

Blizzard conditions, which prevailed in this city during the greater portion of the past week, impeded traffic by horses most seriously, but seemed not to interfere with the work of the motor truck.

On the worst day of the storm the large number of motor trucks which were [illegible] attention, a comparison of the work of the two forms of traffic being manifestly in favor of the motor truck.

Those firms which used motor trucks in their delivery systems on these days had no difficulty [illegible] work without great delay, and it was [illegible] that motor trucks have reached a stage of perfection which assures [illegible] in the hands of the business man in the very near future.

In the wholesale district, the number of commercial motor vehicles was freely commented upon, and the work they performed under exceptionally hard conditions caused many business men to [illegible].

Increasing Its Mileage.

Another 500 miles has been added to the [illegible] traveled by the Maxwell Model Q [illegible] conducted by Harvey Smith of the United Motor [illegible] Company, Columbus, O. Mr. Smith has driven the car nearly 4,000 miles over the worst roads in Ohio. He will continue the run until it becomes necessary to break the seals.

FORD OFFICE IN NEW QUARTERS

Work on the new administration building of the Ford Motor Company's factory at Highland Park, Detroit, has just been completed and the office force are now in full possession. Saturday, January 28 was moving day from the old office located at Piquette [illegible] streets to the new quarters on Woodward avenue. The work of [illegible] was completed in a most quiet [illegible] and everything was so arranged that [illegible] employe would be ready [illegible] promptly at 8 o'clock on Monday morning.

The new administration building is one of the largest and most modern of any of the manufacturing offices in the city of Detroit. [illegible]

The truck is being used to carry rubbish, ashes, etc., from the city streets to the public dump. Lawrence is the first city in the country to employ a dumping truck in this manner, and is having such excellent results with it that it is preparing to purchase another.

The Clincher Tire Must Go

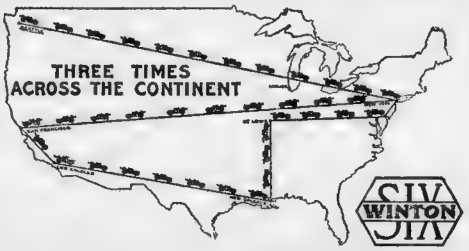
1—Seattle to New York.

2—New York to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

3—Los Angeles, via New Orleans and St. Louis to New York.

That's about 10,800 miles. A good, long distance.



WINTON SIX

Multiply It 74 Times

Now imagine not just one car, but 74 cars making that same tour.

Covering, all told, for all cars, approximately 800,000 miles. A stupendous distance.

50 Miles an Hour for 612 Days

Indeed this distance is so enormous that to equal it on the 50 to 60 mile-an-hour Twentieth Century Limited between New York and Chicago, you would have to make 816 trips, consuming 612 days,—or one year, eight months, and seven days.

And that doesn't allow for a single minute's layover at either end.

These Cars Went Farther

Marvelous as is that distance, it is still actually less than the sworn mileage covered by Winton Six automobiles in the Upkeep Contest of 1910.

In that contest, 74 Winton Six cars traveled 801,231.7 miles!

Averaging 10,827.5 miles per car—a distance greater than three times across the continent!

These Records Were Best

The best ten cars traveled 165,901.9 miles, at a total repair expense of $6.96.

These, of course, were the very best individual records that the judges could select from the reports of the 74 cars that covered 5000 miles or more each.

We Want You to Know the Rest

Now let us tell you about the other cars—the 64 that were not so good.

We present the figures in a tabulation.

Worst Records of All

Fourteen cars out of the 74 had more than $20 repair expense each.

On $5.60 repair expense per 1000 miles.

Not a particularly proud performance.

Yet it might be interesting, Mr. Owner, to compare this worst Winton Six record with your own record for the past year.

222,000 Miles With No Expense

However, note this contrast—

There were 24 cars in this contest that did not rank among the best ten, and still ran with absolutely no repair expense whatever.

These 24 cars averaged 9,253.4 miles per car.

Another Wonderful Showing

The remaining 26 cars traveled all told 244,519.9 miles.

At a total repair expense of $137.97.

Making an average expense of 56 cents per 1000 miles.

Taking Good and Bad Together

But we want you to know all the facts—good and bad alike.

We want you to realize how exhaustive a test has been made in order to show by bona fide sworn records what you may expect from a Winton Six car in strenuous service.

And we want you to know that these 74 cars, each running more than three times across the continent, averaged, good and bad records taken together, just $1.36 repair expense per 1000 miles.

This Record Covers All Cars that Traveled More than 5000 Miles each in the Winton Six Upkeep Test of 1910

No. Cars		Total Mileage	Average Miles per Car	Total Repair Expense	Average Repair Expense per Car	Average Repair Expense per 1000 Miles
10	These cars made the best individual records	165,901.9	16,590.1	$ 6.96	$ 0.70	$0.04
14	These cars made the poorest individual records	168,728.0	12,052.0	944.23	67.45	5.60
24	These cars ran with no repair expense whatever	222,081.9	9,253.4	......	.....	..
26	These cars are not otherwise classified	244,519.9	9,404.6	137.97	5.31	0.56
74	Totals for all cars	801,231.7	10,827.5	$1089.16	$14.72	$1.36

This test extended from April 1 to November 30, 1910. All the cars were regular stock-model Winton Sixes, driven in the service of their individual owners. Each owner made monthly reports of mileage and repair expense, supported by his sworn affidavit.

What These Figures Show

These figures show the possibility of owning a car able to deliver the greatest demanded volume of service at a remarkably low repair expense.

The merit that makes this promise possible is in the car itself.

For the Winton Six is a car of absolute integrity.

The self-cranking, 48 H. P. Winton Six touring car sells at $3000. With four-door body $3050.

The 1911 Winton Six is now here. You are invited to call, or to telephone for a demonstration at your home or office.

"RECIPROCITY IS TO RESTORE UNITY OF ENGLAND AND U. S."

Canadian Pact Should Be Welcomed by Both English-Speaking Peoples.

INTERESTS ARE IDENTICAL

British Liberals Favor Agreement Because They Look Upon Us as Brothers.

By WILLIAM T. STEAD.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The debate in the House of Commons this week has been almost as interesting to Americans as to the old folks at home, for the question which overshadowed all others was the reciprocity arrangement between Canada and the United States. This question embraces the greater question of the future relations, political and commercial, of the British empire and the American republic.

The debates have been full of interest because they have brought into clear relief the fundamental difference between free traders and protectionists. The former, who include the ministerialists, laborites and home rulers, enthusiastically welcome the reciprocity arrangement, not merely because it is a step nearer free trade, but because it is certain to make for closer and more friendly relations between the empire and the republic. The latter, a dispirited, outnumbered and defeated minority, hate the agreement because it makes a breach in the tariff wall by which they hope forever to divide Canadians and Americans. In Chamberlain's words, they declare the agreement takes Canada out of the imperial orbit and draws her into the vortex of continental politics and continental interest of the United States.

Removes Some Barriers.

To the tariff reformer every nation that does not fly the Union Jack and own allegiance to King George is a foreign and a rival nation, whose international trade it is to British interest to thwart and limit as much as possible. As Americans in this particular instance are the foreigners, we have the spectacle of British Tories wringing their hands and tearing their hair over the agreement because it removes some of the artificial barriers that have been set up for the purpose of alienating Canadians from Americans and keeping alive sentiments of antagonism and mutual jealousy.

The American republic should regard with the liveliest satisfaction the evidences afforded by the last three elections of the [illegible] of the British Liberals. Every speech made in the House this week proved more clearly than ever that to British Liberals the American Republic is another Fatherland. To the Liberals the American people are not foreigners; they are brothers and their interests are identical. In nearly every Liberal speech there may be discerned a passionate longing to undo the mischief wrought by George III and the Tories of his day by restoring in one way or another the shattered unity of the English-speaking world.

Promises Much for Future.

The reciprocity agreement is welcomed, therefore, not merely as good in itself, but as holding promise of realization in the future of the great ideal of Anglo-American reunion.

If another reason was wanted to convince Americans that every good American ought to be a well wisher of the British Liberals and an ill wisher to the Tories it should be found in the fact that the former are friends, the latter enemies of Irish home rule. I went down to the House of Commons last Thursday to sense the political temperature and to admire the new frescoes in the smoking room, which every American who visits London this year should make a point of seeing. There I found Devlin, the Fidus Achates of Redmond whom Healy dubbed the "Duodecimo Demosthenes." Devlin is well known throughout the English speaking world as the rising hope of the Irish Nationalists.

"How long have you been in Parliament?" I asked.

"Nine years," he replied.

"And how long are you going to remain here?"

"Two years more," he said, "and then I shall sit in the Irish Parliament at College Green."

Therein Devlin expressed the hope which the Liberal victory has given to the Irish nation. I have never been able to understand why an American can regard without antipathy the party which as its name implies exists for the purpose of frustrating the national aspirations of the Irish people.

MAY CAN KING'S SPEECH.

Suggeston That It Be Sent to the Colonies on Gramophone.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—That the King's coronation address to his people be spoken as well as written is a suggestion which has been submitted to George V. The idea, though not entirely new, seems quite feasible, for, by making a gramophone record of every spoken word, His Majesty's message could be heard just as if direct from the King's lips in the dominions beyond the seas.

It is said that a similar suggestion was made to King Edward, but he was unable to accept it. In high circles it is thought highly probable that this negative precedent will be followed.

Tragic Accident Mars Winter Sports at Famous Holiday Resort Near Vienna.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

VIENNA, Feb. 11.—A sequence of tragic accident marred the Winter sports and festivities at Semmering, a famous holiday resort in the Celtic Alps, near Vienna.

Many Viennese notables, including several of the imperial family, assembled to witness the international women's bobsled races. After the races and during the distributing of prizes, five persons set off in a bobsled down Sonnwendstein run. It was already dusk and the sled careened wildly and dashed into a tree.

All the occupants were thrown out. Dr. Grohmann, a well-known sportsman, fractured his spine and died immediately. Frau de Mago, a beautiful young woman, prominent in Austrian society, broke her neck and two other persons were seriously injured. There was a heartrending scene when Frau De Mago's mother accidentally met in the vestibule of the hotel the bearers who were carrying her daughter's body.

Americans Favorites of British Royalties

Mrs. Newhouse, Mrs. Leslie, Mrs. Montague Eliot and Mrs. Astor Are Very Popular.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, Feb. 11.—Mrs. Sam Newhouse has struck up a great friendship for the young Battenberg Princes, both of whom have shown a marked partiality for the society of American women since she was introduced to them by Mrs. Chauncey. Prince Alexander of Battenberg, indeed, has been having a thoroughly enjoyable time in the absence of his more popular brother, Prince Maurice, who has been visiting his sister, the Queen of Spain, at Madrid, and is being much entertained by the "permanent" Americans now in town. Prince Alexander spent an afternoon recently at Olympia skating with Mrs. Newhouse.

The friendship of royalties is now fairly divided among the members of the American colony. Mrs. Bonynge was the pioneer of this royal movement and her philanthropic efforts attracted the attention of Princess Christian many years ago. The two have been the warmest friends ever since.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught have long treated Mrs. John Leslie, a sister of Mrs. Cornwallis West, as one of the family. In fact, Mrs. "Jack" is known as the "American Lady in Waiting." The Crown Princess of Sweden and her sister, Princess Patricia of Connaught, are devoted to Mrs. Montague Eliot, formerly Miss Nellie Post, and Mrs. Wilfred Sheridan, formerly Miss Clare Frewen, and Prince Arthur of Connaught appears equally at home with all the leading American hostesses, Mrs. Ava Astor particularly.

Queen Mary has few American friends, but she has taken a great liking to Mrs. David Beatty, formerly Mrs. Marshall Field.

Guardian for a Prince.

VIENNA, Feb. 11.—Arrangements have been concluded for Prince George of Servia, the turbulent young man who renounced his rights as Crown Prince to go to the French military college of St. Cyr. To restrain the Prince from giving way to his passionate temper a guardian will be attached to him in the form of a personal adjutant during the time he is in France.

PARIS ACTRESS TO PLAY SAINT'S ROLE

D'Annunzio Dramatizes Martyrdom of St. Sebastian for Mlle. Ida Rubenstein

RELIGIOUS PRESS AROUSED

Poet Intended to Write Play for Dressmaker, but Met Dancer and Changed Mind.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

ROME, Feb. 11.—Of all Gabriel D'Annunzio's novels and plays which the conservative and decent element of Italy have considered as [illegible] and dangerous to the young generation's morals, the "Saint Sebastian," that will be shortly presented to the French public is the one that, more than any other, has aroused opposition in all quarters. As a matter of fact the poet had never gone as far as to give the role of a saint impersonated by a woman, who, above all, is a ballet dancer. Thus the news that the new play will be given in Rome some time in June is already prompting strong protest and the fate of it is considered as settled.

The religious press has advised the poet to drop the subject of Saint Sebastian and turn his mind to something more in harmony with his line of thoughts and moral character and, at the same time, more befitting the actress who is to appear in the title role. As usual the poet has paid no heed whatever to the protests.

This time there is also another reason why D'Annunzio will do his utmost to have his new play staged. It seems that between the poet and the Russian actress and ballet dancer, Ida Rubinstein, there is a secret compact which both have sworn to respect, or the poet would never have written the play. As is well know, the characters of D'Annunzio's novels are all living personages.

Author His Own Hero.

The hero in his novels is generally himself in the different aspects of his moral and intellectual personality, but his plays were mostly written to fit the exceptional gifts of this and that actress and exploit them for his exclusive benefit. "La Gioconda" was written for Eleonora Duse, whose soft beautiful hands the poet often sung, both in verse and in prose in his novel, "Il Fuoco."

This time, it is said, the Italian poet wants Mlle. Rubinstein to lend color and fame to his new play. It seems that he saw her in a series of tableaux vivants in a French theatre and was particularly impressed by one of the tableaux, representing a Christian martyr, drawing his last breath, tied to a marble column. This struck him as highly realistic and artistically perfect, and he began to search the record for the Christian martyrs for the necessary material.

Saints Role Best for Her.

The legend of Saint Sebastian, the young Roman officer of the Imperial Guards, who suffered marytrdom under Emperor Domitian, and whose physical beauty caused him to be called the Christian Appolius, impressed the poet as the best fitted to Mlle. Rubinstein's personality. In order to give her a prominent part in the new play D'Annunzio has divided it into four separate episodes with little or no plot and each of them ending in a grand tableau to the accompaniment of Debussy's music.

For the last fourteen months D'Annunzio has been residing in France where he went the day after his last novel, "Forse che si' forse che no,'" was put on sale, in order, it is said by many, to avoid listening to the chorus of adverse criticism with which it was greeted. Soon there came from Paris news that D'Annunzio was gathering the material for a new novel of Parisian life, and that the heroine of which would be a dressmaker prominent in the world of fashion. His meeting with Ida Rubinstein upset his plans.

"HAREM SKIRT" IS COMING.

Parisian Dressmakers to Launch It at Races in March.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—With the open of the racing season in March, leading Parisian dressmakers have decided to launch the much-discussed "harem skirts." It is said here that the idea came originally from America, but new models of "trouser skirts" now shown are rather Turkish in style.

So far they are worn only under a long coat. When the wearer is at rest, the skirt looks like any other. Only when walking is the trouser form displayed. Models shown are tight around the hips, falling loose to the instep.

SHARKS DEVOUR CREW.

Lone Survivor, Desperate, Swims to Shore.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—A dispatch which has reached Plymouth from Victoria states that, surrounded by a school of sharks, which had devoured the captain and all others of the crew, Theodore Anderson clung to the wreck of the pearling lugger Hugh Norman, without food or sleep, for nearly six days.

During this time the derelict was drifting off the desolate west coast of Australia, in waters little frequented by vessels. In despair Anderson finally plunged off the partially submerged deck, braved the sharks, and swam for more than an hour until he reached the shore.

X-Rays to Find Pearls.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Dr. J. Hall Edwards, in a lecture at Bishopsgate Institute, said that the only practical use to which he knew X-rays were put apart from medicine was the discovery of pearls. Instead of the oyster being destroyed in order to find if it contained pearls the rays could be used, and if nothing was discovered the oyster was put back into the sea in the hope that it would grow pearls.

Emperor is a determined and obstinate opponent of modern impressionism in art and realism on the stage. He practically never visits Berlin theatres, except the Royal Court Theatre, which is his own private property, and where none but old fashioned plays are produced in accordance with his imperial taste. This theatre has sunk lower in the estimation of most German critics.

According to the prevailing taste and judgment, the [illegible] theatre in Berlin is the Deutchess Theatre, controlled by Max Reinhardt, the apostle of stage realism in Germany. His name has been abhorred by the Kaiser on this account. Several of the Kaiser's sons, notably the Crown Prince, are enthusiastic admirers of Reinhardt and rarely enter the Court Theatre.

Prince Eitel Friedrich and his wife gave a dinner at the Bellevue Palace, Berlin, to which the Kaiser was invited. Four Months for Lese Majeste.

Augustus Frank, the Berlin engineer who is visiting Duisburg to deliver speeches in behalf of the Socialist party, was convicted and sentenced to four months' imprisonment on a charge of Lese Majeste. He perpetrated the crime of insulting the Kaiser by denouncing His Majesty in public speeches as an insufficient ruler who received from the country a salary of nearly five million dollars yearly for services which were not worth five hundred dollars. Convictions for Lese Majeste have been scarce in recent years, and consequently Frank's sentence excited unusual attention.

Beautiful New York Widow May Have English Manor and Newport Villa or Be Duchess of Richelieu.

By VANCE THOMPSON

Special Cable to the Sunday American

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Rarely has Paris witnessed such a keen struggle for the heart and hand of an American woman as that now going on between James J. Van Alen of New York, Northamptonshire and Newport, and Duc de Richelieu of Paris and Sarthe. Both are aspirants for the hand of the young rich and beautiful Mrs. Seth Barton French, widow of the New York banker.

Mrs. French has decided to follow the example of her literary mother, not in literature, but in love. A few weeks ago her mother, who was Mrs. Walker [illegible], was married in Salisbury Cathedral to [illegible] Inkersley.

Mr. Van Alen is now in Paris urging his suit. Mrs. French dines with him at the Ritz and other fashionable restaurants. He has made her realize the importance of his social position in America and England. On the other hand, the duke is young and bears one of the most [illegible] names in the annals of France. He is part American, as his mother was Miss Heine, daughter of a banker of New Orleans. After the death of the duke's father she married the Prince of Monaco. She is patroness of art, literature and music.

Mrs. French's friends say she has not made up her mind. She finds it hard to decide between an English manor with Newport thrown in, and a chateau at Haut Brisson, with the tempting title of Duchess of Richelieu.

American Baroness Divorced.

Another international marriage has just been broken. Baroness Moncheur has got a divorce at Brussels and has returned in triumph to Paris. The Baroness was formerly Miss Capehart of San Francisco and is a cousin as well as sister-in-law of Alexander M. Capehart of Minneapolis, who was director-general of the Liberal Arts Department during the exposition of 1900.

Baron Moncheur is a cousin of the Baron of the same name, who married Powell Clayton's daughter and was for many years Belgian minister at Washington. He now represents Belgian at the Quirinal.

The Brussels Court allowed Baron Moncheur two months during which he may appeal from the decision granting his wife the divorce. Jockey O'Connor Weds.

Winnie O'Connor, the American jockey, was married this week to Miss Neva Aymar of New York. The ceremony was performed by the Mayor of the little township of Le Gourieux, near Maisons Laffitte, the great training centre. O'Connor arrived in a motor car accompanied by Ben Rigby, an American jockey, and William Woodland, a trainer. Only equal witnesses were present. O'Connor gave the mayor $1,000 for the poor.

Francis Viele Griffin, the American poet, has entered the competition for the best poem on Alfred Leblanc's picturesque flight at Beausais [illegible] Viele Griffin is a son of the late General Viele of New York. He was educated in Paris and all his poetry is written in French. For twenty years he has been the head of the symbolist school of poets.

He points out that French aviation cannot get away from Americans. Franklin, as a member of the Academy of Science, signed the official report of the first air flight made in Paris. Doctor Jeffries, an American physician, accompanied Blanchard in the first balloon flight across the channel in 1785. Miss Dorothy Plunke, of San Francisco, was the first to use a balloon for astronomical purposes. She was appointed by the Paris Observatory in 1898 to take balloon observations of shooting stars. Now New York is likely to win the big prize for the first air poem.

The newly wed couple will live during the season in Charles street, Berkeley square. Later Mrs. Bingham means to purchase a large town residence. Her sister, Lady Newborough, is also looking for a permanent home, having tired of the neighborhood of Portland place, where she has lived for several years.

New Primate a "Good Fellow."

The newly elected primate of Ireland, Archbishop Crozier, will be encrowned on February 24. The ceremony will be witnessed by many prominent society folk.

The Archbishop is comparatively young. His progress, thanks to his attractive personality, has been remarkable. As Bishop of Ossory he resided at Kilkenny and was cultivated enthusiastically by the Marquis and Marchioness of Ormonde, who introduced him to many distinguished people.

The young Bishop at that time was often described as "dearly loving titles and pretty women." Despite his leanings for society, every one who comes in contact with him is favorably impressed. He is a noted raconteur and popular with all sorts of conditions of men. He is as much at home discussing the probable winner of the Grand National as when he is talking of the housing of the poor or work for the church missionary societies.

The Archbishop has received a special invitation to the Coronation. His wife is a semi-invalid and her intense interest in the doings of her brilliant husband is almost pathetic.

ORANGE HOME RULE REVOLT HAS BEEN DISCREDITED

Special Investigation Reveals Facts Have Been Greatly Exaggerated.

By AUSTIN F. MAGUIRE.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

DUBLIN, Feb. 11.—The other day when the result of the general election made it clear that the British Liberals and the Irish Nationalists would again control Parliament, some strong messages of defiance were issued from the headquarters of the Orangemen in the city of Belfast.

Threats were sent broadcast through the press that home rule would be fought to the last ditch by the loyal and patriotic Orangemen, and that nothing short of another battle of the Boyne—far bloodier than that of 800 years ago—would follow the opening of the new Irish Parliament.

Somebody who said he was close to Lord Erne, the Orange Grand Master, gave out the sinister story that rifles were being bought secretly in hundred thousand lots and shipped to Belfast, that nightly drills were being held in secluded places and that all was ready for the greatest war of the ages to begin just as soon as King George had affixed his sign manuel to the new charter restoring their rights as a nation to the people of Ireland.

While these warnings were shaking the clouds and rumbling the earth the days gave birth to two interesting events. The first came when no less a person than the Rev. J. H. Steel, chaplain to Lord Erne, resigned the pulpit he had occupied in Crom, County of Fermanagh, for more than twenty years, abandoned the creed of which he was a minister, entered the Catholic church and went to Rome to study for the priesthood.

Facts Against Fiction.

The other event was the sending to Ireland by the London Daily Mail of a special commissioner to write up the progress of the threatened armed revolt against home rule. The London reporter came over. He scouted through Ulster from Belfast to Donegal Bay. He saw everybody who knew anything in every locality that he visited. He talked with priests, parsons, policemen, postmasters, mill managers, letter carriers, telegraph operators, publicans, hotel keepers, farmers and fishermen. And then after long investigation and travel he went back to his hotel and sent a lengthy dispatch to his paper, the gist of which was: "No preparations are in progress anywhere in Ulster for armed resistance to home rule."

The fact is, the followers of Lord Erne never did intend seriously to decimate and destroy the entire British army. All they really meant was to destroy but a part of it. And having done this, patriotically leaving the remainder of the army intact to protect the throne and the empire, they were to paralyze the parliament in Dublin by refusing to pay taxes. This nonsense went so far as to produce the spectacle of a leading barrister, a King's Counsel, making such a fool of himself as to publicly declare that he would not pay a single halfpenny of taxes to any Irish parliament.

A friend of this bold and fearless counsel, meeting him at a club on the evening he made this declaration of war, buttonholed him in a kindly way, and, drawing him into an alcove, seriously gave him this advice:

"For heaven's sake, old man, don't be making a fool of yourself by such absurdities as you have just coupled your name with. Have some sense, talk sanely or don't talk at all. You know that if home rule is carried this year or next and an Irish parliament is established it will be by enactment of the Imperial Parliament. That means that it will be a constitutional measure and we and all other subjects must submit to it. Rebellion against it would be rebellion against lawful authority, and you or anybody else defying its decrees must take the consequences."

"Antiquated Game of Bluff."

"Of course, I know you didn't mean a word of what you said. I shall go further and predict that when we have an Irish Chancellor of Exchequer in office you'll be among the first to forward your cheque in payment of the taxes imposed by him."

And so all the talk about armed resistance in Ulster to home rule is nothing more than bluster such as this lawyer indulged in. As the reporter of the London Mail wired home to his editor: No preparations are in progress anywhere in Ulster for armed resistance to home rule. No arms are being imported openly or surreptitiously beyond the normal demands of the trade. No impartial person of ordinary intelligence believes in the stories of Orange rebellion and by all it is regarded as an antiquated game of bluff."

"Home rule for Ireland is coming," says Lord Courtney of Penwith, "and we Unionists may as well begin now to make up our minds that we cannot prevent it." And in the meantime Grand Master Lord Erne is searching assiduously for a new chaplain.

MRS. LENA CUSUMANO AND ENRICO MASCIOLI ON TRIAL FOR MURDER.

DOUBLE TRIAL FOR LIFE AT PLYMOUTH

Mrs. Lena Cusumano and Enrico Mascioli Accused of Killing Woman's Husband.

PLYMOUTH, Feb. 11.—Preparations were completed to-day for the opening on Monday of the first murder trial to be held in the Plymouth Courthouse for ten years. The trial is that of Mrs. Lena Cusumano, and Enrico Mascioli, who are jointly charged with the murder of Frank Cusumano, her husband.

Cusumano's body was found on the beach of Sunset Point, Hull, on Saturday morning, October 14, 1910. It was found trussed up in an old quilt securely bound with telephone wire. For several days it remained unidentified. Mrs. Cusumano declared that it was not the body of her husband. Others declared that it was.

Special Venire Called.

Cusumano had been killed, according to the report of the Medical Examiner by a blow on the skull, presumably with an axe. After a week's investigation and a search of the Cusumano home, the police arrested the wife and the boarder. Later they were indicted.

To-day the government's case received the finishing touches from District Attorney Albert F. Barker of Brockton, who will conduct the prosecution for the government. A special venire of talesmen has been summoned from which the jury will be chosen. Judge William Schofield will preside. The defence will be conducted by Attorney William J. Coughlan of Abington, assisted by Attorney F. J. Grady of Boston. The indictment against Mrs. Cusumano and Mascioli charges them singly and collectively with the murder of her husband.

Three Indictments.

In the final search of the Cusumano house, which led to the arrest of the wife and her boarder, officers found sheets and quilts which bore dark brown spots. In the cellar they found a woman's skirt and apron similarly marked, while an axe was dug up in the yard, together with part of a push cart which had stains that aroused the suspicions of the police.

Later the police found a partially dug hole in the shrubbery near the Cusumano home. The hole was the dimensions and shape of a grave.

The couple were arrested. The Grand Jury found an indictment against each charging them with murder separately, a second charging them jointly with murder, and a third charging each with being an accessory before the fact.

No Crime to Help Girl Escape.

WORCESTER, Feb. 11.—Failing after an hour's search of law books to find any ruling or statute to cover the complaint, Judge Utley, in Central District Court, discharged Wilfred Peltier, who was accused of attempting to aid an inmate of the Worcester State Hospital for the Insane to escape. Peltier confessed to the police he sent a file and saw to Caroline A. La Bontie so that she could effect her escape, but declared his action was taken to aid the girl's mother, and not because of a love affair the officers suspected.

HOW LINCOLN DAY WILL BE OBSERVED

Education for Negroes Will Be Furthered by Children's Penny Collection.

Aside from the general display of flags and the customary observance by the Grand Army of the Republic, Lincoln's birthday will not be marked by any celebration in Boston to-day, and the only outward observance to-morrow will be the closing of the stock exchange and federal institutions. The banks will be open as usual on Monday.

A Lincoln birthday observance will be held at the Civic Service House, No. 112 Salem street, this evening, at which the Rev. Alfred Noon will speak. At Charles Street Jail the prisoners will be treated to a concert by the Salvation Army band.

Seek Temperance Pledges.

The Massachusetts Total Abstinence Society will observe the day by making a general effort to obtain pledges all over the state. Blank pledges have been circulated during the few weeks and the society expects a large number of signatures. The canvass in a way is in honor of Lincoln who was a total abstainer during the last years of his life.

One hundred thousand pennies, it is expected, will be raised to-day by the young people of the Congregational churches in Greater Boston. Every child will be given a box in the shape of a log cabin into which it will place its pennies saved. These will be sent to the headquarters of the American Missionary Association, No. 20 Beacon street, and will be distributed in the South for educational work among the negroes and the whites in the mountain districts.

Three hundred and fifty thousand young people will take part in this Lincoln Memorial offering in the United States. It is asked that every Sunday School send at least twenty-five dollars, and from the thousand schools responding twenty five thousand dollars will be collected.

Education Fund for South.

Twenty years ago the American Missionary Association started Lincoln Memorial Sunday. Since then it has established Hampton University and other centres of education, which were in a way begun through offerings on this Sunday. A special service has been prepared by the missionary association, in which the history of the life and achievements of Abraham Lincoln are narrated, and every child is expected to memorize two different events in the life of the martyred President.

These pennies will help 15,000 youth in the different schools of the South to complete their education in trades, and also aid in teaching ten elementary branches of education to 2,000 white children in the mountains.

Among the negroes of the South this missionary association has at present 68 schools, 13,449 pupils and 18 schools with 1,777 pupils, among the whites on the mountains.

CONSERVATORY DANCE TO AID MUSICIANS

Path to Be Made Easier with Funds from Costume Ball on February 14.

As a part of a general campaign to raise funds that it may be made easier for needy students to study at the New England Conservatory of Music, the fourth annual costume ball of the Conservatory is to be held in Symphony Hall, Tuesday evening, February 14. The general campaign is well under way and sufficient money for three scholarships has already been raised.

The plan of an annual carnival was started in 1908. Each successive year it has been more of a success from standpoints of beauty and finance. Plans for this year's affair are now complete. They indicate that Tuesday night's affair will surpass all previous ones.

The grand march will begin at 9 o'clock. There will be two intermissions during the evening, each of twenty minutes' duration. The first will occur at 11 o'clock and the second at 12.30. A buffet lunch will be served in the Huntington avenue and balcony foyers.

Committee On Carnival.

The arrangements this year, as heretofore, are in charge of Percy J. Burrell, chairman of the carnival committee and president of the Alumni Association. The executive committee, consists of Ralph L. Flanders, general chairman, George W. Chadwick, ex-officio, Armand Fortin, Percy F. Hunt, Miss Jane Foretier, Mrs. Mabel Stanaway Briggs and Frederick L. Trowbridge.

SCHARWENKA PLAYS WELL AT SYMPHONY

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Xavier Scharwenka was soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the concerts of Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. He played his fourth piano concerto, a work composed less than two years ago and dedicated to the Queen of Roumania.

Scharwenka is now sixty-one years old and no longer plays with the brilliancy and technical perfection that distinguished him a dozen years ago when he was at the head of piano virtuosi.

He still retains the authority, dignity and majesty of acknowledged greatness and it was inspiring to see his march across the platform, his ceremony of seating himself and his pose as the orchestra played the prelude.

Scharwenka has not played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1891, but those who saw him then say he is changed but little in appearance, while his playing is still full of expression.

The concerto is a dainty, pretty sort of affair. Its second movement is a charming but dignified dance while the final movement is richly melodious.

The Haydn Symphony in E flat major, one of the most fanciful works of that master of melody, was played by the orchestra for the third time only, and was entirely a novelty to most of the audience.

Smetana's "Moldau" brought the program to a close. Modern composers who paint tone poems with horrid noises should consider this exquisite picture of a river rising and threading its way through uplands until it becomes a broad and placid stream. Here is descriptive music which is at the same time wholly lovely, and it is thirty-five years old.

THIS SHAMPOO HELPS TO DRY THE HAIR

"It may sound paradoxical to say that shampooing helps dry the hair," writes Mae Martyn, in the Los Angeles Record, "but it is a fact that women using canthrox in cleansing the hair and scalp find their tresses dry quicker than when shampoo mixtures are used. Aside from this, it leaves the scalp in a vigorous condition and gives the hair its natural glossy appearance.

"Next time you wash your head try this simple recipe: Dissolve a teaspoonful of canthrox in a teacup of hot water. Pour on the head and rub briskly until the scalp is thoroughly massaged, then rinse well.

"Canthrox costs but a trifle, but the only certain way to get it pure is to buy an original package."

DAUGHTER TO FIGHT WILL OF MRS. BULL

Friends of Mrs. Olea Vaughan Say She Will Try to Secure Wealth Left Hindoos.

Friends of Olea Bull Vaughan, only daughter of Ole Bull, the great violinist, said last night at Rochester, N. H., where the young [illegible] she will [illegible] will of her mother, Sara C. Bull, which, disposing of approximately half a million, gives many thousands to friends of Mrs. Bull in India and leaves the residue in [illegible] attorney. She is under the care of Dr. R. V. Sweet at Rochester, accompanied by [illegible] who was a great friend of Ole Bull.

"Always weak and nervous," the aged Mrs. Sharpleigh said of her charge last night, "this will has just about been the finishing stroke for the dear girl. The will was offered for probate last Wednesday at Biddeford. It will not come up again until March 1. I should say it is quite certain that Olea will be there to contest it."

Mrs. Bull's will leaves money to Margaret E. Noble, known in India as Sister Nivedita, to Dr. Jagadis Chunder Boss, to the Abbott of Ramakrishna, the Swami Saradananda and Mohini Mohun Chatterji.

The executors of the will are Joseph Gilbert Thorpe, Mrs. Bull's brother, and Edmund M. Parker, his law partner, both of No. 131 State street.

Ralph S. Bartlett of No. 53 State street will appear in the matter for Olea Bull Vaughan. Mr. Bartlett expressed hope last night that there will be no contest. "It is true," he said "that Mrs. Vaughan has expressed dissatisfaction because the property has been left in trust, and yet I hope she may see that this is the best plan. After certain bequests have been made she receives the income of the estate for life."

Interested in Hindoos.

The friends of Mrs. Bull were not surprised when her will was published during the week and they learned that she had left large sums of money to several distinguished Hindoos and a women's school in India.

After the successful series of conferences which she gave about ten years ago in her Cambridge home, to which were invited the leading representatives of all the great world religions, Mrs. Bull gave a large part of her time to the religious work in India. She did not confine her benefices to Christian work. Interested in the people of India by their own natives, who were her guests at the Cambridge conference, Mrs. Bull mad two trips to their country.

When she was first in India Mrs. Bull met Miss Margaret E. Noble, a cultured English lady, who is conducting a school for Hindoo women. Associated with Miss Noble is Miss Greenstuedel, an American woman.

Money for Laboratory.

In her will Mrs. Bull gave $30,000 to Miss Noble for her work. Miss Noble is known in India as Sister Nivedita, as she is an adherent of the native order of Ramakrishna, which is devoted wholly to charitable and famine relief work.

Had Miss Noble died before Mrs. Bull the money would have gone to Dr. Jagadis Chunder Bose, of the Presidency College, Calcutta, to enable him to carry on certain lines of scientific research.

Besides this contingent gift, from which he receives no benefit now, Dr. Bose gets $10,000 in cash for his laboratory work and $2,000 a year for five years.

To the Abbot of Ramakrishna, of Math, Belur, Howrah, Bengal, she left a substantial sum.

The Swami Saradananda receives $5,000. Mohini Mohun Chatterji, a Calcutta Hindoo lawyer, receives $500.

Mr. Parker said that the bequest to her friends in India, both natives and workers from this country and England, would be faithfully carried out in the spirit which Mrs. Bull intended.

"It does not at all mean that Mrs. Bull had faiths of India," said Mr. Parker. "But she was a woman of infinite toleration, one who sees good in everything, especially in the soul strivings and yearnings of all people. To her a starving woman and baby of whatever race, religion or land were just two children of her Father, to feed. Her heart went out to them." She was particularly attracted to religious teachers and leaders from India when they attended the religious conferences at her home ten years ago.

NEW HOUSEMAIDS' UNION PROPOSES TO LAY DOWN RULES FOR EMPLOYES

Leaders in movement to reform conditions governing employment of housemaids

MRS. ELIZABETH HACKETT

MISS CATHERINE McDONALD

THE housemaids of Boston have formed a union to bring about the following results.

Better treatment by their employers.

Regular family meals.

One afternoon off a week and two Sunday afternoons off a month.

Pay that will permit the girls to save something.

A word of appreciation now and then.

The establishment of a Housemaids' Home.

A story had been circulated that the union had for its object the establishment of an eight-hour-day and a minimum wage of $9 a week. This was branded as a falsehood by Mrs. Elizabeth Hackett, president of the union, Elizabeth Flanagan, the vice-president, Catherine McDonald, recording secretary; Annie McClelland, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Lida McFeaters, who organized the housemaids under instructions from the Boston Central Labor Union.

Agencies Overcharge.

The average citizen's belief to the contrary notwithstanding, the housemaids say, the employment agency shark still manages to do a rushing business by charging exorbitant prices for obtaining good positions, despite the restrictive provisions of the State law. Speaking of this phase of the question, Mrs. Hackett, president of the union, said:

"We know of cases where girls have had to pay $25 to get a good place. The fixed charge was one week's wages, as a [illegible] and the remainder was a tip. No law that I know of could prevent the payment of even higher premiums. The employment agents work the game so skillfully that the girl who refuses to give them a big present will never get a good place.

"The only way to rid ourselves of this evil is to have an agency of our own. This can't be done without a union. And, the establishment of a union agency will be a benefit to the people who want to hire reliable housemaids, as well as to the girls themselves.

"'Twill be a good benefit to girls doing housework in Boston when our union finally is strong enough to open such an agency. They will then be assured of fair, impartial, honest treatment. The people in need of girls also will find that they can secure reliable help at the union headquarters. Once this becomes known the ultimate success of our organization will be assured."

To Have Housemaids' Home.

"Don't forget to tell the readers of the AMERICAN that the union intends to establish a 'Housemaids' Home,'" interjected Miss McFeaters, who, while not a housemaid herself, is deeply interested in these girls' welfare.

"We need such a home in Boston," she continued. "Out-of-work girls, and sick girls, ought to have a home of their own. And even the girls who are well, and work steadily, need a place where they can meet their friends without being made to feel that they are under obligations to their employers.

"A self-respecting girl doesn't want charity. She isn't begging for favors. In common with all other American citizens, she is entitled to a home of her own if willing to work for it. But, being a housemaid, her only chance to have a home, (outside of the kitchen), is through her union. Oh! Of course, she might get married! But even marriage ought to be a 'union of hearts.' If a housemaid doesn't join that union of hearts, and has no relatives living here, her only chance for a real home lies in the joining of our union."

One member of the union, who refused to give her name for publication because she said it might prevent her from securing a position in the future, declared that she had to work from 6 o'clock every morning until 10.30 at night while her wages were only $4.50 a week. She was supposed to have Thursday afternoon off, but her employer usually managed to see that she didn't get it.

Several girls interviewed denied having heard of any movement on foot to enforce an eight-hour-day rule, although they were a unit in declaring that there ought to be some reasonable time limit set when, under ordinary circumstances, they might expect to be free to retire for the night. The consensus of opinion seemed to be in favor of the following usages:

That the housewives treat their housemaids more like human beings, and less like pieces of tireless machinery.

One afternoon off every week, and at least two Sunday afternoons off each month.

A wage that will permit a girl to dress decently, and still lay by something in case of need.

The display of a little common courtesy, and a little "give and take" spirit by the woman of the house.

And a word of appreciation now and then, instead of taking it for granted that a girl is in duty bound to be a "slave" because she chances to be doing housework in preference to working in some shop or factory.

All Long for a Home.

But deep down in every girl's heart there seemed to be an overwhelming desire to have a place she could call home. The employment agency evil evidently was of secondary importance to the idea of establishing a Housemaids' Home, for at its best the union agency can be only an adjunct to that home.

The greater number of the girls spoke very favorably of their employers. In fact, every tale of unjust treatment by some ill-tempered housewife was met with a story of how another woman had done something unusually kind for some other girl.

If one woman had shipped her hired girl off to the hospital because she was threatened with pneumonia, some other woman had nursed her cook through an attack of typhoid fever. The woman who refused to tell her chambermaid that she was wanted at the telephone when the girl's father lay dying in a far-off city, was speedily forgotten when listening to the story of another woman's kindness when her girl-of-all-work was falsely accused of theft by the private detective of a big department store.

But one could not possibly forget the look of happiness that shone in every girl's eye when the word home was mentioned.

SENATORS TO URGE REFERENDUM HERE

Bourne of Oregon and Owen of Oklahoma to Be Heard at State House.

"The initiative provides that people themselves may prepare and pass a constitutional amendment or an important law if the legislature persistently refuses to enact it.

"The referendum provides that an important legislative measure shall be submitted to the people upon their request before it becomes a law."—[illegible] on the Initiative and Referendum.

[illegible] about by precedent that he is unable to appear in person before legislative committees, is likely to have assistance of one of his pet measures from the Senate of the United States.

Senator Charles H. Brown of Medford, chairman of the Committee on Constitutional Amendments at the State House, said last night that the hearings begun last week on the initiative and the referendum would not be formally closed until he has heard further from Mr. George Fred Williams.

"I have received word from Mr. Williams," Senator Brown said, that Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., of Oregon, and Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma may want to address the committee. We had heard everybody who wanted to be heard when this message came to us, but of course, if Senators Bourne and Owen [illegible] appear at the State House, the committee would be glad to hear them."

It was said yesterday that Governor Foss had never felt the chains of precedent so keenly as in the Initiative and Referendum matter. He would have been delighted to talk to the Constitutional Amendments Committee in person. It was pointed out to him that he had already addressed the committee in his inaugural address, and that the parts of that address touching on the Initiative and Referendum were among the [illegible] before the committee.

"Those servants who deem that they represent themselves and not their constituents," said the Governor, "naturally object to these measures, and yet a measure which is contrary to the will of the majority has no justification. I urge upon you a resolve for a constitutional amendment to provide for the initiative and the referendum."

At the State House there is said to be no question but that the Initiative and Referendum fight in the House this year will be the liveliest discussion of this proposition Beacon Hill ever has known.

The Committee on Constitutional Amendments numbers eleven members, five of whom are Democrats. It is generally expected that all these Democrats will seek to support the recommendation of the Governor, and that the Committee, therefore, will file two reports. These reports will place the matter fairly before the House for debate.

The Republicans on the committee are Senate Chairman Charles H. Brown, Senator Wilmot R. Evans, Jr., House Chairman Russell D. Crane of Cambridge, Representative Alvin E. Bliss of Malden, Representative Harold H. Flower of Greenfield and Representative Francis M. Hill of Lynn.

The Democratic committeemen are Senator John F. Malley of Springfield, Representative Thomas P. Curtin of Ward 24, Representative James H. McInerney of Ward 19, Representative Arthur Bogue of Lynn and Representative Thomas J. Casey of Ward 14.

MME. DEREYNE, WHO WILL DANCE WITH SNAPSHOT ARTISTS

FELY DEREYNE

MADEMOISELLE FELY DEREYNE with true French ingenuity, has devised a perfectly fair and impartial plan for apportioning her dances at the Newspaper Photographers' ball in Horticultural Hall on February 20. She will dance with every photographer who shows her a photograph of herself which he took.

Mademoiselle Dereyne is the captivating soprano of the Boston Opera Company forces. She will be one of the guests of honor at the Newspaper Photographers' ball. When invited to attend she accepted gayly. When asked if she would dance she said:

"Yes and I'll tell you how I will divide my dances. I have been 'snapshotted' as you say by the newspaper photographers times without end. I have posed for them in a variety of attitudes. Now I will dance with any of you who have taken my picture. The test of eligibility shall be for each photographer to bring and show to me at least one photograph he took of me himself. That shall be his right to a place on my dance order."

This plan was instantly indorsed by the ball committee as being a fair test. Mademoiselle Dereyne is an exquisite dancer, as well as being a very sprightly and attractive young woman.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 11.—Bion J. Arnold, traction expert, who is credited with having solved the traction problem in Chicago, addressed the Conservative Club to-night on "The Traffic Problem in Our Cities, Chicago's solution."

SEARCH IS RENEWED FOR WHITTIER GIRL

Renewed efforts will be made to-day and all this week in the search to locate Florence Whittier, the nineteen-year-old Ipswich girl who mysteriously disappeared five weeks ago Friday in Boston. The conviction has steadily grown within the past week that the girl, who has now been missing forty days, is in or near Worcester.

Since a week ago a number of persons living in Worcester have declared they have seen and recognized the Whittier girl. All of the clews furnished the police indicate that the girl is in Worcester county [illegible]

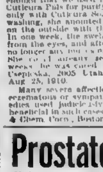
Yesterday three persons, one of them a Worcester [illegible] stated they thought they had seen the missing girl. Their statements placed her in Worcester, later on a Fitchburg electric car and then lastly in Sterling, between 10 and 11 o'clock [illegible] morning.

[illegible] by the Watch and Ward [illegible] in Lynn [illegible] that a young woman [illegible] for a hypnotic [illegible] was the Ipswich school girl. This was found to be untrue. It was found that the hypnotic subject resembled Miss Whittier in many respects.

The more [illegible] evidences that the girl is still living and probably not very far from here have been coming to the [illegible] county. From [illegible] the AMERICAN, and from statements made by Worcester people to special investigators who are [illegible] that [illegible] place with [illegible] yesterday [illegible] girl thought to be the missing Miss Whittier [illegible] night in [illegible]

EYES RED, WOULD BURN AND STING

Grew Constantly Worse. Could Hardly Work Any More. Used Cuticura Remedies, and in Six Weeks She Was Cured.



"It is just a year ago that my sister came over here to us. She had been here only a few weeks when her eyes began to be red, and to burn and sting as if she had sand in them. Then we used all of the home remedies. She washed her eyes with salt water, used hot tea to bathe them with, and bandaged them over night with tea leaves, but all to no purpose. She went to the drug store and got some salve, but she grew constantly worse. She was scarcely able to look in the light. At last she decided to go to a doctor, because she could hardly work any more. The doctor said it was a very severe disease, and if she did not follow his orders closely, she might lose her eyesight. He made her eyes burn and applied electricity to them, and gave her various ointments. In the two and a half or three months that she went to the doctor, we could see very little improvement.

"Then we had read so much how people had been helped by Cuticura that we thought we would try it, and we cannot be thankful enough that we used it. My sister used the Cuticura Pills for purifying the blood, bathed only with Cuticura Soap, and at night after washing, she anointed her eyes very gently on the outside with the Cuticura Ointment. In one week, the swelling was entirely gone from the eyes, and after a month, there was no longer any burning or watering of the eyes. She could already see better, and in six weeks she was cured." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Csepleska, 2005 Utah St., St. Louis, Mo. Aug. 25, 1910.

Many severe affections of the eyelids are eczematous or sympathetic. Cuticura Remedies used judiciously seldom fail to prove beneficial in such cases. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, for free booklet.

"Keep chickens,"

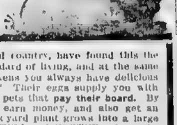
and live better at less cost.



THOUSANDS of families, in city and country, have found this the easy way to IMPROVE their standard of living, and at the same time LOWER THE COST. With chickens you always have delicious food, for the family or for "company." Their eggs supply you with ready money or ready food. They are pets that pay their board. By keeping chickens, boys and girls can earn money, and also get an excellent training. Sometimes the back yard plant grows into a large business, like those of CORNING, CURTISS, and FOSTER, who make many thousands of dollars a year.

Raising chickens pays if you know how whether you keep a dozen hens or run a large poultry-farm; but you need the best guides. Many get from their chickens less than HALF as much as they might get with the guidance of any of these three splendid modern poultry-books, which tell the experience and methods of the most successful modern poultry-raisers.

These methods have all been tested by actual experience and proved successful. The FARM JOURNAL stands back of them for it has investigated them and KNOWS. They can be used with six hens or six thousand. Of the Corning Egg Book alone OVER 100,000 COPIES were sold in one year. Many are using these methods with splendid success and profit.

The Corning Egg Book is the great guide-book for back-yard chicken raisers. It tells how two city men in poor health, with no experience, starting with thirty hens, built up in four years an egg business which in one year, with 1953 hens, made an average profit of $6.41 a year per hen. [illegible] the most eggs in winter, [illegible] LAYING ALL WINTER, [illegible] EGGS, EGGS. It gives [illegible] IN SECTIONS [illegible]

Curtiss Poultry Book tells how Roy Curtiss, a farmer's boy starting with a few neglected hens has built up at NIAGARA FARM one of the best-paying poultry plants in the world. It's agreed that if his father would furnish food, he, Roy, would supply eggs and chickens for the farm table and all left over were to belong to him. In two years Roy was doing so much feed that his father had to cry quits, but the boy kept right on. His growth [illegible] him, and the business grew and grew. But they had no guidance and had to learn by their own mistakes. Such a guide as the Curtiss Poultry Book would have saved them thousands of dollars. This capital book was written right at Niagara Farm by the veteran [illegible] Michael K. Boyer. [illegible]

"Poultry Secrets" is a remarkable collection of successful "wrinkles" in poultry raising, secured and edited by MICHAEL K. BOYER (known to poultrymen as "Uncle Mike"). Many of these were treasured secrets of famous poultrymen, guarded with jealous care because of their great value. We paid hundreds of dollars for them. This is the ELEVENTH EDITION, and thousands are using these methods with great profit.

W. R. Curtiss tells his successful method of hatching 80 per cent. more pullets than cockerels; the Philo System is described and explained, the "15-cents-a-bushel" and "5-cents-a-bushel" green feed secrets, secrets of the Angell, Palmer, and Hogan Systems; Boyer's method of absolutely insuring fertility of eggs for hatching; Townsend's system for preventing death of chicks in the shell; Felch's famous mating chart, suppressed for many years; feeding and fattening secrets, and MANY OTHER PRICELESS SECRETS are here disclosed for the first time.

ANY ONE of these books, and Farm Journal rest of 1911 and all of 1912...... 50c	ANY TWO of the books, and the Farm Journal for three years.. $1.00	ALL THREE of the books, and Farm Journal for two years $1.00

Be sure to say plainly WHICH BOOK or books you want.

"GARDEN GOLD" is a splendid 64-page guide book for owners of small vegetable gardens. There's money in back yards and GARDEN GOLD tells of many ways to cut down the cost of living. It may be substituted for any one of the three books offered above.

Farm Journal (thirty-four years old) has over 800,000 subscribers, MORE THAN ANY OTHER FARM PAPER. It is of great value to everybody, in town or country who wants to grow fruit, vegetables, poultry, eggs, milk, butter, etc. It is a favorite with mothers, housekeepers, boys and girls, as well as men. "Cream, not skim-milk," is its motto. It is clean, brief, bright, "boiled down," intensely practical. It tells in a few words, just at the right time, what to do NOW, and the best way to do it. It is now running a very interesting series, "Back to the Soil," stories of city people who have gone to the country to make a home. If you care about outdoor life no matter how many other papers you get, you and your family ought to have the Farm Journal.

With any $1 order, if mailed in TEN DAYS of date of this paper, we will send also the famous POOR RICHARD ALMANAC for 1911, full of wit and wisdom for the rural home. Address your letter just like this:—

The Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, pastor of Trinity Church, gets one of the highest salaries paid to a clergyman in New England. He receives $8,000 a year. Bishop Lawrence gets about the same salary, but is allowed about $2,000 a year for the rental of a house. He owns the house he occupies as the Episcopal residence of the diocese and is allowed rental for it.

The Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers, pastor of Tremont Temple, is paid a salary close to $10,000. The Rev. William H. van Allen, [illegible] pastor of the fashionable Episcopal Church of the Advent, receives about $4,500 a year. The Rev. E. S. Rousmaniere of St. Paul's, gets $5,000 a year. There is a fund in this church to give a life pension of $1,000 annually to the widow of its clergymen, two of whom are now in receipt of that sum.

The Rev. Dr. W. W. Weeks, formerly of Toronto, has just been called to the First Baptist Church from Springfield, and his salary is said to be $10,000. If that [illegible] the highest paid clergyman in New England. The Rev. F. H. Rowley, president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, had $7,000 a year in that pulpit.

Other Well Paid Preachers.

Other clergymen whose incomes are known are the Rev. Thomas Van Ness, of the Second Church (Unitarian), who gets $5,000, the Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham, of the Arlington Unitarian Church, is said to receive close to $8,000, Dr. Elwood Worcester of Emmanuel Church, the advocate of psycho-therapeutic healing $6,000, the Rev. Dr. Edward Cummings, successor of Dr. Edward Everett Hale, at the South Congregational (Unitarian) Church, $6,000.

The Rev. Dr. George A. Gordon, of the Old South and Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad of the Park Street Church, both receive salaries which place them pretty near the top of the list.

Well known men like the Rev. Dr. O. P. Gifford, pastor of the Brookline Baptist Church, get very moderate salaries, less than half of what is paid to the top-notchers financially. The Rev. J. Van Niece [illegible] young preacher of the [illegible] Church, Brookline, receives only $1,800 a year.

"[illegible] I get along very nicely on it," he said. "I believe that the salaries of many preachers are altogether too high. It may be that many are not paid enough. But the preacher who is honest does not go into the ministry for its financial rewards nor do such keep him there.

If money is an influence with him he is not the right man in this sacred calling, no matter what is paid to him, whether it be $2,000 to $10,000 a year, he is [illegible] much more than he is worth."

A very different story is that told of the [illegible] profession. Not less than [illegible] are generally credited with [illegible] average of $100,000 a year. [illegible] Sherman L. Whipple, who was [illegible] opponent against Senator [illegible] Robert M. Morse and Alfred Hemenway. Mr. Whipple is also said to hold [illegible] for a single fee—$250,000 for [illegible] settlement in a will case.

[illegible] D. Brandeis is generally credited [illegible] profession with an income from it of $75,000, while Colonel William A. Gaston, the head of a big law firm as well as Boston's biggest bank, the Shawmut National, is said to make between $50,000 and twice that a year by his law alone.

Guy W. Currier, one of the foremost lawyers in Massachusetts, is one of those receiving $75,000 per year.

Constantino's Salary Large.

Florenzio Constantino, the leading tenor [illegible] Boston Opera Company, has an in[illegible] his voice which is second only to Caruso's. He receives from the Boston Opera House in the vicinity of $1,200 a performance and makes between fifty and sixty appearances during the local season. This brings him close to $70,000.

As soon as the Boston season is over Constantino hies him to Buenos Ayres where he receives $2,000 an appearance and shows himself about twenty-five times during the comparatively brief Argentine season. Adding the $50,000 so gained to the $70,000 paid him by Bostonians, he crosses the Andes and appears in Santiago and Valparaiso about fifteen times for a paltry $2,500 per appearance.

When the Chilian season is over it is time to return to Boston. In addition to about $150,000 per year gained from opera, Constantino is in receipt from a phonograph company of enormous royalties variously estimated at from $50,000 to $100,000 per year.

Giovanni Zenatello, the tenor, appeared fifteen times with the Boston company and received $1,200 an appearance. His wife, Maria Gay, had the same number of appearances and between them the singers carried away about $30,000 in Boston money since Gay received about $800 for each time she sang.

Carmen Melis is said to receive about $1,000 a night and will appear about thirty times during the season.

Henry Russell, the director of the Opera House is said to get a salary of about $15,000 a year.

Rated as safely in the $50,000 a year class are Samuel J. Elder, a lawyer of international fame by reason of his recent appearance in the fisheries arbitration at The Hague; Charles F. Choate, Jr., said to be the most resourceful and one of the most successful corporation lawyers in New England; Moorfield Storey, Guy W. Currier, than whom lawyers agree there is no better in the Commonwealth; Boyd B. Jones, Walter I. Badger, Thomas W. Proctor, Henry F. Hurlburt, Daniel H. Coakley and Hollis R. Bailey.

NICER THAN POWDER
—EASIER TO APPLY

Mrs. Mae Martyn, writing on beauty subjects for the Los Angeles Times, says: "Society women everywhere are discarding paints and powder and using a liquid preparation, which is easily applied and dries quickly, giving the complexion a soft, pink and white glow impossible with powder or rouge.

"An excellent and trustworthy lotion for the complexion can be made at home by dissolving 4 ounces spurmax in ½ pint hot water, then adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine.

"This recipe is popular among many social leaders, as it is impossible to detect, and after being applied does not rub off like powder, nor does it require further attention. It is inexpensive and easy to make, and every woman should give it a place on her toilet table."

FLORENCE MALONE

FLORENCE MALONE, the "Titian-haired" young woman around whom many of the incidents in James Forbes' comedy, "The Commuters," revolve, earned her dramatic spurs by dint of hard work in the early stages of her dramatic art. Lured to the footlights when in her teens, Miss Malone played juvenile parts under Fiske O'Hara and Andrew Mack at the outset of her stage career.

One afternoon Mrs. Leslie Carter was a guest at a box party at one of Andrew Mack's performances. She saw Miss Malone and liked her work so well that an offer to join the prominent emotional actress' company, then playing "Zaza," was soon in the young woman's hands. It was accepted and the attachment that sprang up between Mrs. Carter and her protege, as she always called Miss Malone from that time on, grew to such proportions that they hated to part company.

However, James Forbes chanced to witness a performance of Miss Malone last season, and seeing in the young woman his ideal of Hetty Brice in "The Commuters," he made her a most flattering offer to play the part in his new comedy. She accepted and her portrayal of the young wife proved an instantaneous artistic success.

THE mysterious disappearance of Florence Eva Whittier of Ipswich, a month ago, and of Miss Dorothy Arnold of New York, several weeks ago, have called attention to the fact that there are a remarkable number of disappearances in all of the great cities in the country, many of which are never solved.

In Boston it was estimated yesterday that there are about 1,500 disappearances a year. Of course most of the girls or boys who go away return. But a goodly per cent. of them are never heard from again.

It seems incredible that a young woman could drop out of sight as though literally swallowed up by the earth, but it has been done many a time in Boston. For instance Miss Grace Stevenson disappeared something like fifteen years ago and not a word was ever heard from her.

Why Girls Run Away.

In later years some people thought that in a popular actress they recognized Grace Stevenson, but the actress would not admit it even for a good press notice.

When Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly investigated the "baby farms" of New Hampshire, which resulted in closing them up, she found that thirty-one girls had disappeared mysteriously from their homes and their relatives had written pathetic letters to the women who ran these places in an effort to trace the missing girls.

There are several reasons why girls run away from home, the principal ones of which are:

A love affair.

A desire to see the world.

Police Find Many.

But sometimes, as in the cases of the Whittier girl and the Arnold girl, none of these reasons can be assigned for the cause of their disappearance. Miss Mann, a beautiful young woman of Columbus square, left home one day last week and was found at the point of death in a hospital in Boston. She had tried suicide by gas. Mental trouble was assigned for this girl's disappearance.

Nearly every day at least half a dozen persons are reported missing at Boston police headquarters. Slips containing a description of the missing persons are read to the policemen before they go into the street.

If the policemen hear of any one that answers the descriptions they hunt up the person. A good many persons are found by the police.

LABELS FOR CANNED MILK.

Measure Indorsed by Experts Calls for Formula.

A measure has been introduced in the Massachusetts Legislature which provides that all evaporated, concentrated or condensed milk must bear upon the label a formula and has the indorsement of the State Board of Agriculture, the State Dairy Bureau and the Massachusetts State Grange.

A circular sent out by the latter says: "The consumer who buys these milks and extends them according to the printed formula often gets a product far below the food value of natural milk, though under the impression that he is securing an equal value at a much lower price than when buying standard milk. Tests made of the extended product frequently show a percentage of butter fat and total solids amazingly below that required by State law for natural milk."

PUBLIC HEARINGS FIXED.

Railroad Commission Announces Three for This Week.

The Railroad Commission announces the following hearings for next week: Thursday, 10.30 a. m., petitions of Charles D. Sage and Frank E. Boyd for reduction of milk transportation rates on the Boston & Maine Railroad, Thursday, 2 p. m., petition of Boston Milk Producers' Co-operative Company for reduction of milk transportation rates on the Boston & Albany Railroad, Friday, 10.30 a. m., petition of Weymouth selectmen for improved service on the Old Colony Street Railway; petition of the Berkshire Street Railway Company for authority to lease the Vermont Street Railway Company.

NEWS GLEANED FROM LOCAL LABOR WORLD

Bunker Hill Lodge of Machinists' No. 634, made up wholly of employes at the Charlestown Navy Yard, has petitioned Senators Lodge and Crane to demand a rigid investigation of charges made by the officials of their national organization that men holding high office in Washington are conspiring with the shipbuilding trust to close all navy yards. The officers of the union state, in this petition, that the Secretary of the Navy has laid off hundreds of men at the local navy yard in furtherance of this plot. Also, that his statement to the effect that it would cost $1,500,000 more to build a battleship in the government yards is not true.

John J. Fenton, the newly elected president of the Teamsters' Joint District Council of Greater Boston, is planning for one of the most vigorous organizing campaigns ever conducted in this district in an endeavor to secure every man eligible for membership into that union. His recent committee appointments follow. Buttons, John F. Sullivan of Lumber Teamsters and Handlers' Union No. 309; Michael J. O'Donnell of Team Drivers Union No. 25 and John J. Fenton of Coal Team Drivers and Helpers' Union No. 68, agreements, John M. Gillespie of Team Drivers' Union No. 25, John R. Lynch of the Coal Teamsters and Handlers' Union No. 68 and James J. Burns of the Sanitary and Street Cleaning Departments Teamsters and Helpers' Union No. 149, grievances, Harry P. Jennings of Baggage Transfer Drivers' Union No. 612, Jeremiah Noonan of Chelsea-East Boston Team Drivers' Union No. 242, James Kearns of Stable and Garagemen's Union No. 367, Daniel J. Hafferman of General Teamsters' Union No. 328, and Joseph Welch of Newton-Waltham-Watertown Team Drivers' Union No. 328; press, John C. Mahoney of Team Drivers' Union No. 25, Eugene S. Mehegan of Market and Commission House Teamsters' Union, Patrick Hughes, Newton-Waltham-Watertown Teamsters' Union was named as warden and John J. Dower as conductor.

His figures, they say, are based on the supposition that 45 per cent. of the cost of maintenance of such yards should be charged up to the cost of building a new ship, which they term a juggling of figures in the interest of the trust. It is alleged that the blacksmith shop at the Charlestown Navy Yard has been practically closed as a result of this discrimination in favor of private shipbuilders, and that the pay of local chainmakers has been cut in some instances from $3.60 to $1.60 a day. Similar petitions have been sent to the Congressmen representing the Greater Boston districts by other unions having men employed at the Charlestown yard. The matter may be carried to President Taft if Congress does not order the investigation.

Important labor-law hearings have been arranged at the State House next Tuesday and Wednesday by John Weaver Sherman, chairman of the State Branch of the A. F. of L. legislative committee, the two-day schedule being as follows: Bill to allow peaceful persuasion in time of strikes; workmen's compensation bill, injunction bill, and trial by jury in contempt cases, Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m., and the fines bill on the same day at 3 p. m. On Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. the picketing bill, fifty-four hour bill and eight-hour bill will come up for a hearing, while the nine-hours-in-eleven bill for street railway men will be heard the same day at 2 p. m. The equal suffrage bill, also endorsed by the State Branch, will be heard February 23 at 7 p. m.

The fifty-hour week for machinists proposition, first broached by local No. 264 of this city, has grown in favor so rapidly that R. L. Hall of Lynn, president of Machinists' District Council No. 19, has sent out calls for special meetings to be held throughout the entire district to discuss the question. There are twenty-five locals in the district, which takes in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire, with 20,000 machinists now at work in the three States. President Hall proposes to send speakers to every special meeting called by the locals, and institute such a vigorous organizing campaign that, following the complete unionization of the district, the fifty-hour week will soon become an accomplished fact.

Locomotive Firemen's Lodge, No. 57, meets in Putnam Hall, No. 446 Tremont street, to-day, when the report of its adjustment committee will come up for consideration, following the refusal of President Mellen of the New Haven Railroad to grant the men's demand for hostlers to clean their locomotives. This refusal came after the firemen had taken a strike vote. The meeting to-day will be the first held by the firemen since President Mellen met the men's committee in New Haven. Despite the stand taken by Mr. Mellen, however, it is said unofficially that there is little likelihood of an immediate strike among the 1,500 firemen now employed on the New Haven.

The Massachusetts State Branch A. F. of L. executive committee meets in an all-day session at Wells Memorial building Tuesday, to consider the questions referred to its members by the delegates in attendance at the Worcester convention. The committee also will attend the labor-law hearings held at the State House in the evening.

A. C. Langlois and James Bell, of Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' Union No. 95, have been delegated by their local to call on every trade union in Greater Boston in an attempt to obtain financial assistance for their fellow craftsmen on strike in New York and Philadelphia.

The Plumbers, Steamfitters and Gasfitters' District Council ball will be held in Copley Hall one week from next Tuesday. The proceeds of this ball will be added to the fund to entertain the 400 delegates expected at the biennial convention of the general unions in this city in September next year. Harry McGourty, president of Local No. 201, is floor marshal, while George Browning, president of Local No. 138, is floor director, and the presidents of the other seven affiliated locals are the aides-de-camp. The combined ball committees of every local in the council make up the list of aids. It is planned to raise at least $7,000 for the entertainment of the delegates.

Walters' Union No. 80 holds its tenth annual ball in Paul Revere Hall to-morrow evening, with a concert from 8 to 9 and dancing from 9 to 2. The proceeds will be added to the union's sick fund, from which members who are ill and unable to work are paid $5 a week for thirteen consecutive weeks in any given year. Thomas J. Shinkwin is chairman of the ball committee, and John J. Kearney secretary-treasurer. They are accompanied by Joseph E. Laycock, O. L. Fowler, J. R. Boyle, Louis Desilet, J. T. Kelly, James Cowan, Joseph Pollard, Joseph Bernstein, Frank O'Malley and William Fortin. Stone's Orchestra will furnish the music.

Richard W. Garrity, president of Bartenders' Union No. 77, has been indorsed by the five Boston locals of Waiters, Cooks and Bartenders for the position of international president of the organization. The election will take place at the Faneuil Hall convention of the general union next May. Mr. Garrity also has been promised the united vote of the New England delegation. He now holds the position of third international vice-president, in addition to being president of the Boston local.

Laundry Workers' Union No. 66 holds its annual ball in Paine Memorial Hall Wednesday evening. Mrs. Mary Moran is chairman of the ball committee, and Miss Lida McFeaters secretary-treasurer, assisted by the Misses Helen Fenton, Maude Craig, Ida Nelson, Esther Parker, Margaret Conroy, Mary Kennedy and May Riordan. Wallace Campbell and William Ferrick represent the men members of the local on the committee.

Cambridge City Employes' Union No. 8,270, A. F. of L., holds its fifth annual ball at Cyprus Hall, Malta Temple, No. 40 Prospect street, Cambridge, next Thursday evening. Michael D. Colli[illegible] president of the union, is chairman of the ball committee.

FOUR WOMEN SAVED IN WORCESTER FIRE

Search for a Pin Starts Blaze That Results in $15,000 Damage.

WORCESTER, Feb. 11.—Mrs. Henry P. Van Liew, who occupies apartments in the top story of the Whittier block, at Pleasant and Fruit streets, dropped a breastpin on the floor to-day and when it rolled under a couch she lighted a candle and went looking for it. As a result a double alarm of fire called all the apparatus in the centre of the city to fight the blaze, which was not extinguished until damage to the amount of $15,000 had been done to the five-story block and its contents.

Mrs. Van Liew tried to extinguish the blaze single-handed when it started, but it got away from her and she sustained bad burns about the hands and arms.

She and Mrs. Frederick H. Tainter were caught by the flames in the apartment and had to be taken through clouds of smoke by men who ran to their assistance. Mrs. F. A. Eisentraut and Mrs. E. T. McNally, who occupy the apartment below, were overcome and had to be taken from the block by firemen.

Land That Pays You Back in Sixty Days

It figures out this way. See this farm? Belongs to a man named Moor. Last August, AFTER HARVESTING THAT SAME YEAR, one crop of oats and one of cantaloupes, for which he received $3,600.00, he let the grass grow, and in forty days the hay on every acre was worth $25.00, or just about what it will cost you to buy exactly as good an acre of ground, in the same neighborhood, from us.

DEEN LAND FARMS

at Waycross, Ware Co., Ga., cost $20.00 to $35.00 an acre (price depends on how close they are to the city of Waycross) and can be taken possession of at once on payment of a dollar an acre down. If you had to pay cash for this land, as you can see, six weeks in grass would let you out about even. But you don't have to pay cash. You can take three years' time to pay if you wish. That makes this proposition easier for you than a government entry.

Reserve Your Land Now—No Risk

Tell you what do. Write Senator Deen to pick you out the best farm on the Deen Land Farm Tract. He'll do just that for you—select the best there is. Enclose a deposit of one dollar per acre on acreage desired (farms sold in 10, 20, 40 and 80 acre parcels)—then take 60 days to investigate, examine titles, etc. At the end of that time if you are not more than satisfied, nay astonished, that you can get such rich, lively, productive land as this, within a radius of two to ten miles of the handsomest, most prosperous and fastest-building railroad town in the new RICH SOUTH—then you can have your deposit money back with 6% interest added—just by asking for it.

Get our big book of SOBER FACTS and read all about this wonderful land that produces three crops a year and grows practically everything from sweet potatoes, sugar cane and celery to cotton and pecans. Send us that coupon NOW and get posted QUICK on this land of Perfect Day and Velvety Night, the Vanishing Death Rate, Low Freights, Ocean Breezes, Year Around Crops, Full Pocket Books, and the Best People on Earth, where sun, air, water and soil combine to make conditions ideal for you whether you are a farmer or not. Get this book, we say, NOW; better still, if you can trust a southern gentleman and want the best farm there is in the Deen Land Tract, send Senator Deen your deposit money at once.

RUST CONTROL END OF MULTIMILLIONAIRES

COMMENTS ON CARNEGIE'S VIEWS OF WEALTH

CREELMAN SAYS PUBLIC CAN NO LONGER BE FOOLED

NOTABLE men East and West generally agree with Andrew Carnegie's views on the Commerce Court and public regulation of industrial combination as outlined in the AMERICAN.

Some take exception to certain details of the ironmaster's announcement.

James Creelman throws a new light upon the great library giver. His remarks, like those of other men, speak for themselves.

By JAMES CREELMAN.

I am not surprised to read an utterance like that from Mr. Carnegie. For he, of all men in the world, is in a position to speak with authority about the unjust method through which great fortunes have been accumulated in this country and in this time.

President Cassatt, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, told me once that when he issued his famous order stopping secret rebates on all lines of the Pennsylvania system, that that order cost the Carnegie Company just $8,000,000 a year—which represented the unjust advantage which Carnegie had over his competitors.

That advantage represented 6 per cent on $50,000,000, which is a perfectly fair estimate of the investment of the Carnegie Company. So that Mr. Carnegie, by reason of his secret rebates, could have sold steel at cost and still made a profit of 6 per cent.

It is a man with a burdened conscience and a burdened memory, like Mr. Carnegie, who reaches out with his money to buy the public respect which his wealth has failed to bring to him.

It is a man like Mr Carnegie who, in hope of conciliating radical sentiment and winning for himself a popularity he does not deserve, goes to extremes which make the honest progressiveness of the country seem fossilized.

The years are creeping fast on him. There is little time left. If Mr. Carnegie's life now were an honest atonement, and not a self advertisement and an attempt to change the verdict of his own career, one might attach more importance to what he says.

Old Ideas Changing.

It is true that the old ideas of a limitation upon the right of society to protest against the abuse of property rights are quickly changing; and even the greatest of the multi-millionaires who have so rapidly amassed wealth at such a frightful cost to their crushed competitors and to the general community—even they begin to tolerate ideas of regulation and restriction which were looked upon only a few years ago as subversive of social order itself.

The changes indicated are tremendous. And they must come unless the majority of us are to be reduced to mere clerks!

Think of it! Only a few years ago Judson Harmon, then Attorney-General of the United States, declared that the Sherman Anti-Trust law could not be enforced against industrial corporations like Standard Oil and the Sugar Trust, and other private combinations in restraint of trade!

Yet to-day even the conservative Taft administration has been pressing with all its might for the dissolution of both the Standard Oil and the Tobacco Trust.

Among the distinguished lawyers who listened to the argument before the Supreme Court there is very little doubt that the government is going to win both cases, and that the dissolution of similar combinations all over the country will follow.

When industry is organized on national lines and can be carried on behind the shelter of a tariff which excludes foreign competition, there can be no doubt that its operations assume the character of a taxing power.

It Works Both Ways.

Even the government may not tax to the point of confiscation.

If the people have set limits upon their own authority to do such a thing, surely they will not always permit private persons or corporations to exercise powers which they deny themselves.

Yes, the radical of yesterday is becoming the moderate of to-day. Mr. Carnegie's utterance through the AMERICAN has at least served to again illustrate that fact.

It is not that there is any general objection to the accumulation of wealth, on however great a scale. Morgan, or Rockefeller, or Carnegie, with one or ten billions, would not be objected to if the matter stopped there. Even twenty billions locked up in vaults would be inert, or dead, and as powerless to help or harm as the rocks set in a mountain side.

But when wealth is energized and let loose, and its latent power exercised for selfish purposes, it becomes like the rock in motion down the mountain side—an avalanche, carrying destruction in its sweep.

I do not believe that we shall come to fixing limits upon the dividends of private capital, by law. But I do believe that we shall come to very nearly that with respect to the dividends of all public service corporations.

The evolution of business and manufacture on large and scientific lines has been so vast and so swift that the people have hardly had time to grasp its meaning, and only with the rising and almost overwhelming tide of the cost of living, as compared with the power of earning, have they become shocked and frightened into a somewhat bewildered realization of the profound and general economic and social results wrought in their very homes and their daily lives.

This question of the regulation of the uses of wealth is no longer an academic or theoretical issue. Conditions are becoming tragic. They already have riven the great parties asunder in politics; they have set brother against brother.

Anglo-Saxons, although they cling to things which have been proved and tried, and look with alarm upon attempts to upset methods that have worked well in the past, have heart and brain and inspiration enough to deal with any problems that may confront and threaten either individual liberty or individual opportunity.

I have little respect for Mr. Carnegie's motive, but he has unconsciously repeated (but in an extreme form), in the AMERICAN quotation from him, thoughts which are uttered every day at the ordinary United States fireside. For, if, under the conditions that exist in this country to-day—if such thoughts did not come to the hearts and brains of the people, then indeed our nationality, yes, our civilization, would be presently a wreck, shoreless and hopeless.

Mix This for Indigestion

A prominent physician gives the prescription for stomach troubles that is showing such remarkable results all over the country in hospital work and private practice. Its action is different from anything else ever tried. It is said to give almost instant relief for belching, sour stomach, dizziness, headaches and nervousness, and if used for sufficient time will cure the most obstinate case of dyspepsia. "Two ounces essence of Pepsin, three ounces syrup of Ginger, one ounce Catandir compound. Mix and take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime." Catandir always comes put up in one ounce sealed packages. Any druggist should have it in stock by this time or he will quickly get it from his wholesale house. For best results mix the Pepsin and the Ginger, then let stand about an hour before adding the Catandir. It will be more convenient to get the ingredients from the druggist and mix them at home. Persons afflicted with stomach trouble should get this at once.

Judge Gary Favored the Public Control of Corporations Long Before Carnegie

The following extract is taken from Judge Gary's testimony before the Committee [illegible] Ways and Means of the House of Representatives on December 18, 1908. It is printed on pa[illegible] of the Tariff Hearings, and may be accepted as outlining the views of the chairman [illegible] Steel Corporation's Executive Committee on public control of corporations.

Mr. Gary was being cross-examined by Champ Clark

JUDGE E. H. GARY.

Mr. Gary—I think the question should be approached from the other standpoint as a matter of opinion; that is, I do not think a manufacturer ought to be allowed, on account of tariff laws or anything else, to charge or receive more than a fair return on the value of his property and the amount of business done. I think that is where you ought to start. Now, if he does not charge more than that price, then he should not be compelled to sell at less than that price—that is, a fair price—and in that case, if he can keep that price down to a fair basis by exporting the surplus, by dumping the surplus, it seems to me that is good business, and works to the benefit of the domestic user, because it reduces the total cost of production on the part of the mill which runs full, keeps the men employed and, as a total result, is beneficial. I think it is the same argument that every man in every kind of business uses in disposing of his surplus. So I think this tariff question—I speak to you because of your peculiar position, and I am not making any tariff speech—but I think in some way the manufacturer ought to be restricted to fair dealings with the public on the basis I have suggested without the introduction of tariff laws or anything else that might be very harmful to some of the industries and to the working people. That is my theory. I am speaking as an individual, Mr Clark.

Mr. Clark—Have you any idea how that thing could be accomplished?

Mr. Gary—Personal? Yes, I have.

Mr. Clark—I would like very much to hear it.

Mr. Gary—Now, I am binding myself only.

Mr. Clark—I understand.

Mr. Gary—PUBLICITY AND GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

Mr. Clark—What is that?

Mr. Gary—PUBLICITY AND GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

Mr. Clark—Government control of the railroads and other industries?

Mr. Gary—Yes; governmental control, as distinguished from government management. I am not talking about that. I think that would be a failure. I believe in thorough publicity on the part of corporations, railroads and manufacturing concerns, and I believe in the government having some way of controlling the manufacturer within reasonable bounds. I think his tariff question should be determined at the point where real protection leaves off and opportunity to oppress begins. All theories must be alike, it seems to me.

Mr. Clark—Just exactly.

Mr. Gary—Therefore, it is only a question of figures.

Mr. Clark—I agree with you thoroughly in that statement you have made.

CARNEGIE'S STATEMENT TO THE AMERICAN ON PUBLIC REGULATION OF COMBINATIONS

First, the principle of public regulation is sure, in the long run, to be applied to the so-called industrial combinations—steel, oil, sugar and so on—quite as thoroughly as to the railroads.

Second, such regulation will inevitably include legal price-fixing and legal limitation of dividends.

Third, these changes will come about, without violent agitation or jar, by the natural evolution of the work of the new Commerce Court.

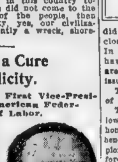
Fourth, the result will be the putting an end to the making of multimillionaires.

A private corporation should be unfettered by the government during its competitive and pioneering stages. But public regulation must necessarily intervene at the moment when the corporation enters into a combination or becomes strong enough itself to fix prices above the competition level.

As we have laws to prevent usury, so also the law must lay its unescapable ban upon extortion.

Mitchell Sees a Cure in Wide Publicity.

JOHN MITCHELL, First Vice-President of the American Federation of Labor.



I stand absolutely in favor of the Commerce Court. But as that court shall deal strictly with the question of transportation, of course, we require other means of regulation.

I am in favor of the public regulation of the so-called industrial combinations. But there are other practical means of regulation than those suggested.

I am absolutely opposed to price fixing. I do not see any equitable manner in which that can be done, so as to protect the rights of the wage-earner, the consumer and insure fair profits to the manufacturer. Let me state the proposition this way:

As I understand it, combinations of manufacturers fix prices so that the individual member of their association least advantageously located gets a fair profit. Naturally, the manufacturer who is more fortunately situated reaps abnormal profit. That is manifestly unfair. And likewise it might be unfair to fix the prices of all members, at, say, a 6 per cent. profit, because prices in districts for the same article would vary and the harmful effects of competition would then become apparent.

I believe, too, that the fixing of prices by the State is unfair, as would be the fixing of a standard of wages—that is, the maximum wage limit. I am in favor of adopting the law in use now in Great Britain, which allows the fixing of a minimum wage in the sweated trades. By the sweated trades I refer to the least skilled, where the common labor is perhaps the hardest and where means of protection are at the lowest ebb.

But I am an optimist. I believe that public regulation and publicity will eventually cure many of the evils and surely bring a more general diffusion of wealth. I can see now tremendous strides that have been made during the past ten years.

True, as stated in the AMERICAN, things which were then proclaimed extreme radicalism are now accepted as conservative policies as a matter of judgment. The average workingman to-day understands business. Ten years ago, even, he did not. He reads the newspapers more closely to-day than he ever did before. In my own trade (coal miner) the workers have advanced by immense steps. They are well educated, and they argue out the issues for themselves.

The day for fooling the common people of this country has passed.

They make more rapid progress by following the footsteps of those who fought honestly to forge the pioneer paths. And benefiting from the experience of those pioneers of a few years ago they are forcing the adoption of the exploited principles as the basic principles for future advancement. Plutocracy is doomed in this free country. I am certain of my country's future development. Everything about us tends to progressiveness, not retrogression. And one of the greatest steps toward railroad regulation will be the Commerce Court.

Bound to Safeguard Interests of People.

HOMER A. STILLWELL, President of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Theoretically there are no trusts. But presuming that there were monopolies on the nation's staples, or if they should come into existence, then the regulation of prices and dividends will surely come. The new feature of the Government has been established to safeguard the interests of the people, and the regulation of corporations will in a large measure constitute its work.

Calls Mr. Carnegie's Statement Reasonable.

JOHN J. MITCHELL, President Illinois Trust and Savings Bank.

Mr. Carnegie's statement is a reasonable one. The huge monopolies should be regulated so that fair prices will be given to the public and a reasonable dividend allowed to the stockholders.

Until an industry has reached its full growth competition should be fostered and every encouragement given, but when a monopoly has been established it is time for public regulation.

The new Commerce Court will undoubtedly accomplish this work, and it was for this purpose that it was conceived and established.

Monopolies Should All Be Regulated.

DAVID R. FORGAN, President National City Bank of Chicago.

A public corporation should be regulated in the same way by the government as are banks. Banks can do business for years and never know that there is such a thing as government supervision until they do something wrong, and then the authorities step in.

Monopolies which control the nation's staples should be subject to the regulation of the Commerce Court, and its prices fixed the same as a railroad.

WHITE BOOM IS GOING TO PIECES

A[illegible]tion of Brookline Man Is Halted by Opposition to Foss Investigation

It seemed to be the opinion of most of [illegible] who were in and [illegible] the coast last night that the [illegible] White craft [illegible] ambitions, was high upon the rocks and probably a total loss. Cap'n White hopes to save her.

Old observers of things political in Massachusetts say that events of the week have practically eliminated Mr. White from the governorship contest on the Republican [illegible] have the more apparent [illegible] and Speaker [illegible] matter of [illegible] nominations [illegible] will be nominated in that manner.

White Injures Chances.

Representatives White has not [illegible] himself before the people, his opponents say, by his opposition to Governor Foss in the matter of an investigation of State departments. These opponents of Mr. White say it would be unfortunate to have Mr. White [illegible] the State against Mr. [illegible] investigate the State departments in his own way with [illegible]

Mr. White's position on the Foss investigation [illegible] Committee on Ways and Means, of which Mr. White is House [illegible] that if the Governor [illegible] with expert accountants the Committee on Ways and Means should also have this power.

Wakes Up Late.

Supporters of the Governor have been reminding the young legislator from Brookline that this is his fourth year on the Committee of Ways and Means, his second as chairman, and that an examination of State departments by experts never suggested itself to him until Governor Foss proposed it.

When White was fighting the New Haven-Boston & Maine merger, a few years ago, he had a very small following among [illegible] in the Legislature. Whenever he gained a temporary advantage over the machine in those days it was invariably with the aid of Democratic votes. This sort of thing continued until White voted [illegible] direct nominations and took similar stands on matters of like importance in the Democratic creed.

The Brookline man wasn't so formidable in the Legislature of last year, but early in the fight on Henry Cabot Lodge he jumped to the firing line and remained there until long after the signal to "cease firing."

His run in with Representative Lomasney during the week has served to further alienate his following among Democrats, and it is said to be only a question of time before his candidacy for the governorship nomination is laid away forever.

OLD TWIN ELM IS GONE.

Cut Down Pittsfield Tree for Public Safety.

PITTSFIELD, Feb. 11.—The famous Twin Elm in East street has been cut down, removing one of the oldest landmarks of the Berkshire region. It was planted in January, 1784, by Rev. Thomas Allen, first pastor of the First Church of Christ, who led Pittsfield Minute Men to the aid of General Stark at the battle of Bennington. When his wife presented him with twin boys on January 2, 1784, Parson Allen celebrated the event by planting two elms and twisting their trunks together. They grew as one tree and to immense size. The tree finally decayed so that it had to be taken down for public safety. It has been split up to provide innumerable relics.

Clothes Closet Blaze Throws Executive Mansion Into Panic.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Fire in a clothes closet in the basement under the main stairway at the executive mansion to-day caused a flurry of excitement, but was extinguished by the department before much damage had been done.

The blaze is supposed to have started either from a defective electric wire or a hot flatiron.

Governor and Mrs. Dix are both in New York and the damage will be repaired before their return.

Blow at Sturgis Law.

AUGUSTA, Feb. 11.—The Senate voted to repeal the Sturgis liquor law enforcement commission act, passed four years ago, and to abolish the State liquor agency system, without a dissenting vote. Several of the Senators, without regard to party affiliations, expressed the desire that both of these laws be wiped from the statute books, the Sturgis law because of the recent removal from office of the commissioners by the Governor, and the liquor agency system because efforts to remedy defects therein had failed.

MRS. MARGARET ANDERSON

She Will Tell You How To Stop a Man From Drink

The remedy can be given secretly, so there is no publicity of your private affairs. She wants every man or woman who has drunkenness in their home to write to her so she can tell them just what remedy she used. The proofs of the hundreds of really remarkable results are too strong to be doubted or denied. Yet she makes no charge for her help (she asks for no money and accepts none) so there is no reason why you should not write her at once. She only requests that you are personally interested in saving one who drinks. Send your letter with confidence to her home. Here is her address:

New Discovery Which Was Awarded Gold Medal at Brussels

The Mirror Shows Plainer Than Words What a Wonderful Improvement May Be Realized by a Gain of Even 10 or 12 Pounds.

Lean, lank, skinny, scrawny men and women should take advantage of this ten-day Free offer before it expires.

Nothing is more embarrassing than extreme thinness.

It is the plump, well-developed man who "cuts the melons" and has the fun socially.

Scrawny, skinny women are seldom popular. We all admire fine figures. No dressmaker can hide a bony, skinny form.

Here is a chance to test free the one guaranteed reliable treatment which has "made good" for years in this country, which has taken England by storm and which has just been awarded a gold medal and diploma of honor at Brussels, Belgium.

Nothing in history has ever approached the marvelous success of this new treatment, which has made more thin folks plump than all the "tonics" and ineffective medicines for fifty years.

There is a reason. Plump, well-formed men and women assimilate what they eat. Thin scrawny ones do not.

This new discovery supplies the one thing which thin folks lack; that is the power to assimilate food.

It renews the vigor, re-establishes the normal, all in nature's own way.

This new discovery puts on firm, solid flesh at the rate of ten to thirty pounds a month in many cases.

Best of all—the flesh "stays put."

No one need know what you are doing until your gain in weight causes complimentary comment.

Here is the special offer for the purpose of convincing thin people in this community that these tablets will do just exactly what is claimed for them. It has been arranged to distribute for the next ten days for the coupon below, a free 50-cent package of Sargol.

This large 50-cent free package will be sent you in a private and perfectly plain wrapper so that no one but yourself will know the contents. Accompanying this package will be full and complete data and directions, letters of testimony and a special letter of expert advice that in itself is well worth your time reading.

If you want to add ten, twenty or even thirty pounds of good, solid flesh to your bones, do not delay, send at once for a free 50c package of Sargol.

All that you have to do is to cut out the coupon below and send it with your name, address and ten cents to pay for distribution expenses to the Sargol Co., 221-B, Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y.

TARIFF TREATY WEAKENS WHEAT

Quotations Continue Decline; Millions of Bushels to Be Liquidated

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—The reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada, while still in abeyance, is the principal thorn in the sides of the bulls in the Chicago wheat pit. Several hundred thousand bushels of wheat have been purchased in the Winnipeg market by speculators, and when the agreement is ratified this grain will be thrown upon the markets of [illegible] in the Northwest [illegible] free wheat from Canada for many years, and those in Chicago have no great objection to the reciprocity agreement.

COPPER REPORT WAS DISCOUNTED

Amalgamated the Barometer for Copper Shares; Price Trend Upward.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, Feb. 11.—One need not look any further to get an idea of the [illegible] trend of copper share prices than [illegible] note the manner in which the figures contained in the Copper Producers' report for January were received. An increase of over 21,000,000 pounds in the American supply of the metal during January did not even cause a ripple. No more did the unexpectedly large increase in the unfilled tonnage of the United States Steel Corporation cause a movement in the stock of that company. [illegible] was disappointing, the latter was quite the contrary.

Coppers Still in Dumps

[illegible] reason of [illegible] only deduction, then, is that both conditions had been discounted, as is wont by the stock market. Coppers are still in the dumps. The metal is the lowest for years and the general run of prices is about the same. Amalgamated, which must be considered the barometer for copper stocks, is now quoted some $11 per share above the lowest price of last year. Careful investigation discloses the fact that Boston brokers are carrying comparatively small amounts of the stock, smaller than ever. This same thing applies to New York brokerage houses as well.

There is only one answer. The big interests have the stock and it is therefore dangerous to be short of coppers. It is only a question of time when a start will be made to discount an improvement in the metal trade. There are signs of attempts of this kind already. There is no concerted movement, but the air breathes it unless all signs fail. The optimism among the leading electrical interests is the strong argument in favor of the mining companies. It is figured that the contemplated expenditures for the electrification of steam railroads in the leading cities of the United States already under consideration amount to over $320,000,000, and this is expected to start during the current year.

Calumet & Hecla Opposition.

Opposition to the proposed Calumet & H[ecla] merger has broken out in another spot. A former counsel for this company in Houghton, Mich., who is the owner of a large block of Ahmeek, asks other holders [illegible] from voting, which is the same as voting against it. This gentleman threatens to introduce a law in the [illegible] for a stockholder not desiring to go into a consolidation to receive cash instead of stock of the consolidated company. As the author, Thomas L. Chadbourne is the undisputed leader of the copper county bar, the Calumet & Hecla [illegible] have received a body blow.

It is interesting to note that the average selling price of copper for a period of thirty-eight years has been 13½ cents. Calumet [illegible] taken this as the basis for the consolidation, and their success and experience should count for a great deal. Furthermore, they do not believe that the average price of copper will vary much from this price in the future, [illegible] may go higher temporarily.

The Boston market was featureless this forenoon, but what trading there was was for long account. Coppers are awaiting for something to give them impetus. To use an oft repeated expression, the heart is willing but the body is weak. This [illegible] well applies to stocks. Sentiment is bullish, but nobody is inclined to take the leadership.

The New York banks continue to accumulate funds, although the gains in the surplus was only nominal for the week. [illegible] deposits increased $10,335,[illegible] and the loan account was increased but $6,7[illegible]4,500. Total deposits now exceed total loans by $36,050,800, which is just about the amount of the surplus reserve. Legals and specie increased $3,315,700.

Roads Buying Equipment.

The last six weeks has witnessed a very satisfactory [illegible] of buying power on the part [illegible] one of the leading American [illegible] the largest [illegible] to $3,500,000 [illegible] alone.

Steel Trade Shows Great Improvement

Increase in Unfilled Tonnage Regains Ground Lost in Three Months.

The unfilled tonnage statement of the Steel Corporation for January furnishes the best evidence of a decided improvement in the steel trade. By the unexpected increase in unfilled tonnage in January of 436,000 tons the Steel Corporation regained practically all the ground that it [lost] in the three preceding months. Unfilled orders as of September 30 stood at 3,158,[0]00 tons. In October these declined to 2,871,000 tons, in November to 2,760,000 tons and in December to 2,674,000 tons. By the increase in January unfilled orders amounted to 3,110,000 tons, or but 47,000 tons less than the amount on the books on September 30.

In the absence of any official statement there is some uncertainty as to whether the rail orders of the Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads were included in the January statement. It had been generally thought that these orders were not entered on the books until after the close of the month, but in view of Judge Gary's recent statement that the company received new business at the rate of 30,000 tons per day during January it would appear that these rail orders were entered on the books during the last few days of the month, or that shipments during the month were comparatively small.

INSPECT AMAZON-MONTANA.

Walter Harvey Weed Expresses Satisfaction with Work.

BUTTE, Feb. 11.—Walter Harvey Weed, geologist for the Butte-Balaklava Copper Mining Company, and Charles W. Newton, superintendent of that company, who have returned from an inspection of the Amazon-Montana property at Amazon, express satisfaction with the development of the mine up to the present.

They report the crosscut on the 850-foot level has reached the main vein at a distance of 200 feet from the shaft, and although the vein has not been completely intersected the crosscut has shown about five feet of good ore. The values are 20.2 ounces of silver and 26.7 per cent. lead, the assay having been made on an average sample the full width of the ore body. No drifting has been done.

NEW ACTIVITY PUTS STOCKS AT HIGH MARK

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—In the last nine weeks active stocks on the exchanges of New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia appreciated in value $650,000,000. The average advance was nine points.

Dividing rail and industrial issues in equal numbers, the record shows that, taken collectively, the former have enhanced almost two points more than the latter. The difference suggests broadly the attitude of investors and speculators toward the two groups. Plainly the rails have enjoyed the superior confidence of market devotees because they are not involved in litigation which for some time has been interpreted as imperilling the very existence of many large industrials. Admittedly railways had been at a disadvantage in having their revenue measurably contingent upon the Interstate Commerce Commission. But as this rate situation becomes clarified, it lost its market potency.

Lawyer Calms Fears.

To-day it is diminished to a passive matter in the environments of the stock exchanges. There is also a promise of allayed apprehension regarding the industrials in that the forthcoming decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases may occasion only a transient flurry [illegible]

A leading corporation attorney gave it as his opinion in the Friday issue of the Chicago Examiner that the ruling of the upper court though it be adverse will have a limited effect as to time on the corporations directly concerned and impress fugitively the companies indirectly interested. Coming from a lawyer, who is legally allied to the Standard Oil people and is general counsel for a number of large corporations, the view he expressed was an agreeable surprise to the financial world.

Question Advances.

There continues to be a contention, however, that advances in both rails and industrials have been contraband, have been due more to the evanescent affections of the speculative element than to merit of the situation or than to the investment demand. It is pointed out that the rails are now as high as they were last May, while the industrials are at about the level of October. Nothing, in the argument of reactionists has occurred meantime in the financial and commercial worlds to have justified the fair enhancement in values.

This is a very large statement made evidently by people with closed eyes and arrested intellects.

Far more than the rising figures in shares has been the psychological change in business spheres. It is exactly this change which has brought about a material betterment. Fear, if not as yet wholly dispelled, is now controllably subdued.

Big Railroad Deal.

Confidence bulks far more largely than caution. Industries that were, so to speak, in abeyance are gradually nearing their normal activity.

In finance, per se, it has been an absolute transformation. Investors are seeking the bond market as against the bond market seeking investors months ago. A number of large financial enterprises have been launched. A larger number are about to be floated.

Change of control of a railroad here and there illustrates reawakened financial enthusiasm. Missouri Pacific, which is to be financially rehabilitated by a leading banking house, exemplifies the particulars. This deal was tentatively taken up last Spring, but the bankers then thought the time unpropitious. The fact that it is now on the stocks shows the restored confidence of international financiers.

Mr. Chadbourne's Ownership.

Thomas L. Chadbourne of Houghton, Mich., formerly counsel for Calumet & Hecla, and who asks stockholders of the Calumet & Hecla subsidiaries who do not favor the plan to refrain from voting, appeared on the stockholder's list on January 1, 1911, as an owner of 3,030 shares of Ahmeek Mining Company and 117 shares of Calumet & Hecla.

The consensus of opinion is that the broadside which Chadbourne has issued protesting against the Calumet & Hecla merger on the terms outlined [illegible] the entering wedge for a [illegible] will prevent the plan going through.

Opinions of the Brokers

J. M. Ta[illegible] & Co.—A decision on the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific case by the United States Court of Appeals at St. Louis is expected [illegible]. The Supreme Court meets on February 20 [illegible] on the constitutionality of the Corporation Tax Law may be handed [illegible] about March 1 the [illegible] and down [illegible] American [illegible] We believe that [illegible] over two months [illegible] check the [illegible] next week we will have a traders' market, with fluctuations within narrow limits.

H. A. Brown & Co.—The market has had a large advance since November, which is of itself sufficient to account for the realizing, but in addition to that, we are now close to several important decisions which furnish a sufficient cause for a more cautious attitude on the part of the trading element. The decision in the suit brought by the government to dissolve the merger of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific may be handed down any day, and the same is true of the Supreme Court of Minnesota in the case involving the powers over interstate commerce, which was decided in favor of the companies by the master to whom it was referred.

Hunt, Ellis & Co.—The past week has seen a further bolstering up of the constructive market forces. We are daily pulling further out of the shadows. While to those on the outside there has not been a very substantial demonstration of renewed activity in the business and industrial worlds to account for the rise which has already taken place in security prices, there are here and there sparks of activity reflecting the gathering of forces and tendencies which are bound to make themselves manifest in no uncertain way during the coming months.

A. H. MacKenzie & Co.—Sentiment continues to improve, although it was natural that there should have been a halting spell while investors converted some paper profits into cash. Close studies of the market agree that basic conditions are sound and that the trend continues upward. Next week we look for a resumption of the upward movement.

Wiggin & Elwell—Market conditions continue favorable, although more participation on the part of the public is desirable and would probably be obtained if a reaction of three to five points occurs which we feel is possible at any time.

Miller & Co.—While some little irregularity may develop, owing to the evening up of contracts, we still think that stocks are a decided purchase on these minor declines.

Thompson, Towle—It is unlikely that there will be any developments until after the holiday of sufficient importance to inject new life in the market or give it a decided trend.

Wool Statistically Strong, but Spotty

Usual February Disposition to Clean up Odd Lots Is Manifest.

Though sales of wool during the past week have been in smaller lots than usual and the market spotty, yet quite a large number of manufacturers have taken to piecing out parcels, and the total business was well toward 3,000,000 pounds.

While all good wools remain firm in price there are more sellers than buyers for off-quality stock and the usual February disposition is manifest to clean up odd lots, even if price concessions have to be made, in order to be ready for negotiations for the domestic clip.

Statistically the market is undoubtedly strong, for the mills are hardly "loaded up" with wool nor are the cutters and clothiers heavily stocked with goods, but it is also true that mills have failed to receive, except in rare instances, more than a very moderate number of orders. On the other hand, there is a willingness that the market should appear to be dull and easy for effect in making purchases of new wool less difficult. Holders of large lines of good wool are confident as to the value of their supplies, in view of the strong statistical position, the small purchases by Americans abroad and the outlook for another rather short domestic clip. If the heavyweight goods season progresses satisfactorily, and the orders are more widely distributed than has recently been the case, a good wool market should develop.

The goods situation in New York continues more or less dull, and until there is a change in this situation the raw wool market will probably continue to back and fill. The worsteds demand is petering out in spite of the low prices named. It is a fact that the quotations named on finished goods are extremely close and in the event of a return of confidence should insure heavy sales.

In territory wool sales have been frequent, but prices have varied with little regard to open quotations. It is said that desirable territory can be bought on a scoured basis of 55 cents, if not lower. The week's transfers include 250,000 pounds of Wyoming in original sacks at 18 to 18½ cents, at an estimated scoured cost of 57 to 58 cents; small lots of New Mexican, Utah and other territory on the scoured basis of 53 to 55 cents, which is about the market value for good average territory wool, while French style clothing wools are around 57 cents.

Fine staple is now quoted on a scoured basis of 60 to 62 cents, with half-blood at 58 to 60 cents, three-eighths blood at 53 to 55 cents, and quarter-blood at 50 to 52 cents.

N. Y. STOCKS DULL; MONDAY A HOLIDAY

Trading Almost Entirely Professional, but Canadian Pacific Hits 212¾.

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—As Monday is a holiday, business was on a light scale in Wall street today, and was almost entirely professional. Canadian Pacific, with its subsidiary company, the "Soo," furnished the only interesting development. Canadian Pacific stock sold at the highest price in its history, touching 212¾. The company will soon issue new stock, the rights on which will be very valuable. Shareholders will probably get this new stock at 150. Texas Company stock advanced two points. The bank statement showed a decrease in the actual surplus at the end of business on Friday night, but the average surplus was increased nearly $1,000,000.

Most cheerful of the announcements for the week were the reports of the Copper Producers' Association and of the Steel Corporation. The latter showed an increase of unfilled orders on its books as compared with January 10 of 436,162 tons. The Steel Corporation is now operating about 58 per cent. of its capacity. There were 3,000 coke ovens started in the McConnellsville district last week. Three blast furnaces were put into commission by the trust. The steel trade in general is much better, and there is an international agreement to maintain prices so that all talk of tariff reform is without influence on prices of steel stocks.

Big Supply of Copper.

The report of the Copper Producers' Association was cheerful because it shows that there will be enough copper for the coming boom without danger of extravagant prices. The increase of surplus stocks on hand for the month is 20,409,265 pounds. This report caused free selling of some of the high-cost producers, and the gilt-edged copper shares suffered somewhat, but bargain hunters were busy picking up shares of the Utah Copper, Nevada Consolidated, Inspiration, Miami, Chino and Ray Consolidated, which are the coming big stocks in the copper world. All of these which are not now listed on the New York Stock Exchange will be placed there as rapidly as possible.

Canadian Pacific attracted much attention with its new high record, which comes largely as a result of reciprocity prospects. While the road will lose much of its business between Winnipeg and Montreal, through the wildness north of Lake Superior, it will gain heavily in business over the "Soo" system into Chicago, and its gain will be greater than its loss.

New Record for Lackawanna.

Lackawanna, with which alone Canadian Pacific can be compared, attracted attention because of the new high record for the Lackawanna Coal Company's stock. It advanced $76 a share in one day, selling at 330. This makes the original Lackawanna stock worth 830 at current quotations.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit directors elected T. S. Williams president of the company. While official information is lacking, it is believed by persons familiar with the financial affairs of the company that its stock will be put on a 6 per cent. basis some time in 1911.

Coffee and cotton were both heavy most of the week, but coffee rebounded sharply, and trading was wild in that commodity. The Coffee Trust has not been molested by the government, because it makes its headquarters abroad and does nothing in the United States but hold up the public by keeping something like 6,000,000 bags of the commodity out of consumption.

Other High Records.

Many of the specialties are attracting attention. Prominent among those making new high records were International Harvester, International Steam Pump and National Biscuit. In each of these there was a specific reason.

Harvester will extend its business tremendously as a result of the reciprocity treaty with Canada. International Steam Pump is enjoying the best trade in the history of the company, the volume at present being 150 per cent. of the average for seven years. It is earning at the rate of 9 per cent. on its common stock. National Biscuit's earnings are so large that they could not be withheld from shareholders. American Can is also making record earnings.

In fact, a surprising number of the big corporations have found after balancing accounts at the close of the year that their business has been remarkably good. This is true of the railroads as well as of industrials, and it has given renewed energy to the optimists.

NEW YORK CENTRAL FINANCING.

It is not unlikely that a definite announcement regarding the financial plan of the New York Central will be made within the next two weeks. The New York Public Service Commission is now collecting information so that it may act intelligently upon the application of the company to issue new securities, which it is expected will be made shortly. The immediate requirements of the New York Central amount to from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000 and it is probable that securities approximating the latter figure will be issued. According to the latest reports the new security will be a three-year 4½ per cent. note.

DIVIDENDS DECLARED.

Dividend declarations were announced as follows:

Ashton Valve, 1[illegible] s.a., payable February 15, stock of record February 1.

Columbus Railway, 1¼%, payable March 1, stock of record February 15.

PRINT CLOTHS EASIER.

Buyers are putting through small orders in the print cloth market at slightly easier prices. Some transactions are reported on 28-inch 64x60s at 3⅞ cents, but mills are not willing to do business on this basis, but 64 squares are very quiet at 4⅞ cents. On 38½-inch 64x60s business has also been done at 5 cents, but this figure is considered too low by most mills.

METAL EXCHANGES.

The metal markets were dull and nominal in the absence of exchanges. Lake copper, 12.62½@12.87½; electrolytic, 12.37½@12.62½; casting, 12.00@12.25; tin, 39.00@40.00; lead, 4.40@4.50; smelter, 5.50@5.60. Iron, unchanged.

COTTON WEAK ON FEAR OF SURPLUS

More Liberal Offering From the South Aids Decline; Receipts Heavy.

By EDWARD LOW RANLETT.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The market showed great irregularity and weakness last week. On Friday of the previous week the Liverpool market began to reflect more decidedly fears of a surplus of cotton in that market and in Manchester. The Chinese plague was used to explain this change of front on the part of English cotton merchants and spinners. English trade with China is very large in goods made from American cotton. Japan also does a large business with Manchuria, and Japan has already imported freely of the American staple since September 1. The decline in Liverpool was accelerated by speculative attacks and more liberal offerings from Southern spot markets.

Larger Crop Estimates.

Heavy receipts from the crop being marketed have all along encouraged larger crop estimates, and the continuance of the movement on a large scale into the first and second weeks of February encouraged the belief that even the government crop estimate was much too low. Suggestions were made that the yield from the current year's growth would be nearly 2,000,000 bales larger than last year's result, while it was also pointed out that the high prices early in the year were obtained on crop estimates not exceeding a commercial yield of 1,500,000 bales.

Weather conditions in the Western and Southwestern cotton belt showed some slight improvement. Moderate showers visited Western and North central Texas, according to mid-week Government reports, though the relief was of little consequence, private advices stated. At the week end conditions in that section were practically unchanged as to drouth conditions, which will undoubtedly prove a serious drawback to crop planting.

Sharp Reactions.

The decline in the market last week was $2.50 a bale from the high level on Friday of the previous week. Under pressure of heavy liquidation March contracts sold at $13.98, May $14.17, July $14.19 and October at $13.04 on Thursday. Reactions during the week have been frequent and sharp. The market rallied twice nearly twenty points on short covering and reinstatement of sold-out long accounts.

On Friday a better tone developed, with a more general disposition on the part of spot operators and speculators to support the market. A rally of about twenty points took place from the low levels of Thursday, but Friday's trading gave evidence of the necessity for further and rather pressing liquidation.

THINK BEFORE YOU CRITICIZE

Often It Will Soften Your Criticism—Still More Often It Will Cause You to Refrain from Criticising at All.

Copyright, 1911, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

IT is natural to desire to find fault. Every human being has something of the critic in him. The parent who scolds the petulant child is a critic, often an unjust one. The judge who lectures the unfortunate before him for sentence often is unnecessarily harsh, both in what he says, and in the sentence he imposes.

School teachers are often unduly critical. So are the gentlemen who review books and plays. It is so easy to find fault that, following the line of least resistance, almost every one drops naturally into the habit.

And how few there are who think before they criticize.

A few years ago a school teacher called before him a backward, stupid child, and before all the other pupils in the room rebuked him for his stupidity.

The child stood with open mouth and listened dully to the scolding. He did not understand much of it; all the sarcasm escaped him. But when a little later he went among his playmates at recess and they made fun of him he began to understand. He went home crying to his mother, and for days was hysterical, stricken with terror every time the teacher looked at him.

The brutality of dealing with a child in such a fashion has been better understood of late, since it has become known that stupidity in children is due to ill health, rather than to sullenness. In the case of this particular child, an operation for a growth in his nose, advised and performed by the family doctor, cured his "stupidity," and his future now promises rather better than that of the really stupid teacher who criticized him.

It ought to be the duty of every teacher who has children in his charge really to understand the children. Enough has been said and written of late about the effect of health on the mind. There is no excuse for the teacher who is not familiar with it, or who harshly and wantonly rebukes children who are backward through no fault of their own.

In "Huckleberry Finn," one of the most human books ever written, is the pathetic story of how "Jim," the colored man, called to him his child who had just recovered from scarlet fever.

The child did not come, in fact paid no attention to the command. Twice again the father called, then in a rage he seized and beat the helpless urchin till his anger was appeased. His description of his remorse when he discovered that the child had been stricken deaf by the disease ought to be read by all who have to deal with children.

Teachers and parents should read and commit it to memory. By doing so they would spare children untold physical suffering, and they would end their days with far cleaner consciences.

Contructive criticism—the criticism that helps because you know the man who makes it fully understands what he is talking about—is good for everyone. But this is entirely different from the criticism which condemns without either giving or having special

How many times have we heard some one say: "I don't know anything about Art, but I know what I like, and I don't like that painting." This is just as if a justice should say: "I don't know anything about the case, but I don't like the plaintiff's side of it." One finds this peculiar form of criticism in all walks of life. Usually it means that the critic is too lazy to think out why he really objects to a picture, a piece of music or a course of conduct.

If he would take the trouble to make up his mind just why he condemns anything, these reasons might add something to the store of human knowledge, put perhaps some one upon the right path of endeavor. At least he would spare himself the humiliation of the charge of mental inertia.

All progress comes through criticism. But it is a criticism which knows its subject and sees clearly just why it does or does not like a thing.

We go to a doctor to criticise our health; we go to a lawyer to criticise our rights; we go to an engineer to criticise the formation of our land upon which we wish to build a railroad, say. But we do not go to the man who says "I don't know anything about doctoring, law or engineering, but at any rate I don't like your case."

Not long ago a manufacturer who employs a large number of women and girls, nearly all of them foreigners, and unfamiliar with the language of this country found that he had a strike on his hands.

He used all possible arguments, but in vain. The women wanted more money, and they held together until they could get it.

This man, baffled and in despair, began to write to the newspapers.

He said that he was being treated unfairly; that his employes, because they were women were appealing for popular sympathy, and that he was unable to get his side of the case before the public at all

When at last he was forced to come to the terms their leaders dictated he protested still more, and poured letter after letter of complaint into the newspaper offices

At last one of the editors, out of patience, wrote to him something like this

"You expect a handful of half-educated foreign born women to present arguments for their side of the case as logical and convincing as those your lawyers offer.

"They have only one argument to make; that is a strike. They make it as logically and as convincingly as they know how by holding together against you.

"You think that they ought to be judged by the same standards as you would be judged by.

"Put yourself, if you can, in their place. Imagine that you are a stranger in a new land, that you have had no education; that your only inheritance comes through a line of peasants who have been held down as slaves are held down all their lives. Imagine that you had an altercation with an employer, and actually gained the upper hand. Do you imagine for a minute that you would be as fair as these women are? No. You would insist on terms beside which those exacted by your employes seem foolishly modest. Quit writing letters and think, and perhaps in the future you will be able to deal so fairly with your employes that they will never again need to resort to the only argument that they know anything about."

There is a well known story of the clerk of the great banker who was entrusted with an important deal and bungled it. His employer called him into his office and lectured him severely.

"If I had been in your place," he said pomposuly, "I would never have made such a hash out of that matter. I would have done thus;" and he entered into a long explanation of the way the deal should have been carried through

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the clerk respectfully," but if I could think of that line of conduct, I should not be working for you for fifteen dollars a week."

It is easy for the general of an army to find fault with the newly enlisted private; it is easy for the captain of industry to object to the manner in which his office boy receives the visitors that come to his door. But in most cases it is neither necessary nor just for such criticism to be uttered.

It is not to be expected that the beginner in any business will be familiar with its details, yet too often that is exactly what is expected of him, and exactly the reason for the frequent rebukes that are administered to him.

The average business man would not think of scolding a foreigner for not understanding the English language, yet he will fly into a passion because a newly hired clerk does not know the current price of some article of merchandise

The average man—before he has had experience—expects fairness. He thinks that he is entitled to be criticized for his faults, but to be given immunity from criticism because of mistakes that arise through ignorance of the rules of his new game.

That is the kind of treatment he usually doesn't get.

Men criticize first and think afterward. Sometimes, if they are gentlemen, they are sorry afterward and apologize. Often they let it go, and leave the wound they have made hurting, and the victim's faith in human nature a little lessened.

It will become weaker and weaker as the years go on, and soon he will cease to expect fairness at all. Then perhaps he will be a better business man, but he will have lost something that no business success can atone for, his original honest and straightforward faith in his fellow men.

THE DEVIL AND THE CRUST OF BREAD---By Count Leo Tolstoy

(Copyright, 1904, by Dana Estes & Co., and Reprinted Here by Their Permission.)

A POOR peasant went out to plough, without having had his breakfast, and took with him from home a crust of bread. The peasant turned over the plough and untied the beam, which he put under a bush; here he also placed his crust of bread, which he covered with his caftan.

The horse grew tired, and the peasant was hungry. The peasant stuck fast the pouch, unbridled the horse and let it go to graze, and himself went to his caftan, to have his dinner. He raised the caftan, but the crust was not there. He searched and searched for it, and turned his caftan and all the rest of it, but the crust was gone. The peasant marvelled.

"This is remarkable," he thought. "I have not seen any one, and yet somebody has carried off the crust of bread."

But it was a little devil who, while the peasant had been ploughing, had carried off the crust; he sat down behind a bush to hear how the peasant would curse and scold him, the devil.

The peasant looked a bit dejected.

"Well," he said, "I shall not starve. Evidently the one who carried it off needed it. May he eat it to his health!"

And the peasant went to the well, drank some water, rested himself, caught the horse, hitched it up, and began once more to plough.

The little devil felt sad because he had not led the peasant into sin, and went to the chief devil to tell him about it.

He appeared before the chief devil and told him how he had carried off the peasant's crust, and how the peasant, instead of cursing, had told him to eat it to his health. The chief devil grew angry.

"If the peasant has in this business got the better of you," he said, "it is your own fault; you did not know any better. If the peasants, and the women, after them, take such a notion, we shall have a hard time of it. This matter cannot be left in such a shape. Go," he said, "once more to the peasant, and earn the crust if in three years you do not get the better of the peasant, I will bathe you in holy water."

The little devil was frightened. He ran down upon the earth, and began to think how he might redeem his guilt. He thought and thought, and finally thought it out. He turned into a good man, and hired himself out as a laborer to the peasant. He taught the peasant in a dry year to sow in a swamp. The peasant listened to his hired hand and sowed the grain in the swamp. The other peasants had all their grain burned up by the sun, but the poor peasant's corn grew thick, tall, and with full ears. The peasant had enough to eat until the next crop, and much corn was left. In the summer the hired hand taught the peasant to sow on the uplands. It turned out to be a rainy summer. The corn of the other peasants fell down and rotted and made no ears, but this peasant's corn on the uplands was heavy with ears. The peasant had now even more corn left, and he did not know what to do with it.

The hired hand taught the peasant to mash the grain and brew liquor. The peasant brewed some liquor, and began to drink himself and to give it to others. The little devil came to his chief, and began to boast that he had spoiled the crust. The chief devil went to look for himself.

He came to the peasant, and saw that the peasant had invited some rich men to treat them to liquor. The hostess was carrying the liquor around to the guests. As she walked around, her foot caught in the table, and she spilled a glass. The peasant grew angry, and scolded his wife.

"Devil's fool," he said. "Is this slops that you, with your clumsy hands, spill such precious liquor on the ground?"

The little devil nudged his chief.

"Watch him!" he said. "Now he will regret his crust."

The host scolded his wife, and began himself to carry the liquor around. A poor peasant, who had not been invited, came back from his work. He greeted the company and sat down, watching the people drink the liquor; as he was tired he wanted to have a drink himself. He sat and sat, and swallowed his spittle—but the host did not offer him any; he only muttered:

"Where will a man get enough liquor for the whole lot of you?"

This, too, pleased the chief devil; but the little devil boasted:

"Wait, it will be worse than that.

The rich peasants had a glass, and so had the host. They began to flatter one another and to praise one another, and to speak oily, deceptive words. The chief devil listened to that, too, and was glad of it.

"If this drink will make them so foxy, and they will deceive one another," he said, "they will be in our hands."

"Wait," said the little devil, "and see what is coming; let them drink another glass. Now they wag their tails to one another, like foxes, and want to deceive one another, but look, they will soon be like fierce wolves."

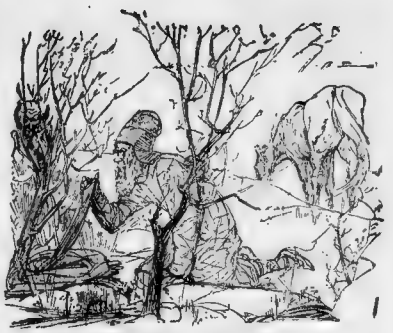
The peasants had another glass, and their words became louder and coarser. Instead of oily speeches, they began to curse and to get angry with one another, and they fell to, and mauled one another's noses. The host, too, took a hand in the fight. And he was also beaten.

The chief devil saw this, too, and was glad.

"This," he said, "is nice."

"Wait, it will be better yet! Let them have a third glass. Now they are like mad wolves, but let them have a third glass, and they will become like swine."

The peasants had a third glass. They went completely to pieces. They muttered and yelled, they did not know themselves what, and paid no attention to one another. They began to scatter, some going away by themselves, and some by twos and threes; they all fell down and wallowed in the street. The host went out to see them off, and he fell with his nose in the gutter and he became all soiled and lay there like a pig, grunting.



"He raised the caftan, but the crust was not there."

This pleased the chief devil even more.

"Well," he said, "you have invented a fine drink, and you have earned the crust. Tell me how you made this drink. It cannot be otherwise than that you have first let into it some fox blood — and this made the peasant as sly as a fox. And then you let in some wolf blood — and this made him as fierce as a wolf. And finally you poured in some pig blood, and this made him a pig."

"No," said the little devil, "that was not the way I did. All I did was to let him have more corn than he needed. That beast blood has always lived in him, but it has no chance so long as he gets barely enough corn. At that time he was not sorry even for the last crust, but when he began to have a surplus from his corn, he began to think of how he might have his fun from it. And I taught him the fun of drinking liquor. And when he began to brew God's gift into liquor for his fun, there arose in him his fox, wolf and pig blood. Let him now drink liquor, and he will always be a beast."

The chief praised the little devil, forgave him for the crust of bread, and made him a captain

"The peasant listened to his hired hand, and sowed the grain in the swamp."

TOLSTOY'S ADAPTATIONS OF HINDOO FABLES.

(Copyright, 1904, by Dana Estes & Co., and Reprinted Here by Their Permission.)

"You do not see it because it is so fine."

THE SNAKE'S HEAD AND TAIL.

THE snake's tail had a quarrel with the snake's head about who was to walk in front. The head said:

"You cannot walk in front, because you have no eyes and no ears."

The tail said:

"Yes, but I have strength, I move you; if I want to, I can wind myself around a tree, and you cannot get off the spot."

The head said:

"Let us separate!"

And the tail tore himself loose from the head, and crept on; but the moment he got away from the head he fell into a hole and was lost.

FINE THREAD.

A MAN ordered some fine thread from a spinner. The spinner spun it for him, but the man said that the thread was not good, and that he wanted the finest thread he could get. The spinner said:

"If this is not fine enough take this!" and she pointed to an empty space.

He said he did not see any. The spinner said:

"You do not see it because it is so fine. I do not see it myself."

The fool was glad, and ordered some more thread of this kind and paid her for what he got.

THE HERON, THE FISHES AND THE CRAB.

A HERON was living near a pond. She grew old and had no strength left with which to catch the fish. She began to contrive how to live by cunning. So she said to the fishes:

"You fishes do not know what a calamity is in store for you. I have heard the people say that they are going to let off the pond and catch every one of you. I know of a nice little pond back of the mountain. I should like to help you, but I am old, and it is hard for me to fly."

The fishes begged the heron to help them. So the heron said:

"All right, I will do what I can for you and will carry you over, only I cannot do it at once—I will take you those one after another."

And the fishes were happy; they kept begging her, 'Carry me over! Carry me over!'

And the heron started carrying them. She would take one up, would carry her into the field and would eat her up. And thus she ate a large number of fishes.

In the pond there lived an old crab. When the heron began to take out the fishes he saw what was up and said:

"Now, heron, take me to the new abode!"

The heron took the crab and carried him off. When she flew out on the field she wanted to throw the crab down. But the crab saw the fishbones on the ground, and so squeezed the heron's neck with his claws and choked her to death. Then he crawled back to the pond and told the fishes.

THE PARTITION OF THE INHERITANCE.

A FATHER had two sons. He said to them: "When I die divide everything into two equal parts."

When the father died the sons could not divide without quarrelling. They went to a neighbor to have him settle the matter. The neighbor asked them how their father had told them to divide. They said:

"He ordered us to divide everything into two equal parts."

The neighbor said:

"If so, tear all your garments into two halves, break your dishes into two halves and cut all your cattle into two halves!"

The brothers obeyed their neighbor and lost everything.

THE JACKALS AND THE ELEPHANT.

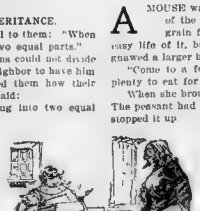
THE jackals had eaten up all the carrion in the woods and had nothing to eat. So an old jackal was thinking how to find something to feed on. He went to an elephant and said:

"We had a king, but he became overweening; he told us to do things that nobody could do; we want to choose another king, and my people have sent me to ask you to be our king. You will have an easy life with us. Whatever you will order us to do we will do, and we will honor you in everything. Come to our kingdom!"

The elephant consented, and followed the jackal. The jackal brought him to a swamp. When the elephant stuck fast the jackal said:

"Now command! Whatever you command we will do."

The elephant said:



"They went to a neighbor to have him settle the matter."

"I command you to pull me out from here."

The jackal began to laugh, and said:

"Take hold of my tail with your trunk and I will pull you out at once."

The elephant said.

"Can I be pulled out by a tail?"

But the jackal said to him:

Why, then, do you command us to do what is impossible? Did we not drive away our first king for telling us to do what could not be done?"

When the elephant died in the swamp the jackals came and ate him up.

THE MOUSE UNDER THE GRANARY.

A MOUSE was living under the granary. In the floor of the granary there was a little hole, and the grain fell down through it. The mouse had an easy life of it, but she wanted to brag of her ease; she gnawed a larger hole in the floor and invited other mice.

"Come to a feast with me," said she; "there will be plenty to eat for everybody."

When she brought the mice she saw there was no hole. The peasant had noticed the big hole in the floor and had stopped it up.

THE KING AND THE FALCON.

The falcon caught the hare. The king took him away and began to look for some water to drink. The king found it on a knoll, but it came only drop by drop. The king fetched his cup from the saddle and placed it under the water. The water flowed in drops, and when the cup was filled the king raised it to his mouth and wanted to drink it. Suddenly the falcon fluttered on the king's arm and spilled the water. The king placed the cup once more under the drops. He waited for a long time for the cup to be filled even with the brim, and again, as he carried it to his mouth, the falcon flapped his wings and spilled the water.

When the king filled his cup for the third time and began to carry it to his mouth the falcon again spilled it. The king flew into a rage and killed him by flinging him against a stone with all his force. Just then the king's servants rode up, and one of them ran up-hill to the spring, to find as much water as possible, and to fill the cup. But the servant did not bring the water; he returned with the empty cup and said:

"You cannot drink that water; there is a snake in the spring, and she has let her venom into the water. It is fortunate that the falcon spilled the water. If you had drunk it you would have died."

The king said:

"How badly I have repaid the falcon! He has saved my life, and I killed him."

THE FOX'S TAIL.

A MAN caught a fox, and asked her:

"Who has taught you foxes to cheat the dogs with your tails?"

The fox asked: "How do you mean to cheat? We do not cheat the dogs, but simply run from them as fast as we can."

The man said:

"Yes, you do cheat them with your tails. When the dogs catch up with you and are about to clutch you, you turn your tails to one side; the dogs turn sharply after the tail, and then you run in the opposite direction."

The fox laughed and said:

"We do not do so in order to cheat the dogs, but in order to turn around; but when a dog is after us, and we see that we cannot get away straight ahead, we turn to one side, and in order to do that suddenly we have to swing the tail to the other side, just as you do with your arms when you have to turn around. That is not our invention; God himself invented it when He created us so that the dogs might not be able to catch all the foxes."

"The king flew into a rage and killed him."

Society in Frolic with Cupid's Hearts and Darts

Buds of fashion quit social pace for a brief moment to compose sweet nothings of St. Valentine's day, framing messages that aid the winged god to carry fair ma'dens into the world of the grown-ups

BY ELIZABETH ELLIOTT

"Love can make our darkest days
In golden suns go down,
So let us clothe our hearts in love
And crown us with love's crown."

BLITHELY must the winged god be viewing the plans of good St. Valentine to aid and abet him in his heart-juggling career this season. For never before has the day of "hearts and darts" been looked forward to with so many happy thrills and such flutters of happy anticipation by the younger smart set and any number of festivities have accordingly been planned.

Never were love messages more alluringly devised than those which will shower upon happy recipients next Tuesday. The gayest frolics of the buds the past week have been the valentine teas where they meet to gossip over their happy affairs, to sip of the cup that cheers and to make valentines. One matron, the mother of one of these debutantes, was heard bewailing the fact that her home had been literally converted into a valentine factory.

It's the fad this year to have these love messages original, if nothing else, so my little lady's boudoir is one flurry of ribbons, paints, flowers and verses, and she sits contentedly chatting with her friends, or rather co-workers, while she cuts out, paints a spray or two of dainty flowers, ties the pretty ribbon bows and racks her brains for appropriate verse. You may smile, but just the same it is said that several fair poetesses have been revealed and the girls with this special gift are being pressed into service by their many friends and by the hostesses who expect to entertain on this occasion and consequently are looking for the novel and original in place cards, souvenirs and the like.

BUDS QUICKLY CAPTURED BY CUPID.

By the way, if some of the expected engagements that have been hanging in air fail to come to a climax then will "roses and Cupid's hearts and darts" have failed in their gay mission. At any rate there has never been a debutante year when so many of these fair creatures have been caught in the toils of Cupid so shortly after stepping across the threshold of their school days into the mazes of the world of grown-ups, and aside from Miss Hooper's and Miss Crocker's engagements, which have already been announced, and Miss Ames's, which, it is said, is shortly to be announced, to George Meyer, Jr., there is still another pretty bud walking under the shadow of Cupid's wing, and if the "little sparrows" who have been telling these pretty tales be correct, another prominent, pretty, popular and especially well-placed bud will soon be numbered among our prospective brides.

Another Lost to Boston.

Cupid's shafts have at last brought down one of our most invulnerable bachelors, and to the surprise of all his Boston friends Percy Haughton, considered by many the handsomest man in town, announced late in the week his engagement to the dashing New York widow, Mrs. Gwendolyn W. Howell. And sad to say the Boston maidens are barely surviving the shock—to think that another Boston man should desert ranks and go to Gotham for his bride! Really it's appalling, and if the maidens of our smart set don't manage some way to keep our eligibles better in tow there will be a sad showing of bachelor maids in our exclusive ranks. Mrs. Howell is the widow of Dr. Richard L. Howell, and was formerly Miss Gwendolyn Whistler of Baltimore, a grandniece of James McNeil Whistler, the artist.

Mrs. Howell has long been noted for her beauty, and in many ways will make a decidedly desirable acquisition to the smartest matron set of Boston. As the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Delano Whistle, she reigned supreme in Baltimore society and is likewise well known in London, Paris, Newport and New York. She is quite an artist and also a talented musician.

Mr. Haughton, who makes his home with his sister, Miss Alison Haughton, and his brothers, Malcolm and Lawrence Haughton, at "Brook Hollow" in Brookline, is a Harvard '99 man and a member of the Tennis and Racquet, Country and Exchange Clubs. During his college course he took active part in all college matters and was considered one of the best players on the Harvard baseball team and was captain of the team in his senior year. In '96, '97 and '98 he played on the football teams. After his graduation he was for two years a coach of the Cornell football team and for the past three years he has been head coach of the Harvard football team. Mr. Haughton was at one time with the City Trust Company as its assistant secretary, and is now with Hamlin & Nickerson, stock brokers.

Edward Haskell to Wed.

Another New York engagement of much interest in Boston was that announced late in the week by Mr. and Mrs. Ashton Crosby Clarkson of No. 208 West Seventy-ninth street of their elder daughter, Miss Gladys Evelyn Clarkson, to Edward Kirk Haskell, son of the late Rev. William Haskell of Maine and Mrs. Haskell. Mr. Haskell was graduated from Harvard in '99, and during his college course figured prominently in all the doings of the smart set of the University City. He is a member of the Harvard Club in New York and Squadron A. The announcement was made at a luncheon given by Mrs. Clarkson on Wednesday at her New York home. Miss Clarkson has two sisters, Miss Harriet A. Clarkson and Miss Helen Clarkson.

Among the recent victims of the little Love God who has already selected her wedding day is Miss Helen Hooper, whose engagement was recently announced to Lathrop Brown, and who has chosen Wednesday, April 5, for the all-important event. It, of course, comes during Lent, in fact, ten days before Easter, so must of necessity be a quiet affair. Miss Hooper is one of the wealthiest and likewise one of the most attractive debutantes of this season. Her mother, Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, was the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Lothrop Ames. On her father's side her uncles are William Hooper and James R. Hooper, while on her mother's side the relatives are Oliver, John and F. Lothrop Ames and Miss Mary Shreve Ames, who has given several entertainments in her honor the past season. Miss Hooper owns a beautiful home on Beacon street and one of the finest estates on the North Shore.

Mr. Brown is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Brown of Lexington avenue, New York, is a Harvard '04 man and a member of the Union and Racquet and Tennis Clubs. A younger brother, Charles S. Brown, Jr., is a Harvard '08 man, and his other brother, Archibald M. Brown, married Helen Parish and now lives in Paris. Miss Lucy Brown is the sister. The wedding is to take place at Miss Hooper's Summer place at Manchester, and naturally only relatives and friends will be in attendance.

The Channing-Rivers Nuptials.

Another recently announced engagement to be closely followed by a wedding is that of Miss Rosalie Channing to Robert Rivers of Milton. Miss Channing is the second daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Channing of Chestnut Hill and will make one of the loveliest brides of the year. She is an especially charming girl and ever since her debut has figured prominently in the smart affairs of the younger set. She is a member of the sewing circle and of the Vincent Club. There are three brothers. Henry Morse Channing, who married Katherine Minot shortly after her debut; Walter Channing, Jr., whose marriage to Cornelia Higbee was an important event at Marion several seasons ago; and Hayden Channing, one of the prominent members of the Norfolk Hunt Club.

An engagement of wide interest is that of Miss Nora Purcell Leary, daughter of Mrs. Thomas G. Leary of Richmond, Va., to S. Haskett Derby, son of Dr. and Mrs. Haskett Derby of Beacon street. Miss Leary is said to be a particularly charming girl and belongs to one of the largest and most prominent families in the South. Mr. Derby makes his home in San Francisco. The wedding is to take place shortly after Easter in Richmond and is bound to be one of the leading events of the late season. Mr. Derby is a brother of Augustin Derby, who a fortnight ago married Miss Olga Converse in Washington. Dr. George Derby of Hereford street is another brother, and Miss Eloise Derby is a sister.

An engagement of much interest is that announced of J. Harper Blaisdell of Winchester to Inez Frances Kimball of Rockford, Ill. Mr. Blaisdell is graduate of Dartmouth College and of the Harvard Medical School.

Miss Mason to Be a Bride.

Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Mason of Dana street, Cambridge, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Evangeline, to Aston Lombard Miller, who was graduated from Harvard last June.

Following the announcement of the engagement of Miss Dorothy Dutton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer A. Lord of Brookline, to Clarence Melville Cobb, Miss Dutton's friend and former schoolmate, Miss Mildred Bradley, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. J. Payson Bradley of Audubon road, gave a heart party in their honor on Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland Lilly of Worcester have announced the engagement of their daughter, Viola Estelle, to Herbert C. Poore of Wollaston.

Among the recently announced engagements is that of Miss Lucile Rodgers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Rodgers of Quincy, to Lewis Berry Deane.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Richardson of Auburndale have announced the engagement of their niece, Miss Alpha B. Lincoln, to C. Harold Thayer of Springfield.

There is much interest in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Ines Frances Kimball of Rockford, Ill., to J. Harper Blaisdell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Blaisdell of Winchester.

Among the recent engagements of note is that of Miss Alice Josephine Ray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Ray of Ashmont, to George Harold Tower of Boston.

An engagement of interest in Cambridge is that announced of Miss Ruth Witherell Bunton of that city to Fred Forrest Field, Jr., of Brockton.

While some are going South still others are making their way into the country or the Northern States, and Woodstock, Vt., seems at present the mecca for those who enjoy snow shoeing, skating and sleighing, which are at their best there just now. Among the recent arrivals there are the Caleb Lorings, Mrs. John C. Phillips, the Leverett Tuckermans and the Guy Murchies. Among others there are Mrs. Edwin S. Webster and her daughter, Miss Polly Webster, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sayles of Chestnut Hill, Mrs. Matthew Luce of Marlboro street, the Misses Emily and Caroline Stearns of Jamaica Plain, the Misses Margaret and Mildred Stearns of Commonwealth avenue and Mr. and Mrs. Asaph Churchill of Milton.

Any number of delightful entertainments are being given for that interesting young matron, Mrs. Philip Lee Warner, who has come over from her home in London and is the guest of her parents, General and Mrs. Sherwin in Jamaica Plain. Mrs. Warner, as Maida Sherwin, was one of the most popular girls of her set and her numerous friends are doing their utmost to make this, her second visit to America since her marriage, a pleasant one.

BOSTON BELLES IN SOCIAL GAIETIES

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Gay, who have been much entertained during their visit here, are planning to return to their home in Rome the latter part of the month. Mr. Gay is one of our many artists who have won fame both at home and abroad and both he and Mrs. Gay are prime favorites in the American colony of the Italian city. While the Gays have been in America their residence in Rome has been occupied by John W. Garrett, the charge d'affaires.

The Porter Sargents and the party who have been enjoying life in Rome during the past month, have recently been in Florence, but left there the last of the week for Venice, where they will tarry a week or so before continuing their travels. Mr. and Mrs. Sargent are to return to Boston in the early Summer for their customary visit with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Upham of Bay State road.

Among the visitors in the Southlands are General and Mrs. Francis Henry Appleton of Marlboro street, who have been recent guests at Palm Beach. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Warren Bliss of Chestnut Hill have left Palm Beach and gone on to St. Augustine. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Perkins are also at that well known resort.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Eustis of Newtonville have started for the West Indies and their near neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Burrage and Miss Caroline Burrage, have started for the Pacific Coast and will spend several weeks with relatives in Los Angeles.

Miss Eloise Derby of Beacon street has been making a round of visits in Washington and Baltimore since the marriage of her brother, Augustin Derby, to Miss Olga Converse.

Last Assembly For the Season

THE last [illegible] Friday night [illegible] the last in [illegible] that popular [illegible] brilliant close [illegible] the gayest season Boston has known in years. The assemblies here, as in Chicago, are the most exclusive of the Winter's festivities and enjoyed only by the fine [illegible] In an interesting [illegible] exchange it tells of the organization of the assemblies there as follows, speaking of Mrs. Wirt Dexter, [illegible] one a resident of Boston:

"About 1880 the once celebrated south side dancing class was organized by Mrs. Wirt Dexter, Mrs. George M. Pullman, and Mrs. John M. Clark. These ladies got it up to teach their respective husbands to dance. Bourniquo was the dancing master. The Arthur Catons, Augustus Eddys, J. M. Walkers, Norman Williamses, W. W. Kimballs, and many other south side families belonged to it. It was strictly informal in those early days; no evening dress was allowed for either men or women. It developed later into the most fashionable thing of the kind here, and moved from Bourniquo's hall, where its first meetings were held, to the Richelieu hotel and later to Kinsley's.

When its turn came to die—for this is a world of perishable institutions—it was succeeded by "The Bachelors and Benedicks," a club got up by Hobart Chatfield-Taylor and Reginald De Koven. This also met at Kinsley's, in Adams street. Coeval with this, these two energetic men organized some smaller dances limited to north siders, called, I believe, the Assemblies, which were held in the ballrooms of private houses. Among those houses grand enough to have a ballroom—and how superb they were considered in those days!—were the H. H. Porters, the Julian Rumseys, the Cyrus McCormicks, the Hamilton McCormicks, and the Charles B. Farwells."

How to Make Better Cough Syrup Than You Can Buy

A Family Supply, Saving $2, and Fully Guaranteed.

A full pint of cough syrup—as much as you can buy for $2.50—can easily be made at home. You will find nothing that takes hold of an obstinate cough more quickly, usually ending it inside 24 hours. Excellent, too, for whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix 1 pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces (Three fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, then add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This is just laxative enough to help cure a cough. Also stimulates the appetite, which usually is upset by a cough. The taste is pleasant.

The effect of pine and sugar syrup on the inflamed membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe is now used by thousands of homes all throughout the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equalled.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

NEW Nemo TRIPLE-STRIP SELF-REDUCING CORSET WITH THE NEW LASTIKOPS LIMSHAPING EXTENSIONS

No. 408

What does that broad band of semi-elastic Lastikops Webbing do?

It re-shapes and reduces the upper limbs to natural size, and prevents the flesh from bulging out below.

Long corsets drive the flesh down where you don't want it, making an unsightly ridge under a tight dress.

Lastikops Limshaping Extensions completely cure this evil; give you slender limbs with the fashionable "inslope"—your gowns will fit like the skin of an apple.

They let you sit down with comfort; and the elastic bands will outlast the corset.

Long and short models:

FARR'S GRAY HAIR RESTORER

"Like Mother—Like Daughter."

Many a mother can stand comparison with her youthful grown-up daughter in grace of figure and freshness of complexion—it's the tell-tale gray hairs that give the appearance of age.

And yet the hair is entirely under any woman's control. She may neglect the first gray spears and allow it to grow gray and faded, or, with very little effort and slight expense, she may restore its natural youthful color and keep it soft and fluffy.

Farr's Gray Hair Restorer gradually gives gray hair the life and natural color that properly belong to it, not the color that is near to what you had, but the actual original color. If your hair is streaked with different colors, a very few applications of Farr's Gray Hair Restorer will impart a uniform and even color to every hair on your head. Sold under a positive guarantee that it is absolutely harmless. Its use cannot be detected. It is clear as water and pleasant to use. Once the hair has returned to its natural color it is a very simple matter to keep it that way. The hair can be washed, shampooed and curled as often as you wish and the color will not be affected in the least.

The instrument will not be used in the Sprague School assembly hall, where Father Dermody now conducts his services, but will be installed in the new St. Colman's Church when it is erected. STRIKING GOWNS AT GUILD'S GUEST NIGHT

Hospitality reigned supreme at the sixth annual guest night of the Dorchester Catholic Guild held in Whiton Hall. It was one of the most brilliant gatherings of the season. The beautifully gowned guilds and matrons represented many of the leading members of Boston's Catholic society. The entire building was at the disposal of the guests who numbered 500. From 8 to 11 the long suite of parlors was well filled with the whist players. There were thirty-six tables. The spacious ballroom was a maze of beauty and merriment. Supper was served from 10:30 to 11:30. Much credit is given the hostess, Mrs. Robert B. Triggs, and her corps of able assistants. The subscription list included:

HAMMER BRIGADE BUSY KNOCKING NEW THEATRE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

IT is always in order to trip the man who is running with tough luck. Since the beginning of time the individual or institution in [illegible] has been the legitimate prey of the hammer brigade, which [illegible] sure explains why the New Theatre has been on the receiving end of hard knocks for more than a year. Such is the penalty of any endeavor to do good, especially if the effort lacks success.

In view of the lively things that have been going on at the New Theatre in New York—our so-called National theatre—among which have been the announcements that the present season would see the [illegible] of Lee Shubert as business manager and Winthrop Ames as literary director, and that another year would show [illegible] reversal of policy and the possible abandonment of the magnificent New Theatre building, you may expect a [illegible] of gratuitous [illegible] the country [illegible] has not been more successful [illegible] to promote American [illegible] art. While there is but little doubt that the venture has been a business failure it is by no means [illegible].

Without [illegible] of the New Theatre, nothing in [illegible] has been more lamentable than the utter lack of support given it by the newspapers of its own city.

It is folly to suppose that the men who subscribed funds for the building and maintenance of [illegible] of the New Theatre [illegible] have had any but lofty purposes in [illegible] No attempt was made to wring profit from the enterprise. Its scheme was too big and expensive [illegible]. Yet no movement in any branch of art was ever subjected to more bitter criticism. [illegible] avoid the real purposes of the institution to pick flaws [illegible]. Nothing that could be torn to shreds has been left untouched.

It is true, of course, that many things have been done that even the New Theatre's best friend could not understand. Proclaimed as an American institution, for the uplift of American dramatic art, it has been completely un-American from the start. English stage directors, English actors and English plays ha[illegible] its productions, and as a crowning achievement of un-Americanism its first gold medal of honor—and perhaps the last—was given to Ellen Terry. No one questions Miss Terry's honorable distinction, but if the question had been left to the American playgoers there is but little doubt that the decision would have pointed straight to our own Ada Rehan, whose career has been in no way less distinctive than Miss Terry's. Professional jealousy, too, has robbed the New Theatre of the support of a great mass of theatrical people. Even before the foundations of the building were [illegible] was viciously attacked by the theatrical interests. It has had so few friends to give it encouragement that there little wonder that the going has been rough.

* * *

IN another week the [illegible] Boston's working population that outnumbers all the rest will have its inning with the drama. "The Commuters" will move into the Park Theatre and expose to view the funny side of life in the suburbs as James Forbes, playwright and commuter himself, sees it. Commuting is serious business in Boston, thanks to the doubtful quality of our transit facilities. Mr. Forbes, however, takes a humorous glance at the subject, in which, it may be said with regret, he offers no valuable suggestions in the matter of relieving the misery of daily association with the dingy coaches of the Boston & Maine and New Haven roads. Mr. Forbes's play is helpful, however, through its ludicrous view of the commuter's tribulations. It is to be hoped that he has written a play with a 10.30 curtain; otherwise our own well-trained commuters will never see the final moments.

OF all the German comedians who crowd the American stage with strangled, apoplectic English Sam Bernard has made it pretty clear to theatregoers that the head of the line is where he stands. If you never believed it before a single evening with Mr. Bernard at the Shubert Theatre will convince you of his championship qualities. Only once in his life did Bernard wander from the narrow path of comedy, and then for a few minutes only, for he found it necessary to turn right back into his own pasture of quaint comedy. Neither his audiences nor his friends would take him seriously when he mixed his mutilated English with pathos, and he had the good sense—unusual in actors—quickly to abandon his misconceived ambition for the serious drama. Mr. Bernard is no Warfield, but that shouldn't discourage him, for by popular vote he is the best German comedian in musical comedy. Like a great many other men in his profession, Bernard began his stage career as a black-face comedian. He confesses to a salary of $15 a week at Austin & Stone's Museum in the early days. He once told me that the greatest shock he ever received, and one that haunts even now, occurred when he was a boy playing at the West End variety house. He was persuaded to attend the semi-annual dinner of the big snake that is one of the constant attractions in the Curio Hall, but he didn't know that the snake was to be fed on a live rabbit. The horror of seeing the rabbit forced down the snake's throat completely upset Bernard, and I have his own word for it that he has never since been able to look a rabbit in the face.

JOHN CRAIG is already making preparations for the early production of "The End of the Bridge," the Harvard prize play written by Miss Florence Lincoln, and rehearsals will probably begin within a week. The play has been read to the company and parts assigned. While there is every indication that Mr. Craig has picked a real winner in "The End of the Bridge," there will be no doubt of its social success—Harvard and Radcliffe will join hands to guarantee that detail of the production.

* * *

IF you can believe in demonstrations of favor, Julian Eltinge has surely caught the town with "The Fascinating Widow." No real stage beauty could have settled into more secure popularity than this very masculine young man who supplies a very fetching imitation of the real thing. In "The Fascinating Widow" you are not overtaxed with female impersonation—there is just enough to furnish Eltinge with sensible opportunity for his extraordinary talent in that direction. The play itself is a pleasing musical comedy, with the regular equipment of girls and frolic.

* * *

Henry W. Savage is pinning his chief hope this season upon "Everywoman," which had its first performance in New Haven last Thursday. A modern morality play in blank verse needs more than faith to carry it to success, and Mr. Savage hasn't overlooked any detail in the production that will lead to that end. With Mr. Frohman's "Chantecler," "Everywoman" will rank as one of the most expensive dramatic productions the history of the American stage recalls.

* * *

The early season declaration of the syndicate producers that none of their attractions would be seen in New England east of Boston now requires editing, for plans are developing that will send "The Dollar Princess" across the Merrimac Valley into Maine after its engagement at the Colonial Theatre.

HILDA VINING AT THE COLONIAL — JOHN CRAIG AT THE CASTLE SQUARE

Drama Stars

Bills at the Theatres

Castle Square Theatre.

"Faust" is a dream that excels in opportunities for spectacular display as well [illegible]

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

The latest legitimate star to enter vaudeville is Maclyn Arbuckle, whose success [illegible] "The Round Up" and "The County Chairman" placed him in the foremost rank of [illegible]. It was not until he secured a comedy written by Richard Harding Davis that he could be induced to enter the new field, but in this piece, called "The Welcher," Mr. Arbuckle has a part that suits him better than anything he has previously appeared in. He will head a particularly strong bill, one feature of it being B. A. Rolfe's musical production, called "The Courtiers." Other features will be Bert Levy, the cartoonist, Tempest and Sunshine, two girls who will be seen here for the first time in songs, Felix Adler, the monologuist, Goodrich, Murray and Gillan, the rathskeller trio, the Bloomquest Players in a comedy called "Nerve," Wentworth, Vesta and Teddy, and the Three Livingstones.

Boston Theatre.

Those who saw Julian Eltinge in "The Fascinating Widow" at the Boston Theatre during the past week were convinced that one of the handsomest women on the stage was a man. The clever impersonator of women begins the second week of his limited engagement on Monday evening. [illegible] and the play are an absolute novelty in present day theatricals and [illegible] possibilities are offered for the display of his unique and extraordinary talent.

Tremont Theatre.

There is no diminution in the favor that has fallen to the lot of "The Follies of 1910" at the Tremont Theatre, and although this revue from the Jardin de Paris in New York is now nearing the close of the fourth week of its stay in Boston, the audiences are just as large as ever. It is an entertainment filled with lively jokes and catchy music.

Majestic Theatre.

It is a record to be remarked upon for a melodrama in these times to have continued for seven weeks to pack to its capacity at every performance one of Boston's leading theatres. This is the achievement of Henry W. Savage's production of the sensational French melodrama "Madame X" at the Majestic Theatre, and it is now announced that just three weeks more will bring the remarkable Boston run to a close, making a stay of ten weeks, beginning to-morrow night.

Grand Opera House.

Depicting life in and about New York, Lillian Mortimer's comedy melodrama, "No Mother to Guide Her," will be this week's attraction at the Grand Opera House, opening with an extra Lincoln's birthday matinee Monday. The play tells an absorbingly interesting story, replete with excitement, in which comedy and pathos are deftly blended. Disclosing the struggle of a young and innocent girl who is handicapped by the lack of a mother's lasting influence, the scenes are exceeding original in their conception, yet absolutely true to life.

Shubert Theatre.

"He Came from Milwaukee," the jolly juvenating melange that broke the box office record for the Shubert Theatre the past week, will terminate its engagement next Saturday night. As a musical comedy novelty it is a classic, but as a laugh-provoker it is a wonder. Sam Bernard has never had a piece that yielded more hilarious humor and excruciatingly funny situations. The production is gorgeous, the music popularly melodious and the company is not only large, but it was organized with an idea to have youth and beauty predominate equally with talent.

Colonial Theatre.

Not a dull line and plenty of snappy music is the unanimous verdict awarded "The Dollar Princess," Charles Frohman's newest musical comedy, which begins the last two weeks of its engagement at the Colonial Theatre to-morrow.

There is a combination of burlesque and straight comedy in "The Dollar Princess" that holds the attention throughout, and there is enough graceful music to delight the most particular music lover.

Park Theatre.

William H. Crane is the star and George Ade's "U. S. Minister Bedloe" is the play, and it is a combination to conjure with. Mr. Crane will end his three weeks' engagement at the Park next Saturday night and move on to carry smiles and laughter to other cities. The new Ade play is really a satirical farcical entertainment, and as such it is well worth seeing. Its dialogue is a succession of clever, witty lines in Ade's brightest, slangiest style—each with a laugh in the tail of it.

Bills at the Theatres

Hollis Street Theatre.

John Drew enters on the second and last week of his engagement in "Smith" at the Hollis Street Theatre to-morrow night. No more acceptable medium for the display of his polished and convincing art has been offered by Mr. Drew to his public for many seasons, and his numerous admirers have been quick to convince him that they appreciate the fact.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

There will be vaudeville features galore of the top-notch variety at the Bowdoin Square Theatre to-morrow, and the moving picture program will be made up of melodramatic subjects.

Globe Theatre.

With no big blaze of trumpets, "The Rosary" quietly breaks into the eighth week of its engagement at the Globe Theatre to-morrow. This play has been seen by more theatregoers in Boston and neighboring towns than have attended any other attraction now playing Boston, and the play also holds the record for the season of having given more consecutive performances than any other attraction now in Boston.

Waldron's Casino.

The new "Dainty Duchess" will be the attraction at Waldron's Casino Theatre this week. The first part is styled "The Stag Club," and the burlesque, "Sultan for a Day." The adventures of Abe Laschinski and Levi Masinski form the basis of a plot, and Joe Morris is cast for the stellar role.

Scenic Temple.

Every week at the Scenic Temple some pleasing surprise is given to patrons. During the coming week one of these surprises is on the bill. The motion pictures will also be new.

Hub Theatre.

The Hub Theatre management has arranged for a program this week which will be worth seeing. The headliner will be T. F. Thomas and company in two big comedy hits, with the act changed on Thursday.

BILLS AT BOSTON THEATRES

Orpheum Theatre.

The vaudeville and motion picture program at the Orpheum this week will be made up of an entirely new list of entertainers. The success of the Orpheum under the management of Marcus Loew has been more than gratifying to its promoters.

Howard Athenaeum.

The burlesque attraction at the Howard will be furnished by the "Bohemians," with Andy Gardner and Ida Nicolai presenting "Patsy in Paris." This is said to be filled with sparkling wholesome wit, and the sisters Valmore, Lawrence and Thompson, the Bohemian Quartet and others will be viewed. The big house feature will be contributed by the "U. S. A. Boys," a military organization that does all kinds of military stunts and drills.

Gaiety Theatre.

Manager Charles Waldron's judgment in the selection of his "Trocadero" company this season is apparent in the splendid voices of every member. The company will be at the Gaiety Theatre tomorrow. The principals are all splendid singers, while the chorus is composed of girls who are both young and pretty.

Columbia Theatre.

"The Cozy Corner Girls," presenting two new farce-comedies, "Room No. 6" and "The Broken Brokers at Atlantic City," will be the attraction at the Columbia Theatre this week. Binny W[illegible], the editor and German comedian, and Bill (Grogan) Spencer are the moist of all the funmaking.

New Palace Theatre.

The patrons of the New Palace Theatre this week will have an opportunity to hear the "Seven Olivas," one of the best acts of its kind in vaudeville. Besides this, the programme will include Spessardy's performing bears, Bryant and Saville, in a "rube" comedy act; Harry Davis and company, in an aerial shooting act; the Haxtables, in singing and dancing; the Apollos, in up-to-date athletics; and Dave Marlowe, vocalist. New motion pictures will also be shown.

Austin & Stone's.

The new features at Austin & Stone's seum this week will include several side-hall novelties that are new to Boston, and which will surely supply astonishment to the patrons of the house. New vaudeville will be seen at the theatre.

Coming Events

"The Commuters" will come to the Park Theatre next week, after a run of several months in New York.

"Bunco in Arizona," a comedy melodrama which carries a supporting company of real cowboys, will be next week's attraction at the Grand Opera House.

"The Girl of My Dreams" will come to the Colonial Theatre Monday, February 27. Leila McIntyre and John Hyams are being featured in the piece.

Alexander Ligat's forthcoming Shakespearian performances in Jordan Hall, to be given early in March, will include "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice" and "Twelfth Night."

A week from to-morrow the patrons of the Hollis Street Theatre will have a chance to see one of the most effective dramas that New York has had in a long time, "The Spendthrift."

One of the season's most notable successes, "The Fourth Estate," will come to the Shubert Theatre next week, opening Monday evening, February 20. In this play a story of newspaper life is so presented as to gain and hold the attention as in a grip of steel.

For the week of February 20 at the Castle Square, John Craig announces George Bernard Shaw's comedy, "Arms and the Man." It has not been seen here for some years, but its plot and characters are well known through their use in that most popular of modern comic operas, "The Chocolate Soldier."

GREATNESS IN MELODRAMA.

Henry Irving, Mansfield and Others Have Made Great Hits.

Robert Edeson says that the most remarkable work that has been done by actors on the stage has been in melodramatic roles. Take the late Sir Henry Irving, for example. The part that brought him his first general recognition as the leading English actor of his time was Mathias in "The Bells." He followed this up with his dual parts in "The Lyons Mail," his wonderful study in "Louis XI," and then came his Napoleon in "Mme. Sans Gene," and lastly his wonderful interpretation of "Robespierre."

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

W. H. Crane began his professional career in the Holman Opera Company. Now Arthur Holman, the grandson of the original Holman, is Mr. Crane's protege and is appearing with him in "U. S. Minister Bedloe."

• • •

Burnette Radcliffe, who plays the maid in the hotel scene in "Madame X," made her first appearance on the stage as one of the Bingo Pickle girls in George Ade's "Just Out of College." She says, reminiscently, that she had more pickle than lines.

• • •

John Pollock, the press representative for "The Dollar Princess" at the Colonial Theatre, has had his hand in theatrical management as well, and at the time when "Salome" was first given in New York, he organized a dramatic version of the dance of the seven veils and toured New Jersey.

• • •

Mr. Craig will make one more Shakespearean production at the Castle Square Theatre this season, and the patrons are asked to choose between "As You Like It," "The Tempest," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "The Merchant of Venice" and "Julius Caesar."

• • •

Carroll McComas, the dainty little ingenue in "The Dollar Princess" at the Colonial Theatre, was once, strange as it may seem, an emotional leading woman. This was in a stock company in Baltimore. Mary and and the fascinating little actress played such strenuous roles as "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "Sapho," "Lena Rivers" and "Becky Sharp."

• • •

Watson Mizner was asked how he acquired the intimate knowledge of the badger game displayed in "The Deep Purple." "If you will recall," Mr. Mizner answered, "I once owned a theatrical hotel."

• • •

"In selecting a play of the present day," says Mr. Henry Miller, "I have a treasure of delight when I find that the author can spell correctly. The next consideration, if the author has an idea, is whether, in my judgment, he has put it down in dramatic form. I can readily tell by the first act whether a writer has elementary knowledge of dramatic construction, and if that is entirely missing I seldom get beyond that."

• • •

Thomas Denison, who is Fontaine, sergeant of police, in "Madame X," was a bank clerk when he heard the call of the stage. He left the teller's window in a financial institution in Asheville, North Carolina, to join an opera company.

• • •

Lee Kohlmar, who will play a prominent part in support of Rose Stahl, in "Maggie Pepper," made his debut on the stage at the Court Theatre, Meiningen, Germany, in Schiller's "The Robbers." He was the original German boy with David Warfield in "The Music Master."

• • •

Lola LaFollette, daughter of the Senator from Wisconsin, has been engaged by Henry B. Harris as leading woman for Edmund Breese in Percy MacKaye's fantastic romance, "The Scarecrow." Miss La Follette succeeds Beatrice Irwin, who was compelled to resign from the company by reason of illness.

NOISE HIS BANE.

"Madame X" Stage Manager Has an Idea.

John McKee, stage manager of "Madame X" at the Majestic, is a stickler in the matter of noises. He has been with this melodrama since its opening performance, and watches over it as carefully as a mother over a chicken that has just chopped its shell. The bane of McKee's life is noise and noise seems inevitable upon a stage where over a hundred people are employed. Just as a quiet scene is on some forgetful person will stalk along behind the scenes and the noise occasioned, though perhaps not heard in front, sounds to McKee like a charge of cavalry. He has tried all sorts of expedients to keep the stage hands quiet. Fines, however exacting, have proved ineffectual; admonitions are forgotten as soon as they are uttered.

McKee is resourceful however. He went to a department store last week and bought a complete set of the works of De Maupassant in twenty-two volumes. Then he had his carpenter construct a bookcase and announced to the men that the books were at their service. At first there was no interest in them whatever. The stage hands had never heard of the Frenchman with the unpronounceable name, and they shied at the bookcase like a mettlesome horse at a bit of white paper. However, one or two of the adventurous ones withdrew a book and retreated to the remote corners while the act was in progress, became interested, told their companions, and the astonishing result of the experiment is that if you were to step back upon the stage of the Majestic during the progress of an act these nights you might think you were in the reading room of the Boston Public Library. Every man is intent upon a volume, and the only sounds that come from their lips is an occasional wrangle over the exchange of books.

Meanwhile McKee smiles grimly.

MAY ROBSON SHOWS INVENTIVE ABILITY

Cork Leg That Made Her Famous as Acrobatic Dancer Cited as Proof.

If May Robson has not become a successful actress she would undoubtedly have developed into a first-class inventor, according to the statement of one who has accumulated data concerning her.

Miss Robson's celebrated "stay dover" the cork leg that made her famous as an acrobatic dancer, over night, was the result of her inventive turn of mind.

"It all came about because Charles Frohman had a way of saying to me: 'Now May, we'll do this or that here,' something I'd never done, perhaps, and had no intention of doing.

"I remember we were rehearsing once, and Mr. Frohman said: 'Here's where you do a dance, May.'

"I protested, he remained calm and insistent, and finally I had to agree.

"For the life of me, I didn't know what to do, and I was very blue. But as I went home from the rehearsal I saw a stocking on one of those false legs in a shop window and it gave me an idea. I filled up one of mine with cotton and put a shoe on it. Then I took a broomstick, cut it the right length and stuck it way down in the shoe. It was in the days of full skirts, and I put it under my dress skirt and fastened it to my waist.

"I practiced and found I could work it in a high kick that looked natural. I was on the right track. My husband is a doctor, and he told me where I could get a cork leg made, but I found that with a long stick in it, it showed when I walked. I caught sight of the bird cage dangling by a spring and that gave me another idea. I took the spring and put it on the top. Then I didn't have stiffness enough to work the leg, so I got a big piece of whalebone and had that fastened behind.

"On one pretext or another I delayed trying it out until the dress rehearsal, and when I came out to do the dance the company just went wild and Mr. Frohman immediately sent off for a patent for me. It was in the days of the accordion-pleated skirts, and that helped, too."

BARONESS IN VAUDEVILLE.

The Baroness von Groyss, who a few years ago renounced her Austrian station and revenues and broke her engagement to Baron Walhatter von Adlershausen, comptroller of the German Emperor's personal affairs, to marry an American civil engineer, is now through the death of her husband forced to go into vaudeville.

BOUQUET OF CHORUS GLORIES

They Are the Best Ever Gathered, Declares Charles Marks.

According to Charles Marks, whose experience ranges from the [illegible] syndicate shows to the biggest [illegible] Shubert productions, the finest looking chorus women in the world are to be found at the Casino Theatre in New York. When Mr. Marks made this observation he [illegible] Sam Bernard chorus particularly in mind. In fact, he declared that there was really no chorus with the Bernard show at the Shubert Theatre, but simply a group of carefully picked and minutely trained beauties. Other managers may not [illegible] Marks, but he sticks to his position.

"Every chorus girl in the New York Casino choral court," said Mr. Marks, "has been thoroughly taught and drilled by the dramatic and musical instructors of the Casino Theatre. We gather our recruits from the social circles of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston and thereabouts, and in our ranks we have at least a dozen college graduates.

"With our management, beauty and youth are the most essential qualities, and no chorus girl who has, 'rough it' one or more seasons on the road can lay claim to those qualities." This is sad, but it's true. As a consequence each member of [illegible] rus glories in the excitement of her first year's experience on the stage.

Which is great, if it is true.

HELEN WARE TALKED WAY INTO POSITION

"Hardest Work I Ever Did Was Getting Work to Do," She Declares.

Helen Ware is of the opinion that the one kind of a pugilist. "Life is a fight," she says, "and one has to enjoy fighting in order to win out.

"The hardest work I ever had was getting work to do. Time and again I had been refused a position because the managers had got into the habit of refusing. The day I went to Wagenhals & Kemper was a murky sticky one. Mr. Kemper was [illegible] all but [illegible] hope. [illegible] What's the use? I asked myself. As I sat in the office waiting I suddenly [illegible] of someone saying [illegible]

"It's a clever [illegible] wouldn't make some [illegible] a traveling salesman.'

"I looked up, and someone stood over [illegible]. I don't know to this day who it was. [illegible] Why? [illegible] more through curiosity than anything else.

"'Because,' he said, 'the successful traveling salesman [illegible] not only the line of goods, but the talk. I believe you've got the goods, but [illegible] you're too down in the mouth to speak up. Now brace up and when you're given the chance, ask the talk of your [illegible]

"I did. When I got into that office I asked for a [illegible] Mr. Kemper [illegible] and I positively [illegible] resign not to [illegible] the [illegible] polished man on the other side of the desk that he engaged me on the spot."

'MANON' HAS RIVAL IN 'CHILDREN'S CRUSADE'

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The [illegible] of the week, the first performance by the Boston company of Massenet's "Manon," [illegible] in the general interest it attracts by the extraordinary [illegible] of [illegible] Pierne's "Children's Crusade" by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Cecilia Society, assisted by a [illegible] chorus of [illegible].

This is the second [illegible] and orchestra [illegible] by the [illegible] Symphony Orchestra and the [illegible]. It will take place on Thursday evening.

Massenet's "Manon" will be sung on Wednesday. Curiously enough, Edward Clement, probably the most distinguished French tenor of the day, has been engaged to appear both in "Manon" and the "Children's Crusade."

The production of "Manon" this week at the Boston Opera will be followed next week by Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," an opera founded, like the Massenet work, upon the romance of Abbe Prevost. The Italian Manon will be sung by [illegible] Alda, Pasquale Amato [illegible].

Monday [illegible] Nordica [illegible] Const [illegible] Love [illegible]

Wednesday [illegible] Massenet with [illegible] and Manon [illegible]

[illegible] and a new tenor [illegible]

Saturday [illegible] will be repeated [illegible] "L'Enfant Prodigue" [illegible]

Saturday [illegible] West [illegible] as Jack Rance [illegible]

• • •

"Manon Lescaut" [illegible] Abbe Prevost inspired [illegible] to write operas [illegible] was Auber, whose [illegible] been forgotten [illegible] Massenet [illegible] "Manon" [illegible] 1884 [illegible] Puccini selected [illegible] for an opera.

The [illegible] the French [illegible] different. Massenet's [illegible] speaking [illegible] heavy touch of the [illegible].

The action begins in the courtyard of Amiens, where the Chevalier Des Grieux meets Manon [illegible] who is being taken to a convent by her brother. Manon does not want to go to a convent and agrees to elope.

Ferruccio Busoni, the distinguished composer and pianist, will be represented on this week's program in both capacities, for he will be the soloist, playing the seldom-heard concerto C minor for pianoforte by Beethoven and his own suite for orchestra "Turandot" will have its first performance in Boston. The "Turandot" suite was played in New York last year by the Philharmonic Society with much success. The Beethoven concerto will come almost as a novelty for it has not been heard at a Symphony concert since 1888 when it was played by Mrs. H. H. A. Beach. Mr. Fiedler has placed on this program Richard Strauss's "Don Quixote." Taken all in all, the performance of this interesting work was the finest achievement of the orchestra last season when it was included in the twenty third program. Read Carefully—Rules of Contest!

This contest is open to every man, woman and child in New England, irrespective of age, except employes of the AMERICAN and their families.

All contestants must be legal residents of New England.

The FIRST ENROLLMENT (for any candidate NOT ALREADY ENROLLED) received between January 20 and February 12 will count for 500 votes. It is not necessary to use any special printed form for enrollment—a letter or postcard will do.

Vote coupons from the Daily or Sunday AMERICAN will count in this contest. A vote coupon will appear in each issue of the AMERICAN (daily and Sunday) during the life of this contest which will be good for one vote daily and 10 votes Sunday.

The one who receives the largest number of votes, irrespective of districts, will be awarded the capital prize.

The ones who receive the largest number of votes in each district will be awarded the prizes as scheduled. In the event of total votes for any contestants who win being tied, similar prizes will be given to each winner so tied.

Each vote coupon will be valueless after two weeks from the date printed in the AMERICAN.

The Contest Editor's decision will be final on any question which may arise as to coupon votes.

All mail matter sent to the Contest Department should be addressed to the AMERICAN CONTEST DEPARTMENT, P. O. Box 227, Boston, Mass.

Many packages of ballots have been received with insufficient stamps affixed. Hereafter such packages will not be accepted.

The contest began Sunday, January 15th, 1911, and will end at 10 p. m., June 15th, 1911.

A vote credit will be allowed for subscriptions turned in for the Sunday AMERICAN (subscriptions to the daily AMERICAN will not be received).

No Sunday subscriptions for less than six months' period will be received.

The AMERICAN will not be responsible for any subscriptions sent in through the mails in any form other than postoffice money order, express order or certified check. Cash sent through the mails will be sent at the risk of the person sending it.

You do not have to collect subscriptions in advance, but as an evidence of good faith each Sunday AMERICAN subscription turned in must be accompanied by a small cash GUARANTEE payment as follows:

Length of Subscription.	Guarantee Required.	Vote Credit.
6 Months	25 Cents	500
1 Year	50 Cents	1,500
2 Years	100 Cents	3,500
3 Years	100 Cents	5,000

The guaranteed payment, in each case, will apply on the LAST part of the terms of each subscription—subscribers must begin to pay for the paper immediately, beginning with your newsdealer's first delivery, at his regular delivery rate. The guarantee payments DO NOT apply until the LATTER part of the subscription term. For instance, if you have subscribed for three years and paid the $1.00 guarantee required with a three years' subscription, at the end of your term of subscription you will not have to pay for the last dollar's worth of papers.

After subscriptions are received at Contest Headquarters, a letter is sent to EACH PERSON WHO SUBSCRIBES, which will contain two printed forms—one the AMERICAN'S order on any newsdealer to begin delivery of the Sunday AMERICAN immediately to the subscriber whose name is written on this newsdealer's order. The other—a return postal card which each subscriber should have the newsdealer sign and return at once to Contest Department. Until this postal card is returned by the newsdealer, no credit for the subscriptions will be given to the contestant. Take these two forms at once to any newsdealer you may select—leave the order with him, have him fill in the blank spaces provided on the postal card, and mail postal back to the Contest Department at the earliest possible moment.

Contestants should see that all subscription blanks are carefully filled in and written plainly and legibly with every blank space provided on subscription blank filled in properly—except the No. .... in the upper left-hand corner of each subscription blank, which should be left unfilled for the use of the Contest Department.

Votes cannot be transferred from one contestant to another after receipt of same by the AMERICAN.

Votes should be sent in tied together in bundles of 100. All contestants are requested to use a rubber stamp with contestant's name and address. MANY GOOD SALES IN REAL ESTATE MARKET

By FRANK A. LAVELLE.

THE volume of sales in the real estate market the past week reached a very good mark and on the whole the market continued to show the improvement that has been so noticeable the past few weeks. Though few sales of very large character were put to record yet the aggregate total of the small-sized properties sold indicated that there is now good stability to trading and that plenty of investors are looking for good things.

The suburban business still holds up very strong and this fact is one of the prominent features of the market. Every suburb in Greater Boston is experiencing the well-sustained demand for properties in these respective sections and the indications point to a very busy Spring all through the metropolitan district. Farms and country places are also meeting with popular favor just now and the demand for the former is the best for this time of year that it has been for many seasons.

Real Estate Notes.

Investors are taking many large new apartment structures. The week saw several transactions which gave builders a good profit and left them with capital free for further operations.

* * *

New fields for the exploitation of realty holdings are being opened by the share companies or trusts. If they manage to get a wide public interest in their stocks and bonds there may be some lively manipulation of metropolitan real estate. The investor in such securities should examine the companies' finances closely and make sure that the directors in control shall not be able to load up with questionable holdings at high prices.

LANDSCAPE EXPERTS NOW HAVE MUCH WORK

Demand for Improved Environments of Homes Has Resulted in a New Profession.

Landscape architecture is to-day a widely recognized profession or art, and those who follow it constitute a class which is increasing in influence year by year. Twenty years ago this was not the case; the profession of landscape architecture was numerically insignificant, and, in general, there was no conception of the possibilities of beauty in land taken over for use, and, in fact, no realization of any such need.

To-day, as said, the general position in respect of this is much more satisfactory, throughout the country may be noted a widespread acceptance of the truth that a beautiful house in a setting of landscape that has undergone no process of beautification fails in large measure of the effect it should produce.

In the last decade it has been possible for a large number of men to take up as a profession the beautifying of landscapes, and members of that comparatively new guild are scattered among the various cities of the country.

Last Winter a wealthy resident of a New England city called upon a landscape architect with reference to his Summer home in a suburban community. He had spent a large sum of money on his home and a great deal in improving his estate, but somehow he was not satisfied.

"Can you suggest anything," asked the owner when the landscape specialist called at his office with several photographs and a tentative drawing under his arm. "Well, did you find anything the matter?" he added as the young man merely smiled.

"Everything," was his reply, as he turned to a photograph of the estate as it then was. "In the first place," pointing to a hill running down from the rear of the house, "that hill should be terraced with stone; your stable should be moved from here to there; you have too many trees in front of your house, that lane to the left should be lined with hard maples and not with those mangy Lombardy poplars."

"That's enough," he said. "Now, go down there and fix all those things and also the rest that you have not told me about."

It is the testimony of landscape architects that not only are the owners of large estates calling upon them, but that owners of homes whose lots occupy comparatively small space, say even 100 by 200 feet, have begun to realize that their services are of distinctive value. The result may be chiefly seen in the tasteful gardens of places suburban to this city, in back yards with their pergolas and seats, benches and vases in stone and concrete—little spots where quaint and enduring charms invite the visitor to linger through pleasant hours.

SHOW GOOD GAINS IN CONSTRUCTION WORK

Annual Record In Many Cities Gives Insight Into Magnitude of Building Operations.

Probably the most complete insight into the magnitude of building operations in this country for 1910 has just been compiled from official reports from seventy-three cities to Construction News. It shows that permits were taken out in these cities for the construction of 216,011 buildings, involving an aggregate investment of $783,831,522 in 1910, against 212,210 buildings, involving an aggregate investment of $783,221,420 for 1909, an increase for the year just closed of 3,801 in the number of permits, and a decrease of $41,389,898 in cost, or 5 per cent. There were gains in thirty-four cities and decreases in thirty-nine.

It is significant that Chicago should show an increase for the year of 6 per cent, as against a decrease in New York city, including Manhattan and the Bronx, of 18 per cent; Philadelphia, 12, Brooklyn, 41; Pittsburg, 17, San Francisco, 19; St. Louis, 17, St. Paul, 39, Milwaukee, 13, and some of considerable magnitude in other cities, but it shows clearly that Chicago was the most prosperous city in the point of building construction of any city in the country. Some of the Pacific coast, as well as some of the Southern cities, made wonderful records, while a number of enterprising smaller interior cities of the Middle West have likewise prospered. Los Angeles had an increase of [illegible] per cent, Portland, Ore., 61, Oakland, Cal., 21; San Diego, 66, Dallas, 23, Toledo, 34, Birmingham, 55, Jacksonville, 38, Peoria, 41; Davenport, 146, Detroit, 22, Cleveland, 16, Minneapolis, 10; Kansas City, 3; Duluth, 262; Baltimore, 25, Indianapolis, 13; Atlanta, 37, Memphis, 45, and Columbus, O., 37.

BACK TO THE FARM.

Present Theory Is All Wrong Says Professor Bailey.

In speaking of the "country life movement," Professor L. H. Bailey of Cornell College says: "The present census shows that not over one-quarter live on the farms, and I believe that in 1920 not one-fifth will be on the farms and that will be enough. We are passing out of rural civilization.

"Merely to place more people back on the land will not reduce the cost of living. The economic question is how to find out the cause of waste between the farm and the dinner table.

"What we need is economic co-ordinate relationship between the city and country in order to balance up our civilization. Because there are less farmers now than ten years ago is no reason to think that there will be a falling off of farm products, because science is taking the place of farm hands and there is a sufficient ratio of people in the country to produce for all mankind."

Professor Bailey favors settlement in villages. Many factories, he thought, could be taken from cities to towns where employes could have their own truck garden to help support them.

AUCTION SALES IN JAPAN.

Sealed Bids Invited, and There Is No Shouting.

Sealed bids are used in auctioning property in Japan. There is no shouting. The auctioneer announces to the audience that he has such and such a piece of property for sale and invites bids. Those who wish to bid write their bids and names on slips of paper. The paper is folded and placed in a box. When the auctioneer sees no more bids coming he opens the box and sorts out the bids. The highest bid takes the property.

It is like a bond sale, no one knows what his neighbor bids. If a bidder is anxious to get the property he will not put in a small offer.

On the contrary, he will very likely bid all the property is worth. For this reason an owner never puts up his property for auction unless he wants to sell it.

MODEL HOMES WERE A GOOD INVESTMENT

How One Development Company Made Easy Terms and Values Have Doubled.

Some enterprises in the way of model homes have failed for lack of adaptability to the real needs of the people for whom they were intended, says a writer in the American Review of Reviews, in speaking of "Congestion in Cities and the Housing Problem."

Continuing, he states that their promoters went too much on theory. The result has been otherwise in the case of the model homes, whether apartments or houses, erected by a New York development company. The tract covers thirty-two acres of land and is now valued at $1,500,000, though the original investment in real estate represented a much smaller sum. The average price at which houses were sold some years ago was $4,800, but many who paid such a price are asking from $6,000 to $7,000 for their property now, and few are anxious to sell even at considerable advance, so well are they satisfied with their homes.

In general, these home owners obtained their houses by the payment of ten per cent. down, twenty years being given them if they desired in which to pay for their property, the company giving each purchaser a deed and taking an instalment mortgage for the remaining ninety per cent of the price. The uniform sum paid in monthly was calculated so as to pay out the principal of the mortgage in twenty years with legal interest in deferred payments.

Most home owners here have been anxious to pay for their homes faster than required, but the unusually liberal conditions were made because the objects of the company were home-making rather than speculative profit-seeking. Purchasers need not remain debtors of the company for the entire twenty year period, and after establishing a reasonable equity have generally found it easy to obtain at a low interest rate a loan covering the unpaid balance. A feature of the scheme is a life insurance plan which protects both the company and the purchaser.

ACRES OF FREE LAND.

Government Throws Open Vast Tractsi n Western Colorado.

The Interior Department has recently thrown open for homestead entry about 4,000,000 acres of the former Ute reservation in western Colorado, and claims for the land are being rapidly filed in the various land offices. It is intimated that the rush for the acreage is so extensive that it will be all taken up before the belated arrivals from other States can reach the offices where claims have to be entered.

In an opinion by the first assistant secretary, a ruling by the commissioner of the general land office was reversed, and hundreds of agricultural claims, held up as conflicting with conservative legislation of last year, will be passed to patent.

The commissioners held that the act of June 22, 1910, providing for agricultural entries on lands classed as containing coal deposits, did not apply to former Indian lands ceded to the government.

The decision means the successful outcome of earnest efforts to have the commissioner's decree overturned and many hundreds of awaiting entries in Colorado Ute lands are released to patent.

There are 4,000,000 acres in Western Colorado withdrawn from entry as containing coal. Most of this is in the old Ute reservations which gradually have gone back to the public domain with [illegible] intersement provisions for the In[illegible]. The Glassner entry in the Southe[illegible] reservation was rejected by the [illegible] fice on December 3, 1910, on the [illegible] that it could not be allowed.

SKYSCRAPER FOR SEATTLE.

41-Story Building Will Be Largest Outside of New York.

Construction work on the highest office building in the world outside of New York city will be begun within a few weeks on a structure planned for Seattle, Wash. It will be a forty-one-story building, permit for which has just been granted the estate of L. C. Smith of Syracuse, N. Y.

Building interests were fairly astounded some weeks ago with the announcement of a fifty-five story building to be built in New York city, and since that time other buildings, which will tower nearly as high, have been announced as to be built.

PLAN BIG EXHIBITS AT REAL ESTATE SHOW

THE advisory committee on the real estate fair, to be held under the auspices of the Boston Real Estate Exchange at Horticultural Hall, April 3-15 next, feel assured that the exhibition will be a success and that the display and assemblage of real estate plots and plans and building details will be most interesting and attractive. The chairman of the committee, Mr. Vlaus, has taken advantage of the unusual number and variety of projects of urban improvement now being discussed to secure the presentation of the most important of them for the information and enlightenment of the public at the fair.

Boston has now as never before an extraordinary variety of public and private plans of development. As President Smith of the [illegible] presentation of these important projects before the citizens and quick advantage is being taken of this unique chance for general assemblage for public inspection.

Some of the Exhibitors.

The directors of the East Boston Company, which has lately acquired the Boston Land Company, and become the largest land proposition of the Greater Boston with a territory of 1,000 acres, have unanimously voted that the treasurer, Charles E. Adams, be authorized to rent adequate space and prepare plans of its property and of the proposed new dock system in East Boston and to devise and prepare other features for an exhibit at the real estate fair in Horticultural Hall. A contract has been signed with the Exposition Company for a twelve-foot space in a conspicuous location to the left of the main entrance and colored pictorial plans will be exhibited of the proposed great dock system with its projected warehouses and approaches.

Vice President Byrnes of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company, has signified his willingness to exhibit the great transportation [illegible] of the transformation of the Revere Beach railroad into a standardized and electrified new trunk line with a tunnel under Boston harbor.

Laurence Minot, managing trustee of the Park square lands, has contracted for a conspicuous [illegible] space and will display the very interesting plans of the trustees for a broad and comprehensive treatment of this important district in the centre of the city.

Mayor Fitzgerald will exhibit for the city a large picture of the contemplated annex to City Hall on the site of the old Court house, and other exhibitors of new projects are planning to take part and their names will be announced shortly.

Col. Wm. A. Gaston, President of the Shawmut bank, has spoken for space at the fair, to show the Shawmut bank building as a fine type of a city office structure. Such representations give the requisite tone and prestige to the enterprise, and, as the floor space of Horticultural Hall is limited, the outlook is that it will all be engaged before the end of the present month. The management reports contracts signed and in sight for about three-quarters of the entire space already.

Among other contracts for space signed up the past week were those of the Colwell Land Company, which will exhibit the new invention of fresh water heaters, a system by which a house is furnished with a continuous hot water service, and the Space Saving Appliance Company, T. A. Callahan, the local representative of this firm, will exhibit several space saving devices for homes, one of which will be a combination bath tub, wash tub and kitchen sink which has been especially designed for use in many small apartment suites now so popular to many householders. The exhibition of these features will be made the first time at the Real Estate Show.

"The Home Beautiful."

One of the most popular features in connection with the show will be a model of a six-room dwelling, completely furnished, which will cover floor space 57x28 feet. It will be of good, substantial design and practical from every standpoint. This exhibit will be known as "The Home Beautiful." It will represent a cost of $10,000. A dozen companies, including builders, building supplies, contractors and house furnishers will participate in this exhibit, plans for which are now being made by a prominent architect of this city.

"The Home Beautiful" is intended to show the cost both as to the construction and furnishing of the model home. It will be so designed, constructed and furnished that all interested in the problem of the home may secure an estimate of the cost of a similar dwelling, or of one of similar type but of cheaper or greater price, and its equipment.

In connection with this exhibit Mr. Rowe has received a communication from a well-known builder, in which he says: "The problem of building and equipping the 'home ideal' in this age of progressiveness is one which not only calls for broad experience, but also much of the artistic capabilities, in order that the smallest space be utilized to best possible advantage without sacrificing appearance.

"Much has been written about the 'ideal home' from the standpoint of the individual writer. What may be ideal from the viewpoint of the man of wealth would not appeal to the man of modest income, consequently the home which would satisfy the desire of the greatest number would be the nearest to what constitutes the 'ideal.' Within the past few years the average housewife has become so educated to the [illegible] conveniences of new homes that [illegible] time ago is now [illegible] date builder [illegible] These con[illegible] devise ways and [illegible] instalment.

"No matter how small the structure it is possible to make it ideal in convenience and artistic capabilities, without a great expenditure, if one has had practical experience and has the ability to apply it."

SELLS TWO FARMS.

Globe Real Estate Co. Disposes of These Through American.

The Globe Real Estate Company of Worcester, which recently opened a Boston office in the [illegible] building, reports through its manager W. J. Brine, the sale of two properties which were both disposed of through advertisement in the Sunday AMERICAN of January 29. One was a 100-acre farm in Ware, owned by Anthony Weletkus, which was sold to Francis A. Sampson of New Braintree for $3,500, and the other was a village plot of two acres, with cottage house, barn and henhouse, located near North Brookfield, owned by L. J. Strong and sold to [illegible] Johnson of Boston for $1,200.

Mr. Brine states that though he had advertised both these places in other newspapers, he was never able to get buyers until he advertised in the AMERICAN. He also reports that the company has a contract to build a cottage house for James H. Moore of Attleboro, who saw the advertisement of the Globe Real Estate Company in the AMERICAN. The company has just published a catalogue of 200 farms which is sent on application.

BIG PROPERTY SOLD.

Thomas G. Washburn Purchases Investment Parcel.

One of the most important sales of the week, which went to record yesterday, was that by which the six-story stone and brick mercantile structure at Nos. 10, 11, and 12 South Market street, extending through to No. 36 Chatham street, near Merchants' row, has been acquired by Thomas G. Washburn, the well-known operator, from Horace G. Allen. The building covers an area of 1,500 square feet. The property, which has been purchased for investment, is assessed on a total valuation of $75,000, of which $63,000 is on the land and the balance on the building.

BUYS IN SAUGUS.

J. W. Wilbur Takes Over Large Tract for Development.

J. W. Wilbur has just bought a large tract of land situated east of the Saugus river, Saugus. The property, which contains about 2,750,000 square feet of desirable land for building sites, was formerly a part of the Walter Scott estate, and was purchased from George Niven, administrator. Mr. Wilbur will begin work on the property at once, platting it into lots and laying out streets, and will put it on the market this Spring through the AMERICAN. The purchase was for spot cash.

Some Cheap Houses.

A builder of Oklahoma writes the Bureau of Manufactures that he finds it profitable to build four-room cement houses and sell them complete with cisterns, front and rear porches of cement, and outbuildings, including the ground, at $1,000, on the instalment plan. He is doing this thirty-five miles from a railroad station, notwithstanding heavy freight charges of twenty-five cents a hundredweight drayage on all cement, lumber, hardware, and all other building material except sand. The cottages in question have cement floors, steel ceilings, partition walls of hollow blocks, as well as outside walls. Although the roofs are shingled, the contractor says that the whole structure is practically fireproof and constitutes a very substantial building.

Dark, rich, top soil and loamy sub-soil underlaid with clay close to the surface; the ideal soil and climate for oranges, pecans and garden truck, produces the brightest and best oranges and grapefruit shipped out of Florida, $500 to $1,000 worth per acre.

MANY MEN MAKE $1,000 NET ANNUAL PROFIT PER ACRE.

Produces $525 worth of cabbage per acre, $500 strawberries, $972 celery, $953 lettuce, $400 onions, $400 cucumbers, $400 tomatoes, $580 eggplant, $400 radishes, $250 potatoes and everything northern markets demand in like proportion, as well as corn, hay, sugar cane and all staple crops.

The soil, the equable climate, and the abundant water make all this possible. The thermometer seldom goes above 90 degrees in the daytime and 75 at night, the government records for thirty-five years show an average day temperature of 78 degrees. Florida, being practically surrounded by sea and gulf, is swept by sea breezes that make the Summer relatively cool and the Winter uniformly warm. Under these conditions the ordinary outdoor crops of Florida are as prolific and as good as the costly hothouse products of the North—yet without the glass house and without the artificial heat.

Hence we say that Nature has done more for man in Florida than in any other state. Every day in the year is a day of planting, cultivating, or harvesting—or all together, and farming is thus forever placed beyond the fickleness of the weather and made the one occupation that can absolutely be depended upon.

You are invited to come to an established and intelligent community of homes and schools. The pioneering was done in Hernando County long ago.

YOU CAN BUY ONE OF THESE FARMS ON MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

Brooksville, the county-seat of Hernando County, is situated on the only range of hills in all Southern Florida, its altitude being 828 feet above sea level. It is always fanned by cool breezes from gulf or ocean, and the oppressiveness of the lower altitudes is never experienced. Its high hills insure an absence of mosquitoes, malaria and other disadvantages of the flat, low-lying land of other sections. It is a thriving, busy and thoroughly modern city of about fifteen hundred inhabitants. It is equipped with electric lights, an ice-plant, numerous factories, the largest brick plant in the State, six churches, excellent schools, and many enterprising stores. Two railroads enter the town. The telephone service covers the entire county and connects with the long-distance service.

The people are cultured, wide-awake, progressive, extremely hospitable and anxious to welcome the energetic Northerner who comes to develop their county.

OUR FREE BOOK

explains everything regarding Florida. It goes into detail as to location of our land, the climate, the soil, the different cities near our property, the various kinds of fruits and vegetables that are now being grown there and sold for high prices. It also explains the length of time required for the proper cultivation of the various fruits and the number of crops harvested yearly.

The book also contains tables compiled by the Government of the United States, showing the average productions per acre in dollars and cents. To the man in the North with a worked-out farm these figures will seem astounding, but they are taken from the Government reports and are therefore reliable.

We do not ask you to take our word. Our book makes plain statements and you can easily verify them.

Send for the book at once. Better still, come and talk it over with us. We are a New England company, made up of highly responsible New England men, and we selected this land especially to please New England people.

Opportunity Is Knocking at Your Door—Everybody Can Try It, as It Costs Nothing.

How many words can you form from the letters contained in the word "MASSACHUSETTS"?

This contest is one in which every person will have an equal chance and an opportunity to win one of the awards described below.

Sit down and see how many words you can construct from the letters composing the word "MASSACHUSETTS."

Here are the rules and conditions governing the contest:

FIRST—With each list submitted must be the correct name and address of the contestant.

SECOND—Do not use the same letter twice in any word unless appearing twice in the word "MASSACHUSETTS."

THIRD—Contestants must write plainly on one side of the sheet, with words alphabetically arranged in columns and numbered so as to show how many different words have been formed.

FOURTH—No foreign words, abbreviations, affixes or suffixes can be used. Former successful contestants, Real Estate Agents or their employees not eligible. It is understood that contestants shall be bound by the decision of the judges, who are members and associates of this company.

FIFTH—In the event of a tie of two or more contestants an award of the same kind and value as that offered will be made to each so tied, provided there is no collusion. We reserve the right to make additional awards should the papers submitted seem to justify this course in the judgment of the company.

Awards The two persons sending in the largest number of correct words will each receive a deed for one lot situated at RONKONKOMA, Long Island. Property is located in near proximity to Beautiful Lake Ronkonkoma, "THE LAKEWOOD OF LONG ISLAND." Our land is high and dry, and there is Sailing, Fishing and Boating at the Lake. It is the terminus of the Great Motor Parkway, where a palatial clubhouse is now being erected. There are charming bungalow and building sites, and development of the property is assured. We are constantly making improvements.

There is no obligation upon the part of the successful contestants to buy land, but should they do so the lot awarded will be placed next to the one or more purchased by them, and a deed will be given for it when the others are paid for. A fee is charged for recording, etc., all deeds.

We do not publish a list of winners. Booklet entitled "Letters from Successful Contestants" will be sent upon request. We reserve the right to select all lots awarded in this contest. The contest will close on Saturday, February 25, at 12 o'clock noon. All answers should be sent to

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 47

Imagination Creates a Trust

Some one has said that business is prosaic. Business is full of imagination. Advertising is nothing more nor less than applying your imagination to a plan of distribution and the man who uses the most imagination, together with the greatest amount of common sense in the conduct of his business will see new ways to advertise and push goods of which the prosaic commonplace man cannot conceive.

Take one of the great type setting machines that is marketed by a trust of many millions. The man who conceived it was at one time a stenographer in the City Court of New York. It was his practice at night to transcribe his notes of the day's proceedings and he dreamed a dream one night which sent him within a few days to a practical German machinist whom he set to work trying to perfect a machine operated like a typewriter that would take the little globules of molten lead, cast them in a mold and deliver them in a line ready for printing.

This imaginative stenographer got his friends to put money into his idea and for ten or twelve years they sank all they had into what some people thought was a dream. From the dream, however, eventually came the perfected type setting machine and to-day the dreamer is treasurer of the company, rich far beyond any of the dreams he had ever dreamed.

So it is with the distribution of goods. Use imagination and common sense. You have got to make people turn to your goods and if you can find new ways to distribute your goods it's like finding a new market. No matter what you may have to sell, advertising to the person you can sell it to will market it if it is desirable. But advertising to be successful must be a plain, truthful statement of facts and must be persistently carried on at regular intervals.

The most effective form of advertising is newspaper advertising. It's the kind that covers more comprehensively any locality than any other. It will tell your story to a town or a city as no other advertising can. New England is the greatest purchasing centre per capita in the United States and the HUB of New England is Boston. One million four hundred and some odd thousand live within ten miles of the State House and the paper of largest circulation is the Boston American. It can tell your story to more people than any other.

LOWEST RATES. HIGHEST REFERENCES.

FIRST PAYMENT only $5, other payments as you choose, the above terms are good only on TUESDAY, FEB. 14, on which day I will be at my Boston office from 8 a. m. till 7 p. m.; call to see me on this day and save money. I make a specialty of procuring patents in rejected cases; last week I procured the allowance of the claims in an application for patent which two other firms of patent attorneys had previously prosecuted without being able to procure a single claim, and which a third firm of patent attorneys had afterwards examined and reported unpatentable; it cost the inventor in this case just $3,200 to find out from these patent attorneys that they could not get him a patent, so in order to get funds to have me prosecute his rejected application to allowance he was to sign away a considerable interest in his variable invention, now his assignee refused to take [illegible] that interest for less than $2,500, if the inventor of the machine to which this application for patent relates had come to me in the first place the entire cost of a patent would have been considerably less than $100, and he would not have had to dispose of an interest therein; a large corporation purchased an option on this patent shortly after the application had been filed, full particulars and proof of the above statement on application, what I am constantly doing for others I can do for you; therefore, it will pay you to call to see me Tuesday if you have an idea for a patent. ALEXANDER J. WEDDERBURN, Registered Patent Attorney, 6, 7 and 8 Puritan Trust bldg., 55 Court st., Boston; main office, Washington, D. C., other offices, Chicago, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and New York.

The Men Who Play the Game

By Herbert Kaufman

(Copyright, 1911, by Herbert Kaufman.)

They ask and they make no compromise. They aim at the game and not at the fame. They struggle and toil and resist and persist—they persevere till they make good, but they play according to fixed and set rules—they take no trick by trickery.

They refuse victory at the price of dishonor. They prefer a just defeat to a smirched success.

Obstacles are expected pawns in their course. They anticipate the "checkmates" of opposition as a legitimate percentage to be reckoned with.

They neither bear nor wear a price. They fight with steel and not with gold. Therefore, they neither proffer nor accept a bribe. They mark no cards. They choose to lose or win by virtue of clean hands.

Their will is the most implacable, relentless and terrible force that springs from the souls of humans. They desire no quarter and they extend none. They strike with all their might, but, by the same token, they do not pine or whine when the heel of the victor is ground into their throats.

They are content with hard conditions, and demand an equal fortitude in those who challenge them. Pity and sentimentality are foreign to their natures and to their methods—BUT, if they do not soften at the cringing appeal of the weaker, neither do they exact more than their just allotment in settlement.

They are Makers of the Roads and Pilots of the Seas, guided [illegible]heir charted plans. They are the Builders in the Wilderness—the Outposts of Empires-to-be—the Watchers at the Dike—the promoters and the defenders of progress.

They are Players of the Game—the universal Spartans—the alloys of society, square of jaw and nature and shoulder—fearing conscience too much to fear menace or men.

They stood in the Pass of Thermopylae and made a hundred spears deadlier than a million. They held the Alpine highways against the covetous Austrian hordes. They forgot arithmetic at Balaklava and transmuted four hundred Sheffield sabers into magic falchions. They sped the triremes at Salamis. They lashed the sails of Drake and manned the cannon of Perry. They crawled across the Arctic ice—they cut their way through the tangles of mid-Africa.

They have always yielded their lives rather than yield to irresolution. Few of their names are known and few of their graves are marked, but the glory of their courage is imperishable—a heritage for all tomorrows—spark to heat the blood and fire the future generations with inspiration.

They are of no sect and of no caste. They are born alike from the loin of peasant and of peer. Their fraternity is not of breed nor brain nor brawn, but of ambition. Duty is their mission and its fulfillment their ultimate hope.

They heed no voice that urges the softer choice. They do not rest until they have stood the test.

Too Bad! None of Us Can Play the Piano!

How Many Members of Your Family Play the Piano?

Do you play it? If the ONE who does play it is not at home, the piano becomes only an ornament. Is your piano merely an ornament? If so, here's an opportunity for every member of the family to make it earn (in musical entertainment) the price paid for it every day for the many years a piano will last. There is many a time when you would like to hear some popular tune or something from one of the operas, but there is no one around to play the piano. You have company—Mary is asked to play, but she is out of practice; mother is asked, and she has forgotten; little sister plays her exercises, and maybe John plays a lot of street music, so father says: "What's the use of having a piano? I wish I had learned how to play when a boy. You can bet I would keep the thing busy."

WELL, HERE IS THE REMEDY

We are living in a different age. No one prefers the use of candles to electric light, or the stage-coach to the express train. We are living in a musical age. We are not content with a few "old-timers." We want hundreds of new and popular airs, classics or operas, and none are too good.

LET US TAKE YOUR OLD AND IDLE PIANO

We will buy it from you, and allow you practically what you paid for it, and deliver to you in its place a new, right-from-the-factory, AUTO-PIANO, which every member of the family can play at any time of the day or night, and without a knowledge of music.

The proposition we offer is only open for a limited time, and is created for the purpose of advertising this wonderful, new, up-to-date instrument. It takes up no more room than your old piano. It can be played, just the same, by hand or by foot power. Largest selection of player pianos to choose from. We have five different makes. Beside the Auto-Piano we have the Kranich & Bach player piano, Apollo player piano, Poole player piano and the Charles F. Norris player piano.

Let us tell you about our Exchange Plan, and mail you a beautifully illustrated booklet of patriculars.

A Rich Lady From Back Bay Buys Trust Piano

$60—ON CREDIT

But Not At Trust Prices

She had looked at nearly all the high-class Trust pianos in their gilded warerooms, and she had heard the carefully dressed, glib-tongued salesmen expatiate upon the merits and beauties of their high-priced instruments until she decided to buy. In her conversation with the smooth Piano Trust representative she discussed the difference in prices as quoted by the Trust in their elegant warerooms, and by the Trust's worst enemy, our humble selves, the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms. The over-zealous and jealous salesman grew so excited that he gave us a vicious tongue-lashing and went so far in his wicked attack on us that his language offended his refined customer, who, by the way, is one of the swellest women in this city, living in her Winter home on Commonwealth Ave. This gentlewoman has since told us that after listening to the miserable lying attack upon us she grew rather curious and wished to see us and find out for herself what pianos we had and what we really charged. To make a long story short, she came up here and we sold her a Trust piano of the very best make at a saving of several hundred dollars, and the joke of it all is, it is of the very same style and make piano that the Trust clerk failed to sell.

Dear Reader, if you want some fun when you are buying your piano at the high-priced, gilded warerooms down town, just ask the salesman why it is that the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms can sell that salesman's own pianos at such ridiculously low prices—and then listen to his funny attempts at an explanation, which we assure you will amuse you—just try it once—please.

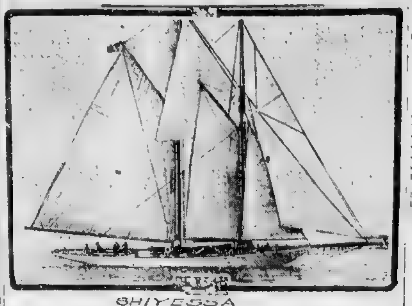
YACHTS AND POWER BOATS



SHIYESSA

Schooner Shiyessa, one of the starters in Boston to Bermuda race, June 3.

The yachtsmen from this vicinity and New York who are to take in the yacht race starting from Boston [illegible] and finishing at Bermuda, will have all the entertainment they care to indulge in, as the various yacht clubs of Bermuda have already planned a series of entertainments during race week.

Mayor Fitzgerald has been [illegible] and many of the officials of Bermuda [illegible] guests of the yachtsmen.

The Boston Yacht Club [illegible] who will have charge of the start, is [illegible] assured that it will be one of the biggest racing events along the New England coast, and several of the owners of big New York schooners have indicated that they will start.

The schooner Shiyessa, owned by C. G. Murrell of New York, and formerly owned by Demorest Lloyd of this city, will be one of the starters, and if the big racing boat makes the same record that [illegible] last Summer from New York [illegible] to the race with the Vanderbilt [illegible] Vagrant, some of the other boats will have to go some.

The Eastern Yacht Club will have a race this Summer that is sure to [illegible] over the big New York boats and possibly one or two of the Philadelphia racing schooners. This race will be from New London to Marblehead, at the close of the Yale-Harvard boat race. Two good [illegible] have been offered for this race and it will mean a boom for big [illegible] in Massachusetts Bay. Next season will probably witness racing among some of the biggest boats afloat in New England waters, as several of the New York Yacht Club fleets are considering coming over to Marblehead for the races. Nothing on the coast for yacht racing can excel Massachusetts Bay, and all that is needed to get the big fellows around the Cape is a little hustle from now out on the part of the regatta committees of some of the big yacht clubs. Make up the races and put up the trophies; the owners of the yachts will do the rest.

Guy Lowell, "Bob" Emmons and George S. Dabney are beginning to plan for their trip to Germany in April. These men, known as among the best [illegible] in the country, will take the three [illegible] boats Chat, Bibelot and Beaver over to Kiel to race for the Emperor William cup and the Prince Henry trophy in June. Quite a number of New York and Boston people are intending to go over for the races, and with the regular American colony at the German resorts on hand the three Yankee boats will receive a warm welcome. It is expected that the three smart sonders will be able to take the measure of the German boats, but even under the best of circumstances they will have to be handled with all the skill possible.

Yachtsmen familiar with the situation of the Beverly and Sippican [illegible] down at Buzzard's Bay, are inclined to think that a consolidation of the two clubs into one big organization is impossible, unless a sudden change of heart takes place among the members of the two clubs. Both clubs are lively organizations and there are members of one in favor of a consolidation. However, for a number of years a feeling of jealousy has been in evidence with some members of the two clubs and it is this feeling which is very marked, that will have to be overcome before the two clubs merge. The Beverly club will have to seek new fields for the races on account of the Cape Cod Canal at Wings Neck [illegible] begging for the change. This club has recently been given an island by George C. Thomas of Philadelphia and a consolidation would mean a [illegible] of the best racing of the season in which many of the most prominent business men and professional men of New York and Boston would be participants. Work along diplomatic lines is being undertaken by some of the most influential men in both clubs and every lover of good sport is hoping to see a merging of two good little clubs into a [illegible].

The Wollaston Yacht Club has elected the following officers: Commodore, Louis E. Crosscup; vice commodore, Frank F. Taylor; secretary, Frank N. Patterson; treasurer, F. E. W. Schultz; executive committee, J. Walter Coombs and Bert Seymour. The club has gained twenty-five members during the past year and is in good condition. From plans under consideration, the club will have a lively racing season and a number of feature days. The flagship the coming year will be the yacht Cornelia.

Members of the Lynn Yacht Club are making an active campaign, backing up the Board of Trade of that city and the business interests in hurrying up the work of the Lynn harbor improvements. When these are completed the Lynn Yacht Club will be able to hold races in much better shape than ever before and is to have one of the [illegible] along the coast.

The [illegible] Yacht Club [illegible] by Commodore Wilson [illegible] Bernard at a dinner and plans for the Summer were outlined. It is barely possible that this husky South Shore organization may send over to the Quincy Club a challenge for that cup the [illegible] captured last season from the Boston Yacht Club.

The Hollis Burgess Yacht Agency reports the sale of the twenty-one-foot Kanaka owned by W. J. Aylward of the Boston Yacht Club, to Augustus Poole of Beverly. The Kanaka will fly the flag of the John's [illegible].

Homer, No. [illegible] Broad street; Moore Reed & Borden, No. 220 Devonshire street; Toppan, the Medford builders, the Pratt Boat and Engine Company of Atlantic avenue, the Racine Company and the Camden Anchor Rockland Machine Company are already in the field with boats and engine equipment that range in price from $200 to $300. Those interested in yachting, but unable in years past to get anywhere near what they wanted at a price in keeping with their pocketbook, will this year find a good boat at a fair price.

F. K. Patch and Ralph E. Winslow [illegible] [illegible] Samoset. The boat, which was [illegible] used by Mr. Patch, has been completely overhauled and is a fine cruising boat.

The Buckeye Engine Company of Court street has presented to the New England [illegible] Boat Association [illegible] cup [illegible] at [illegible] in the [illegible] boat races [illegible].

[illegible] Webster of [illegible], was [illegible] has [illegible] Swasey, Raymond & Page [illegible] boat will be used at Mr. Webster's Summer [illegible] at Squam Lake, N. H.

The [illegible] motor is the latest type of engine for automobiles, motor boats and aeroplanes. It is of the V type, two cycle, embodying many novel changes from the regular marine motors. Arthur E. [illegible], naval architect and engineer, is the inventor. The new engine is to be shown at the aeroplane show for the first time.

Swasey, Raymond & Page are preparing designs for a [illegible] also [illegible] New York [illegible] The boat will have a [illegible] of the [illegible] will be an awning with [illegible] and to [illegible] can be handled [illegible] bridge. The boat [illegible] have a Sterling engine and is to be used on [illegible] Lake, Me.

Fred E. [illegible] Murphy [illegible] Company [illegible] [illegible] the states that indicate no point [illegible] in the Southern country. Several good sized orders were brought back by Mr. Cooley.

[illegible] Company of Amesbury have [illegible] delivered to George Critchfield of Vera Cruz, Mexico, one of their twenty-five-foot dories. This boat was designed for Southern waters, and with size and seaworthiness for a trip one hundred miles offshore. The boat will have a speed of eleven miles an hour.

POULTRY NOTES

A feature in the development of poultry keeping that is receiving more attention is the [illegible] fresh eggs for the family [illegible] reach of the many people, the problem is being seriously considered by professional men and, in fact, by almost every one who has a small plot of land that can be easily made into a henyard. In one way this is nothing new, but in the broad application of the idea it is new, and thousands of families are [illegible] to keep a small flock of laying [illegible] eggs for the family practically all the time. If the family goes away into the country or seashore for the Summer, the fowl may be sold at good prices, and in the early Fall a new flock of well grown pullets can be purchased.

A young woman living in the suburbs of Boston had her [illegible] in a very nervous [illegible] Her physician ordered her to a sanitarium and upon her return to work ordered her to eat fresh eggs every day. The difficulty experienced in getting eggs that were dependably fresh influenced this young woman to buy a portable house and fifteen pullets. [illegible] of the flock, and the result was not only all the eggs that the family needed, but a surplus was sold to the nearby drug store at ten cents a dozen above the market price and a complete restoration of the young woman's health.

A new development in the chicken field is in the buying of [illegible] each Fall and keeping them in a limited space without [illegible] chickens are raised and the flocks are not a nuisance to the neighbors. The demand for early laying pullets is being felt by the Boston poultry dealers and many of the fanciers in the country are beginning to raise flocks of 100 extra for the dealers. This gives a market to the fanciers for his extra fowl, the city dealer, a market to meet the demand for early laying pullets, and the back yard poultry keeper, a dozen or fifteen pullets to supply his family with fresh eggs.

It is astonishing how great is the [illegible] for profitable work with poultry in New England and the Middle States. A hundred million dollars is paid out each year by the people of New [illegible] for eggs and poultry [illegible] the [illegible] West and Southwest States. Massachusetts alone pays over $25,000,000 a year for eggs and dressed poultry from outside the State. What a great opportunity there is here for profitable work with poultry. All that is necessary is to produce eggs and poultry meat—the waiting public stands ready, with the cash in hand, to buy the product. There are thousands of acres of land available, the essential thing is men and women who will take hold and grow the eggs and poultry that are wanted. If any one [illegible] the eggs and poultry meat, eager buyers will do the rest.

KENNEL NOTES.

The Nowal Kennels, owned by Mrs. Arnold Lawson of Winchester, received last week an imported French bulldog that will make its first appearance in the show rings of this country at New York. The dog was purchased in England and is said to be the best French bulldog in Great Britain. The price paid for the new addition to the Lawson kennels was $1,000.

John C. Sullivan of Charlestown and Thomas Kelley of Allston, both of whom have brought out a number of good Boston terriers at recent shows, are going to New York with two new youngsters that are supposed to be just good enough to take the measure of the best in the show.

The Brentwold Kennels at the Sumner estate of Thomas W. Lawson at [illegible] has a litter of [illegible] bulldogs from which considerable is expected.

M. F. M[illegible], one of the best known fanciers of Boston terriers [illegible] at the show the New England [illegible] April. Such good dogs as Champion Yankee Doodle [illegible] Champion Yankee Doodle Rip, The Demon, Yankee Doodle Pride, Jewel, Jolly Widow, Tru[illegible] [illegible] Derby Boy [illegible] will face [illegible] in the ring and it is no mean task to pass judgment on these dogs, among the best in the land.

A good list of specials have been offered for all breeds at the Haverhill show February 22 and 23. The indications are that this show will be full of good dogs from various parts of the country. Coming on a holiday the Haverhill Kennel Club is due to entertain a good crowd.

The annual meeting of the American Fox Terrier Club will be held at Madison Square Garden, February 14, and the National Beagle Club of America will hold its annual session at Martin's, February 14.

J. C. Sullivan of Charlestown recently sold to J. S. Elkins of St. Louis his Boston terrier Bay Peach, and Mrs. P. P. Keniston parted with Champion Yankee Doodle Rip to the same buyer. Both received good prices. The new owner will show both dogs at New York and Boston and later take them through the western circuit.

Mark A. Knipe, president of the Boston Terrier Club and prominent business man of this city, has recently lost three of the most valuable Boston terriers ever bred. The dogs died at the Revilo Kennels at Ward Hill, Haverhill, owned by Mr. Knipe. Champion Oral, one of the dogs, was three times champion and was never beaten. Champion Revilo Tomah was another that had made his mark in the kennel world and Revilo Kermit had sired many of the best of the Bostons around Massachusetts. The sport as well as Mr. Knipe has suffered quite a loss by the death of these dogs.

A sportsmen's dinner will be given at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, on the evening of February 15 at which August Belmont will preside. Harry W. Smith of Worcester is one of the committee in charge of the affair and a number of prominent New England people are going over. The dinner includes the members of the Jockey Club, National Hunt Association, Hunts committee, Masters of the Fox Hounds' Association, National [illegible] Association, Gentlemen Riders of America and the Westminster Kennel Club.

WARNS PUBLIC OF DANGER IN MILK

Consumers' Association Declares Greater Care and Pasteurization Necessary.

As milk is one of the great food staples of the century and an article which materially affects p[illegible] the Massachusetts Milk Consumers' Association is conducting educational work so that all classes may know how to take care of the product they buy and also how to keep it clean and wholesome.

The association advises consumers to buy the best milk they can afford and to pasteurize it at home, if not sure of its quality. In addition [illegible] following [illegible]

[illegible]

Keep [illegible] to protect the milk from [illegible].

Infants in Danger.

The attention of the public is called to the fact that babies suffer [illegible] pure milk, that [illegible] is of even more importance [illegible] to infants. How to pasteurize [illegible] home is as follows:

This is [illegible] and [illegible] the bottom of the pail, thus allowing free circulation for the water and yet keeping the bottles from [illegible] pail. The bottles should stand in the pail which must be filled with water almost to the level of the height of the milk in the bottles [illegible] should of course [illegible] temperature [illegible] similar use in the cover of the pail was he found a great help."

Keep It Absolutely Clean

"[illegible] between 140 degrees Fahrenheit and 150 degrees Fahrenheit, and then the pail taken off the stove, the bottle in whose cover the hole was [illegible] with a fresh clean cap [illegible]

All [illegible] is important that the heating should be within the limits given, and the exact time must be governed by the temperature, 155 degrees need not be held quite as long as 140 degrees. Afterwards [illegible] the bottles [illegible] kept at as low a temperature as possible.

"A very simple home made ice chest can be prepared for $1.40 by taking a [illegible] box, some sawdust and two pails [illegible] [illegible] sawdust is spread on the bottom of the box, then the uncovered pail is put in it and the rest of the sawdust packed tightly round the pail to the level of the top. The lid of the box should have six or eight newspapers tacked on the under side with [illegible]

Ice Lasts Long Time

The covered pail must [illegible] to fit inside of the other, and to be easily taken out and scalded daily. Into it are put the bottles of milk, tightly corked, and as large a piece of ice as possible. The cover put on the pail and the lid of the box shut and kept shut except when it is necessary to get out some milk.

"In this way a small piece of ice will last a surprisingly long time and keep the milk as cool as is necessary, at a trifling cost. Tin or agateware pails are best, as they have no odor and are easily scalded [illegible] the lid must be removed when necessary. A bottle of milk may be kept standing in cold water [illegible] pan far from the stove [illegible] is often as it [illegible] possible to get cold water, a wet cloth wrapped round the bottle will keep the milk quite cool by the evaporation of moisture from it, but it must be kept constantly wet.

"In very hot weather it is practically impossible, however, without ice to safely [illegible] together, ice is distinctly cheaper than meal else.

"If a baby is being brought up by hand the need of care of the milk used for him cannot be exaggerated. [illegible] be put in separate bottles, tightly corked with clean absorbent cotton and kept very cold and apart from everything else and the home made [illegible] already spoken of, will be found both economical and convenient for this. The bottles should be thoroughly washed and boiled daily and the nipple as well."

SIMPLIFIES METER WORK.

E. E. Gray Petitions Legislature for Change in Method.

E. E. Gray has petitioned the Massachusetts Legislature for enactment of a bill relating to the measuring devices, commonly called meters, used in the sale of water, gas and electricity. His measure is House bill No. 908, and it has been referred to the Committee on Mercantile Affairs. It provides that sealing and testing of meters shall be done by the State commissioner of weights and measures and not by sealers of weights and measures in cities and towns. In a circular letter he has sent out Mr. Gray says: "The bill simply asks for sealing, supervision and inspection by the commissioner of weights and measures of all meters and measuring devices used by the gas and electric companies, and water boards and departments in the State, as a guarantee of accuracy and simplicity so they will be easily understood by all consumers."

CHURCH'S BIG PAYROLL.

Emmanuel Episcopal Has 105 Persons on Salary List.

Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Newbury street has the largest payroll of any church in this city. In its different organizations counting the five clergy, there are 105 salaried persons. This number comprises the workers in the Church of the Ascension in Washington street which is the mission of Emmanuel Church.

Among these are numbered stenographers, sextons, deaconesses, social workers, visitors, helpers in the Sunday Schools, teachers of the industrial schools, etc.

The receipts last year were $90,179, and the expenditures $96,122. Rev. Dr. Elwood Worcester, rector of the parish, in his annual report says: "The endowment fund of this church now amounts to $7,000, which is sadly inadequate and should be increased to yield an income of $5,000 a year, as the pew rentals no longer suffice to defray the expenses of the parish and appeal has to be made every year to meet a deficit."

Showing a Common Occurrence Which Is Very Funny Unless You Happen to Be the Goat

"Gentlemen Be Seated"—Bing! Bing!

Our Colored Entertainers Smith (Tambo) and Russell (Bones) Swap Some Funny Ones

BONES—Good evening, Mr. Tambo. Did you ever notice the advantage that some singers have over others when they come out on the stage to sing. If you will pay particular attention you will find that some singers have magnetism and others have got hypnotism. I've got rheumatism. I've had rheumatism so long and taken so many pills that all my joints are ball-bearing. If money grew on trees I couldn't climb up and get it. I got it trouping and traveling out West in the mountains. It is beautiful, Tambo, in the mountains. The air is intoxicating. I didn't draw a sober breath while I was there, and the further I went West the more convinced I became that Biblical history is correct when it says that all the wise men come from the East.

TAMBO—By the way, Bones, I met poor Billy Gaunt on the street yesterday, and positively he looked so hungry and footsore that I took pity on him and invited him into the nearest restaurant to have something to eat. The waiter came in with a platter containing fifteen codfish balls and placed the platter right in front of our friend. He started in right off the reel and devoured every one of them, and when he had got the last one down he called the waiter and said:

"Waiter, spot up those balls again, I just run pool!"

BONES—Hear about my father? Father has been a mighty sick man. The doctor came and diagnosed his case as the grip. He advised father to take hot whiskey. Father was horrified.

TAMBO—What was he horrified at?

BONES—"Why, doctor," said father, "what will my family say if I drink whiskey? I've never tasted a drop of liquor in all m life!"

"Well," said the doctor, "you'll have to take hot whiskey this once if you want to recover."

"Where will I get the whiskey?" asked father.

"I'll get it for you," said the doctor, and out he went and returned in a little while with a jug of it.

"How about the hot water?" asked father.

"Every time you want a drink send your shaving mug downstairs and have it filled," said the medico, "and your folks will think you're going to shave."

The next morning when the doctor called to see the governor, mother met him at the door. She was crying as though her heart would break.

"Why, my poor husband has gone crazy," replied mother, between sobs.

"What do you mean?" asked the doctor.

"Why, said mother, "he's been shaving himself every fifteen minutes the whole night long."

TAMBO—I heard a funny one on the train the other morning. There was a lady sitting three seats ahead of me and she was crying. I went over and asked her what the trouble was.

My husband is dead in the baggage coach ahead," she sobbed. "I am taking his remains to Springfield to have them cremated." I extended the lady my deepest sympathy and started back to my seat. And there, three seats behind me, was an old lady, and she was crying, too.

"Madam, what are YOU crying about?" I asked.

"What am I crying about?" says she. "Why here I am, an old lady past seventy years—been looking for a husband for over fifty years and THERE sits a woman who has HUSBANDS TO BURN!"

BONES—I went home the other morning late—I think it was about three o'clock. The house was all locked up and darker than a pocket. Made me sore. When I come up the street—no matter what the time I want to see my house open and bright. I felt sort of kittenish, so I picked up a few pebbles and tossed them up against my wife's window. No response. Then I took a big brick and heaved it right through the window. Desired effect I assure you! My darling wife poked her head out, and leaning calmly on the sill, said:

"Why, sweetheart, where have you been all night?"

"I've been out to the union, dis—(hic)—cussin' tae strike," says I.

"Then you trot right straight back to the union, honey, and discuss the lockout," says she.

That made me sore all over again. I tore back to town and went to a hotel. I says to the landlord:

"Landy, I want a room for four days and I don't want to be disturbed by you, the chambermaid, the bell boy, or any of my friends, relatives or acquaintances." Then I prepared for the occasion I had brought up a case of whiskey, a case of gin, a case of brandy and five thousand cigarettes. I got along fine and dandy until about the fourth day, I think. Some time during that afternoon the landlord came up and rapped on the door. I don't know whether he had heard a disturbance in there or not. He yelled:

"What's going on in there. Can I do anything for you?"

"Yeah," says I, "shend up a schnake charmer."

Well, she's quite a girl. She's a Summer Girl. Know what a Summer girl is? A Summer girl is composed of a rack on which is hung a silk skirt, a shirt-waist and a sailor hat, with a space inside for ice cream and soda. Mine is very extravagant. She went out and paid $18 the other day for a pair of red, white and blue silk stockings. Patriotic, but murder! She doesn't care now which way the wind blows. Did you ever take a Summer girl to a first-class restaurant? Well, before I was married I took my wife to a first class restaurant. A Summer girl never orders dishes by their names. Always by the price.

"Give me that $3 sirloin, that $1.50 lobster and that 75-cent pickle." She eat there and ate all the big prices off the bill. I could see her gradually get fatter and bigger and bigger and I got scared. I says to myself confidentially, "I wonder how I am going to get her out of here." She was too heavy to carry, so I asked her:

"Shall I order a coupe, dear?"

"Oh, no, honey, I just COULDN'T eat another mouth full!"

TAMBO—You ought to see my family. Funniest folks. All got kidney trouble but the cook, and she's got liver and bacon. Ought to see father. Talk about a rube! He took a little trip with me on the railroad. We had a sleeper. First time he was ever in one. He had a lower berth and I had the upper one. I heard him kicking around for an hour after he had crawled in and I yelled:

"In heaven's name, father, what's up with you?" He poked his head out and loud enough for the whole train to hear, said:

"Wal, gosh all hemlock, Harry, I've been tryin' tuh climb into this gurl-dinged hammock, so's I kin git some'n one leg in."

HOW YANKEE NERVE BEAT THE BULLETS

W. H. Crane Supplies The "Stage" Nerve

THE strongest scene of George Ade's latest comedy, "United States Minister Bedloe," now running at the Park Theatre, with William H. Crane, dean of American actors, in the title role, is given herewith. The dialogue is taken from the fourth act, conceded to be brimful of interesting situations—the climax that wins out for American diplomacy. This abstract is made direct from the book of the piece by special permission of Charles Frohman.

* * * * * * *

THE play opens with Colonel Jackson Bedloe, owner of a daily paper and a political power in one of the thirty Springfields, being appointed minister to Caribay—a republic "Somewhere in the South." Colonel Bedloe is persuaded and feted by admiring fellow-citizens. Edward M. Stanton Chester, his sporting editor, is named as secretary of the Caribay legation. Juan Lautaro, a native of Caribay and secret agent of those opposing the existing government of Caribay, appears on the scene and induces Bob Deane, a young college chap and beau of Kate, Bedloe's daughter, to go along and witness the fun incident to a revolution. The Bedloes are kept in the dark concerning this feature of what confronts them. The second act shows the Bedloes at San Quito, the capital of Caribay. The Colonel is bored to death; Mrs. Bedloe is disgusted with foreign customs, and Kate has ensnared one of the local aristocrats, Senor Cabrera, Minister of Foreign Affairs. Lautaro and Deane arrive, but Cabrera has learned the purport of their mission. He looks upon Bob as a rival and orders his seizure, but the soldiers make a mistake and arrest the Colonel instead. The latter cables his resignation to the State Department. He is determined to return to Springfield, partly because of the flippant treatment of Cabrera, whom the Colonel detests. Granby, agent of the State Department, is sent to relieve him, but the Colonel changes his mind when he finds that Bob is mixed up in the threatened revolution. He has Granby kidnaped by the insurgents. Cabrera, with apparent generosity that fools Kate, but not the Colonel, offers Bob his freedom if he will leave the country on the first steamer, the alternative being death. At this point Lautaro demands the surrender of the city. Cabrera laughs at him and prepares for the attack. Chester finds that the water in the river is only eight inches in depth, and after three days' fighting, during which time a shell has blown a hole in the wall of the legation, the Colonel plans to bring strategy to play in behalf of the rebels, rescue Bob, defeat Cabrera without breach of his own neutrality and then leave for home. Bob sends the Colonel a note informing him that he (Bob) is to be shot. The climax follows:

SCENE: The American legation at San Quito, the capital of Caribay, South America.

BEDLOE:
(As he prepares to read note) Kate, we'll make the best as sure as you're born

KATE:
Father, what does Robert say?

BEDLOE:
(Begins to read note. Starts in astonishment.) What's this!

KATE:
(Alarmed.) Father, read it!

BEDLOE:
(Reading note.) "Colonel—They tell me I am to be shot at eight o'clock. We did not realize that our little plan meant anything like this. The time is short. I've about given up hope. If I shouldn't see you again tell Kate" (Kate buries face into tears and falls into chair with her head on table.) And I sent him there. (Heavy firing is heard.) Listen to that! Only one chance. Why doesn't Lautaro come? (Signal is heard outside and Bedloe goes to the door.) Kate, go to your mother. Don't give up hope. I've got a scheme. If it goes through we'll save him yet. (Exit Kate, weeping. Lautaro appears at door.)

LAUTARO.
Ah! my good friend.

BEDLOE:
Stop it! Three days ago I told you to be here to see me.

LAUTARO:
I risk my life to come. If I am discovered—

BEDLOE:
You are the champion long distance fighter of the world

LAUTARO
We attack to-day.

BEDLOE:
It's too late! You've dilly-dallied and monkeyed and mananad until—(Stop Calls.) Eddie!

CHESTER:
Yes, sir; in a minute.

BEDLOE:
(To Lautaro.) I suppose you're planning a general attack from the south.

LAUTARO.
You know?

BEDLOE:
Everybody knows. They're all ready for you. Intrenchments—gatling guns barbed wire fences! You can't come in that way in a thousand years.

LAUTARO:
Then we are lost! (Heavy firing outside. Eddie enters.)

CHESTER:
Well, sir?

BEDLOE:
Eddie, what is your record for getting out an extra?

CHESTER:
Six minutes.

BEDLOE
Then you ought to be able to overthrow a government like this in twenty minutes. You carry a stop watch—split seconds?

CHESTER:
Yes, but what's that—

BEDLOE
Get your hat.

CHESTER:
(As he goes off.) Ravin't Simply ravin'!

BEDLOE
(To Lautaro.) Mr. Deane is in San Michael prison and you must get him out before 8 o'clock.

LAUTARO
My heart bleeds.

BEDLOE
Never mind your bleeding heart. Here! You are commander-in-chief of that that Creole opera troupe out there.

LAUTARO:
(Jumping up offended.) Senor! (Chester enters with his hat.)

BEDLOE
Eddie! Come here! You go with him. His blood thirsty warriors are now lined up ready to attack from the south.

CHESTER.
I get you

BEDLOE:
(To Lautaro.) You send word to have your big guns open up out there and rip the azure blue into a million splinters. They'll line up for a general attack from the south. Then you swing 'round the hill, through the cut and come into the city right in the bed of the river

LAUTARO:
The river!

CHESTER:
The riv—

BEDLOE:
High wall each side—not enough water to drown a chicken.

LAUTARO:
(Elated.) The river!

BEDLOE:
You can have a thousand men in that plaza before they find out what hit 'em.

CHESTER:
You needn't go to any sanitarium.

LAUTARO
We shall do it to-morrow!

BEDLOE:
To-morrow! Eddie, get out that water. Now understand—we're not mixing up in this surprise party—we're neutral, but I want you to hold the waters on him and if that army doesn't come tearing into the plaza in less than twenty minutes you needn't come back at all.

(Chester hurries Lautaro out the door just as Mrs. Bedloe enters to tell the Colonel that his coffee is waiting. Mrs. Thornby, wife of the British minister, enters to inquire after Kate. Sees hole made by shell in wall. Bedloe explains that it was put there by an explosion of dynamite—"workmen building a sewer." Kate enters and Colonel and Mrs. Bedloe exit.)

MRS. THORNBY:
Battle raging—shells flying over the city and your mother doesn't suspect?

KATE:
Father's lying is simply beautiful. (Enter Minister Thornby and Herr von Maxhausen, followed by Colonel Bedloe.)

BEDLOE:
Once more, gentlemen——

MRS. THORNBY:
Mr. Bedloe, I hope you understand that if that young man in San Miguel is sacrificed it will be a killing blow to your daughter.

BEDLOE:
Mrs. Thornby, next Winter, back in Springfield, when we sit down for a quiet session, I shall be sitting here

Bob's father will be sitting there—Major Dinwiddie of the school board will be sitting there, and Bob will be right over here on this side of the table—stacking up the chips.

MRS. THORNBY:
You don't understand! You don't understand!

BEDLOE:
Yes, I do. Kate's out there—go and cheer her up. Tell her to keep her fingers crossed for the next (looks at watch) twelve minutes. (Turns to Thornby and Maxhausen.) Well?

THORNBY:
Mr. Bedloe, the uprising has failed

BEDLOE
Has it?

MAXHAUSEN:
They have stopped shooting.

BEDLOE:
Well, don't be discouraged—they may start in again.

THORNBY:
Mr. Bedloe, I am the bearer of a very serious message.

BEDLOE·
Well, let's have it

THORNBY:
Your young friend, Mr. Deane, is to be executed at 8 o'clock.

MAXHAUSEN:
He will be shot and it will be your fault.

THORNBY:
Mr. Bedloe, you can save him.

BEDLOE:
Yes, I know I can, but I don't do business that way. Do you think Bob would want me to knuckle down to Senora Cabera and assure him that he is just my idea of a son-in-law?

THORNBY:
That matter was not discussed.

BEDLOE:
No, but it's mighty well understood. Gentlemen, I thank you. You're trying to help out a doddering old ignoramus, but I'm going to take the gambler's chance (pounds on table and a burst of heavy firing is heard outside) and stand pat.

MAXHAUSEN·
Himmel!

THORNBY:
Great Heavens!

BEDLOE:
All over, is it?

MAXHAUSEN:
The fools! It is a general attack from the south. (Mrs. Thornby, frightened, hurries across stage. Heavy firing continues.)

THORNBY:
Mr. Bedloe, I entreat you—I have no personal interest——

BEDLOE:
You're all right, but I'm not trading my daughter.

THORNBY.
Oh, I say!

MRS. THORNBY:
My dear, let's be going'

MAXHAUSEN:
They shoot and shoot, but it means nothing.

THORNBY:
Let us take refuge in the cellar. Come, my dear. Good day, Mr. Bedloe. (Exits)

BEDLOE:
So long to you, sir.

MAXHAUSEN:
Mr Bedloe, do you know what I think of you?

BEDLOE:
I don't, Mr. Maxhausen, but no matter what you think, you have no advantage of me

MAXHAUSEN·
Bah!

BEDLOE:
Bah to you!
(Enter Kate with coffee tray. Bedloe tells her to keep an eye on the plaza and if she sees the rebel flag flying within five minutes, Bob will be saved. Enter Mrs. Bedloe, knitting. She expresses surprise at the terrific noise. Bedloe informs her it is the fun-loving people celebrating the fiesta in the streets. To hold her attention he reads her some jokes out of a book, at the same time watching out for a signal from Kate. Suddenly an outburst of musketry is heard in another direction.)

MRS. BEDLOE:
(Surprised.) What are they doing now?

BEDLOE:
Firecrackers!

KATE:
(With a scream.) Father, I see them! They're in the plaza.

BEDLOE:
(Frantic with joy) Thank God! (Mrs. Bedloe starts up and the Colonel grabs her in his arms.) We'll all go home to Springfield. Hurrah!

MRS. BEDLOE:
Jackson! Have you gone stark, staring mad?
(Eddie rushes in in his shirt sleeves with his watch in his hand.)

CHESTER:
Eighteen minutes, seventeen and two-fifths seconds.

BEDLOE:
Fine! That beats bogie! (Shots are again heard close at hand and Cabrera rushes in, hatless and evidently frightened.)

CABRERA:
Senor, you must save me!

MRS. BEDLOE·
What's happened?

BEDLOE·
Oh, just a little business matter. (Kate draws her mother away into the next room.)

CABRERA:
I appeal to the protection of your noble flag.

BEDLOE:
Anything wrong?

CABRERA.
All is lost!

BEDLOE:
Lost? You don't mean to say——

CABRERA:
Our brave soldiers stood ready to meet an attack from the south. All at once the rebels——

BEDLOE.
Yes?

CABRERA:
Came rushing down the bed of the river.

BEDLOE·
The riv—in boats?

CABRERA:
Alas! We did not stop to think. In the last week there is no water in the river.

BEDLOE:
Great mistake! You always ought to keep water in your river. (Enter Lautaro and followers with drawn swords and demand Cabrera's surrender. Bedloe interposes. Bob, too, enters at head of soldiers and citizens)

BOB:
(Saluting.) I have the honor to report——

BEDLOE·
I know all about it.

BOB:
(Boyishly.) Say! It was great. (Seeing Cabrera.) Cabrera! (Goes over and addresses him.) Well, it's 8 o'clock! I believe that was the hour.

BEDLOE.
Wait a minute! Three days ago, this gentleman made you a mighty magnanimous offer. He said that if you took the first steamer you might quietly depart. As a friend of the new administration, I think it's up to you to say the same thing to him. (The rebels protest loudly and emphatically. Lautaro quiets them.)

LAUTARO:
Whatever you say, that we do. To you we owe everything

BEDLOE:
(Bob joins Kate.' Then Bedloe suggests to Cabrera that while he is mapping out his route, Mrs. Bedloe will be glad to show him the family portraits in the next room. Granby suddenly returns and when the Colonel attempts to apologize for the treatment accorded him, declares that he has been having the time of his life Thornby and Mrs Thornby and Maxhausen also appear in time to be introduced to the new American minister, and the Colonel, true to the traditions of the American politician, starts in to make a speech.

JOKES BY COMEDIANS

"WILL you have another piece of cake?" was asked of a little girl by the hostess at a party one day. This little girl had eaten a great deal that afternoon, and replied: "I can chew, but I can't swallow."

* * *

'TIS better to have lunched and lost, than never to have lunched at all.

* * *

"WHAT time is it?" asked his wife, suspiciously, as he came in.
"About one."
Just then the clock struck three.
"Gracious! When did that clock commence to stutter?"

* * *

"HELLO, is that you, doctor?"
"Yes."
"My mother-in-law is at death's door, and I want you to come up quick and help me pull her through."

"JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER has a dollar for every hair on your head."
"Yes, and I have a dollar for every hair on his head."

"HOW long do you expose a plate in taking a picture?"
"About three seconds."
"Suppose it was a living picture?"
"No limit."

"I SAW your wife on the street yesterday."
"Did you see her gold teeth?"
"No, she had her mouth closed."
"Then it wasn't my wife."

* * *

A FRIEND of mine had just returned from an extended Southern trip.
"How did they treat you in New Orleans?" I inquired.
"All the time," he replied, smacking his lips reminiscently, "I've cured my wife of giving me cigars for my birthday."
"How in the world did you do it?"
"Smoked 'em in the house."

* * *

SITTING opposite to me in a Boylston car the other day was a man who was very much under the influence of liquor. A woman next to me seemed quite indignant because the man had been admitted to membership among the passengers and, calling the conductor, she asked:
"Do you allow drunken people to ride on these cars?"
"Well, we're not supposed to, but if you'll just sit quiet, it will be all right."

* * *

MY friend Tom is one of the stingiest fellows I ever met. The other day he took me out for a walk, and I wanted some candy, but Tom wouldn't take the hint. When we came to a candy store I just stood outside the window, looked longingly at the candy for about five minutes and said:
"Say, Tom, that candy smells awfully good."
"Let's stay here and smell it awhile," he said.

* * *

SOMEONE called me a "bum" the other day. I looked the word up in the dictionary and found that it means a "tramp;" then I found that "wayfarer" means "traveler." Now, I understand what Roosevelt meant when he called Taft a good traveler.

* * *

"I UNDERSTAND that Police Commissioner O'Meara is going to put a few colored men on the police force.
"That's the most absurd thing I ever heard of."
"Why?"
"Because it's hard enough to find a white one these nights."

BETTY'S EDUCATION—No. 5

Her Language Master

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

WHAT a grand time old Cupid had with the master of languages. This little old gentleman, Cupid (for, although he is very babyish and young, he is very ancient), packs around with him a little book with nothing but "amo, amas, amat" through all its pages. Across the snowy lawns and down our fashionable thoroughfares he trudged behind the master of languages, and, among the pearl gray velvet beauties of the Society girl's sitting room, he curled up on a stray book called "The Lovers of the World." And, while the master of languages, expounded the mysteries of many tongues, he, Love, beat into the heart of the master the lesson of His one true text book.

HERE THEY COME! All the People in Boston Who Made Talk for Others Last Week

BISHOP WILLIAM LAWRENCE. ROBERT L. O'BRIEN. MRS. JOHN L. GARDNER. RICHARD L. MACLAURIN. HARRY P. NAWN. ELLERY H. CLARK ALEX. C. CHISHOLM. JAMES M. PRENDERGAST

LADIES and Gentlemen—Line up along the curb and take a peep at this parade of Boston notables as it passes. Along in the front rank is the Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts. Bishop Lawrence tells us that long before Hans Christian Andersen and Mr. Grimm got busy writing tales for children, the original fairy story author began spreading a yarn regarding Adam and Eve's experience with a rosy cheeked pippin in the Garden of Eden.

Then there is Robert Lincoln O'Brien, editor. Once upon a time he knew just what former President Cleveland was going to say in his message to Congress long before the public had any idea of what that message might contain. Yet he was kept from getting a "scoop" in the newspapers, because he was Mr. Cleveland's private secretary.

Mrs. John L. Gardner rules Boston society from a throne in her art museum out in the Fenway. She is the famous "Mrs. Jack," and all eyes are turned toward her box when she appears at the opera. She's just as interesting as her famous Raphaels, Rembrandts and Titians hanging on the walls of Fenway Court.

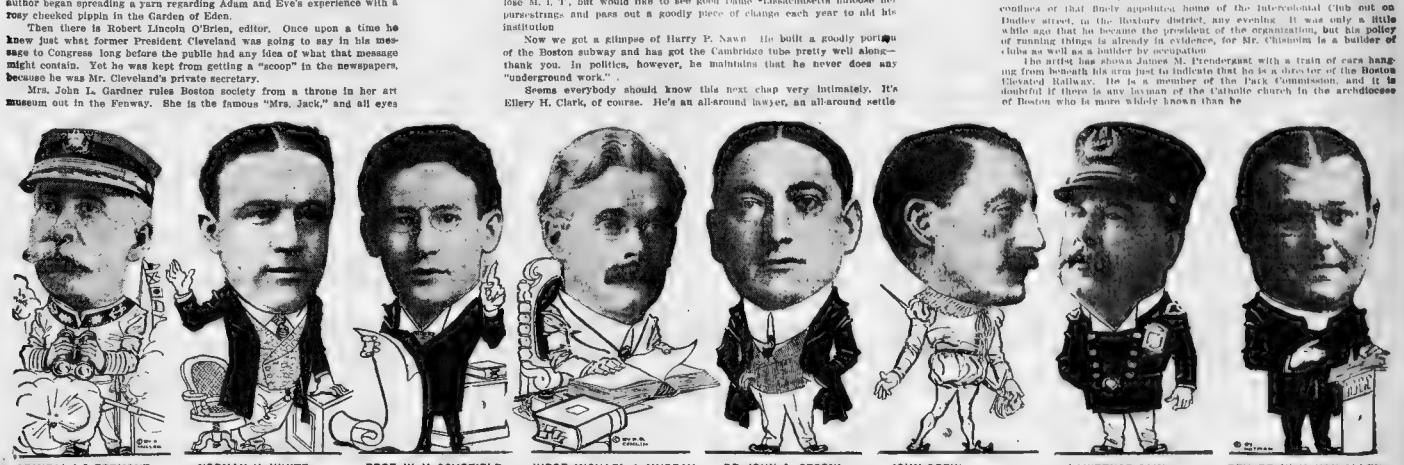
Here is Richard C. Maclaurin, the energetic president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He doesn't believe that Boston is going to lose M. I. T., but would like to see good Dame Massachusetts unloose her purse-strings and pass out a goodly piece of change each year to aid his institution.

Now we get a glimpse of Harry P. Nawn. He built a goodly portion of the Boston subway and has got the Cambridge tube pretty well along—thank you. In politics, however, he maintains that he never does any "underground work."

Seems everybody should know this next chap very intimately. It's Ellery H. Clark, of course. He's an all-around lawyer, an all-around settlement worker, an all-around musician and an all-around athlete. He has run for prizes in field games and in political games and won out in both time and time again. The medals you see upon his breast are trophies from Athens, and the book he carries is that famous story of his, "Loaded Dice."

This brings the parade along to a view of Alexander C. Chisholm. He's the first fellow you would probably run across if you entered the confines of that finely appointed home of the Intercolonial Club out on Dudley street, in the Roxbury district, any evening. It was only a little while ago that he became the president of the organization, but his policy of running things is already in evidence, for Mr. Chisholm is a builder of clubs as well as a builder by occupation.

The artist has shown James M. Prendergast with a train of cars hanging from beneath his arm just to indicate that he is a director of the Boston Elevated Railway. He is a member of the Park Commission, and it is doubtful if there is any layman of the Catholic church in the archdiocese of Boston who is more widely known than he.



ADMIRAL J. C. FREMONT. NORMAN H. WHITE. PROF. W. H. SCHOFIELD. JUDGE MICHAEL J. MURRAY. DR. JOHN A. CECONI. JOHN DREW. LAWRENCE CAIN. REV. DR. W. H. VAN ALLEN.

NOW comes one who has led Uncle Sam's brave boys of the sea in times of war and peace. Bluejackets will be sorry when five more months have slipped away and Rear-Admiral John C. Fremont, commandant of the Charlestown Navy Yard, is retired under the age limit. Heard the name before, haven't you? Of course—since he is a son of that wonderful man who was termed the "Pathfinder of the Rockies" and first candidate of the Republican party for President.

Why, look who's here! Bah Jove, if it isn't Norman H. White, the Representative from Brookline! In the news of late he has been put down as the leader of the "jubilant brigade" that went to Washington and dined Senator Lodge.

Professor William H. Schofield of Harvard had to come out and join this parade to-day, in spite of his well-known modesty. The faculty of the Sorbonne, at Paris, wanted an American professor to deliver a course of lectures to the students there, and feel that they have pulled off a fine stunt, now that he has accepted. He's going to talk to those students in the French tongue, too.

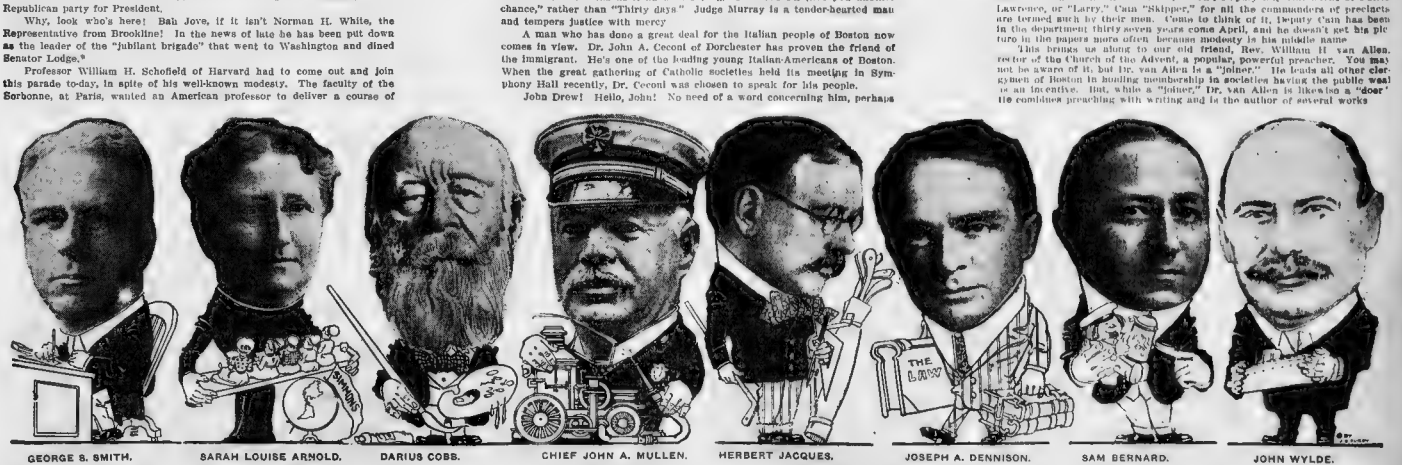
This float that comes next in line shows Judge Michael J. Murray, the youngest associate justice of the Boston municipal court, as he appears on the bench. He looks as if he were saying, "I believe I'll give you another chance," rather than "Thirty days." Judge Murray is a tender-hearted man and tempers justice with mercy.

A man who has done a great deal for the Italian people of Boston now comes in view. Dr. John A. Ceconi of Dorchester has proven the friend of the immigrant. He's one of the leading young Italian-Americans of Boston. When the great gathering of Catholic societies held its meeting in Symphony Hall recently, Dr. Ceconi was chosen to speak for his people.

John Drew! Hello, John! No need of a word concerning him, perhaps. John was always popular with Bostonians, but it is very doubtful if there are many hereabout who recall the time of his actorial début in 1873, when he played Plumper in "Cool as a Cucumber." He's looking mighty youthful this morning. Well, figure it out yourself from that.

Stop a minute, for here comes the "skipper" of Station 4 on Lagrange street. It's nothing out of the way to call Deputy Superintendent of Police Lawrence, or "Larry," Cain "Skipper," for all the commanders of precincts are termed such by their men. Come to think of it, Deputy Cain has been in the department thirty-seven years come April, and he doesn't get his picture in the papers more often because modesty is his middle name.

This brings us along to our old friend, Rev. William H. van Allen, rector of the Church of the Advent, a popular, powerful preacher. You may not be aware of it, but Dr. van Allen is a "joiner." He leads all other clergymen of Boston in leading membership in societies having the public weal as an incentive. But, while a "joiner," Dr. van Allen is likewise a "doer" He combines preaching with writing and is the author of several works.



GEORGE S. SMITH. SARAH LOUISE ARNOLD. DARIUS COBB. CHIEF JOHN A. MULLEN. HERBERT JACQUES. JOSEPH A. DENNISON. SAM BERNARD. JOHN WYLDE.

NOW let's just double-quick along here to the next corner that we may get a view of the new hustler at the head of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. If some one made the claim that the big organization was certain to gain 10,000 new members during the coming year folks would be prone to believe, since George S. Smith is the head of it. Mr. Smith can give all his time to the Chamber now, since he has retired from the wholesale clothing business he carried on with such marked success.

Another woman marches in the parade of notables to-day, since the work of Sarah Arnold, dean of Simmons College, has brought her into great prominence. The good things turned out in the culinary department of the institution are said to be akin to the tasty dishes that "mother used to make," or even better. Dean Arnold sees to it that her seven hundred and ninety-nine sweet girl students are taught home economics and ideals in home-making, so that perchance seven hundred and ninety-nine young men later on may be pleased with their choice of life partners.

Brush in hand, comes Darius Cobb, the artist who loves to paint historical scenes. Seventy-six years rest lightly on the head of this wonderful man, who has brought fame to Boston. He is just as ambitious to-day as though he were but twenty. His Tremont street studio is a rendezvous for old Boston schoolboys and veterans of the G. A. R.

If an alarm should come in now, Chief John A. Mullen would have to dash right out of this line of prominent folks without even stopping to excuse himself, and hike for the blaze. Chief Mullen is brave and cool and watchful for the well-being of his men, for he has been near death himself on several occasions.

Wheeling to the left as the artist caught him, golf sticks and all, is Herbert Jaques, one of the most notable figures in circles of the sport in this country. He knows the game from A to Z and has been the president of the national association. It was but a short time ago that he was inducted into office as president of the Massachusetts Golf Association. In one hand he bears a small implement just to tip all wise to the fact that he is an architect by profession.

Joseph A. Dennison is certainly hurrying. One glances at him passing by and recalls that he made a fine try for the district attorneyship four years ago. Ever hear "Joe" on the public platform? He can make the rafters ring with his eloquence. He has a fine suite of offices on the seventh floor of the Kimball Building and has reached the point through successes where he can really feel elated that he wasn't elected district attorney after all.

This must be Sam Bernard—the chap who lives to make people laugh. Yes, that's Sam all right, down here near the end of the line. He is a German comedian without a peer, and he's so funny that one feels like rubbing his sides with Linament after witnessing his performance.

Last, but not least in this notable procession, is John Wylde. He is one of the best known steamship and marine insurance men in Boston and is chairman of the relief committee of the British Charitable Society, which has just entered upon its sixty-ninth year of activity. By the way, the annual charity ball of the association comes off this week.

There, the parade has gone by. Didn't the marchers make a brave showing? Wasn't it fine?

Little Laughlets

MY father has invented a new kind of butter—fresh from the cow. He taught his cow a Salome dance.

"HOW do you feel to-night?"
"I just felt and didn't have a cent."

"IS he a good detective?"
"A good detective? Why, that man could find the Lost Chord if they'd give him half a show."

SAW a barber open to-day. Read:
"Barber shop closed. During vacations, customers will be shaved in the back."

"COOK, this fish tastes very peculiar. Did you wash it before you cooked it?"
"I didn't cook it needed washing; it's been in the water all its life."

UNCLE—Do you smoke cigarettes, Nephew? Sure. What else do you suppose I do with them?

FIRST Young Woman—Nellie, dear, may I introduce you to my fiance?
Second Young Woman—Delighted to meet you, sir. All your predecessors have been such bully fellows.

DID you ever see an undertaker drunk on his own bier?

MERKLE—I thought you liked the place.
Merkle—That's the beauty of it. It's nice and quiet.
Weinstein—Quiet? Say, Merkle, it's so quiet that when the snow flakes play around my window at night I think they're burglars trying to break in.

OUR OWN JOKES

WRITTEN FOR THIS PAGE BY THE JOLLY STAFF OF THE CITY LIFE SECTION

Magazine Poetry.

'MID sleet and snow the cold winds blow;
The fire is but an ember.
And this chill verse is not so worse,
(when you consider that the magazines are made up six months ahead),
And in order to be timely the nimble poet must grab old Father Time by his hoary forelock), Though written last September.

Missed.

YOU never miss the water till the well runs dry;
You never miss the whiskey till there's no more rye;
You never miss the kisses that you larish on your sisters
Yes never miss a Mrs. if she simply calls you Mr.

At Two A. M.

MISS GUSHIE—I like to see a man with some spirit in him, don't you? Mrs. Lushman—Not when he comes home from the club.

Comments by Cupid.

IT may be better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all, but it isn't so cheap.

A girl shouldn't want to marry a man unless she knows all about him. On the other hand, if she knew all about him she wouldn't want to marry him.

Perhaps if a man wasn't chicken-hearted he wouldn't be henpecked.

Beauty is only skin-deep, but many a woman is deeper than she looks.

Any man can learn to love if the girl makes the lessons easy enough.

The male flirt never asks a girl to marry him till he's sure she won't.

Marry for love, and you won't be so often reminded by your wife of what you married her for.

A Faux Pas.

"OUR lives are made up of the weak and the strong."
We heard the grim landlady mutter.
And then all the boarders laughed loudly and long.
As they thought of the coffee and butter.

Correct Name for It.

"WHY do you call this the anteroom?"
"Because it's the only place in the house where we can pull off a quiet little game of poker when the wife's at home."

Breakfast Digesters.

It has never yet been decided whether grating is vocal or instrumental music. Calling it "sheet music" doesn't settle the matter at all.

A man never realizes what perfect idiots women are until he hears his girl laughing at some other fellow's jokes.

It Took Time.

CHARLES—Was that you I heard trying to unlock the door at three o'clock this morning?
Clubleigh—Guess so. I got in about 'leven.

IT has been said that a woman with a diamond ring will scratch her nose in a given period four times as often as any other woman.

In the Sanctum Sanctorum.

"I HAVE written a poem on 'My Father's Barn,'" said the City Life Editor, wearily, "and should I pass your father's barn I shall surely stop and read it."

Ah There, Miss Pankhurst!

HE—You suffragettes put up a whole lot of arguments, but the people at large don't agree with you.
She—Then they shouldn't be so large.

A Point of Etiquette.

"YOU gave me a kiss," the maiden cried,
While with blushes her fair cheeks burned;
"And mother insists that gifts from men Must always be promptly returned."

IF YOU'RE INVITED OUT TO LUNCHEON—

8 RULES OF ETIQUETTE FOR YOUNG WOMEN OF MARRIAGEABLE AGE

RULE 1—If your employer asks you to lunch and you dislike to refuse, don't! Order all the high-priced stuff on the bill and make it cost him $14. That will cure most cases.

RULE 2—When lunching with a girl friend reach for her check, but give her time to reach yours first.

RULE 3—Lunch with an elderly "friend of the family" should be made as expensive as possible. If the expense makes him cease being a friend of the family, the loss won't be great, and that lunch will never cease to be a delectable memory.

RULE 4—If the man you'd like to marry asks you to lunch, take a cup of coffee and a club sandwich. Insist that you wish nothing more and that you hate the fussy and high-priced dishes. This is one of the most successful known methods of encouragement to serious intentions.

RULE 5—Should that sporty Mr. Blank—having won on a race or at roulette—suggest lunch to you, by all means accept. He's a pretty decent chap, after all, and if you don't let him spend the money on you, he'll spend it on some one else. Reprove him for his evil ways, but eat the lunch.

RULE 6—It is not etiquette for you to gaze at the handsome man at the next table. It is far more ladylike and just as easy to watch him in the mirror.

RULE 7—Don't try to call to Nettie clear across the restaurant. Go over and sit at her table. She may be willing to pay your check.

RULE 8—Whenever a man invites you to lunch parade him the whole length of the restaurant so that your friends may all be cognizant of his presence. The better he looks, the slower you should walk and the further you should take him.

Fashion Hints for Men.

A FEW bankers are wearing stripes this Winter, but the style can hardly be said to be popular, even in the financial world.

Suburban tailors report an increasing demand from married men for suits equipped with the new patent "safe-proof" pockets. Many young men are having these pockets put into their wedding clothes.

Although large checks are very pleasing to most men, they are rarely seen except on millionaires, city chamberlains and others who lead lives of ease.

A new idea that is all the rage just now is to wear socks that match one's hair. Bald-headed men who wish to follow this style may do so by wearing no socks at all.

Poetry in Pressed-Brick Form.

I HAVE seen all sorts of weather on the bog and on the heathery heath
the southern sky of Venice, in the reaches of the North. I have simmered in Calcutta, 'neath a sun so hot that butter lost its shape and ran in gutters o'er the spotless tablecloth. I have faced a simoom, swirling; I have braved the typhoon's twirling, and a cyclone never phased me, for I'm weatherproof and tough; but the weather that we're getting has me fussing, has me fretting, other days I am regretting, I know when I've had enough.

I have seen the broad Atlantic tempest-tossed in waves gigantic; I have seen the calm Pacific lashed in fury by the gale. I have faced an Arctic blizzard where, unless you was a wizard, you would freeze from A to izzard, and not live to tell the tale. I have heard the thunder crashing, I have seen the lightning flashing, on the lakes and on the rivers, and on dizzy mountain peaks; but take it all together, 'twas a decent lot of weather and it didn't hold a feather to the JUNK we've had for weeks.

BILL, THE BRICKLAYER.

An Essential Requirement.

CHICAGO MAN—When may I call on you, Miss Beacondub.
Boston Debutante—Why, come to-morrow night.
"But I haven't my dress suit with me."
"Dear, dear! That's too bad. And I did want to see you so much."

How It Happened.

SHE—So Dowse and his wife have separated. What was the trouble?
He—His wife's sedentary habits mainly.
She—She was continually sitting on him.

Money Talks.

IN Paris its speech is franc.
In London it is rather pence-ive.
In Berlin it makes some good re-marks.
In Boston it talks cents.

Don't Talk About Giving.

The Devil his due.
Till you're sure if 'twas given
He wouldn't have you.

A Doubtful Compliment.

"OH, Professor Foley," she exclaimed, with much enthusiasm, "I saw such a curious fossil in the Museum to-day! I thought of you at once."

His Breakfast.

FLUBDUB—I find that a little fruit in the morning is a great thing.
Gumjaw—That's right. I am old-fashioned enough to still insist upon a cherry in my cocktail.

Celebrating Alone.

"HELLO, Sam," exclaimed the hotel proprietor, meeting his colored head porter on the avenue, dressed in his Sunday clothes, "taking a day off?"
"Yes, sah. Celebratin' my golden wedding, sah."
"So you were married fifty years ago to-day, Sam?"
"Deed I'so was."
"Why isn't your wife helping you celebrate?"
"My present wif, sah, ain't got nothin' ter do with it," answered Sam, with dignity.

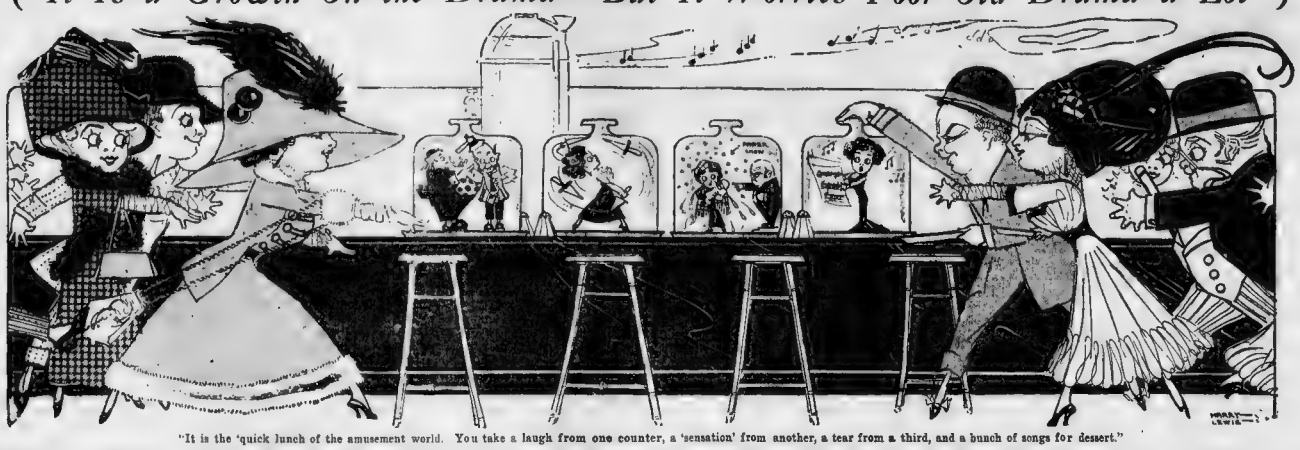
Why Vaudeville?—A Pertinent Question Asked and Answered by Alan Dale

("It Is a Growth On the Drama---But It Worries Poor Old Drama a Lot")



"It is the 'quick lunch of the amusement world. You take a laugh from one counter, a 'sensation' from another, a tear from a third, and a bunch of songs for dessert."

[Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.]

PEOPLE ask me, on an average of fifteen times per week, if I don't get awfully tired of going to the theatre. They look at me compassionately; occasionally their eyes dilate with sympathy, and—well, I hate to be commiserated. Usually I refuse to answer and "reserve decision." One gets tired of everything. Still, I don't get nearly as tired of going to the theatre as hod carriers do of carrying brick, as counter-jumpers do of dealing out ribbons, or as accountants do of adding up figures. My enthusiasm carries me through, and it has kept me going.

"Can't see how you do it," say the $15 per week. "So many bad plays are produced. Should think you'd go crazy. How do you keep calm and collected—especially through musical shows and rough-and-tumble farces?"

And so it goes on. They look upon me as though I were a sort of Spartan boy, suffering in silence. There is a growing class of people who seem to have lost patience with the theatre, who have no real love for the drama, per se; who clamor for quick results either in the shape of laughter or sensationalism, and who refuse to sit through long plays that give them the former in occasional splotches and the latter in a "big" third act. These people are, of course, imbued with the fever of city life. They are, moreover, the people who make the "quick lunches" popular, and who have a horror of a well-appointed restaurant, with dangling waiters and ornamental accessories.

The "legitimate" theatre-goer, however, cannot afford to overlook this class of people—very intelligent people, too. Nor need he feel as horribly "superior" as he is inclined to feel because he is able to sit through six acts of "Macbeth" without undue irritation. He is not obliged to look down upon the differently constituted folks who prefer even their classics in capsule form.

It is these folks, with the tabloid mind and the condensed appreciation, who patronize that form of entertainment which has assumed such gigantic proportions to-day. I refer to "vaudeville." Personally, I haven't the slightest use for vaudeville and would sooner be kicked round the block than go to a vaudeville show, but that doesn't affect my point of view in the least. If I were a "tired" business man, or a hard-working clerk, or one of those beings who are afraid of introspection, I think I should be very fond of vaudeville. If I don't like it, it is because I am "wedded" to the drama and have spent the best part of my life in that sort of wedlock. The vaudeville lovers are naturally quite differently situated.

The hard-working citizen, when he wants to be amused, scans the list of theaters in amaze. It is a tremendously long list. There are so many theatres that it is hard to keep a tab on them. Often he doesn't even know where they are. Out of ten Boston people I don't suppose that one could name the whereabouts of each theatre at a moment's notice. Illuminated signs indicate the theatre-routes. It is a difficult problem. To fill this varied collection of theatres, plays of every ilk are used. Freak fantasy, sexual problems, musical comedy, a dozen different brands of melodrama, diatribes on prevailing cults, explanations of popular "isms"—all sorts of experiments are tried. Tom, Dick and Harry are perplexed. They read "reports" which are always misleading, and criticisms which are leading. It is the latter, of course, which illumine the way—and very often the way to vaudeville. In the case of good plays—which are rare—criticisms send Tom, Dick and Harry to the theatre.

The theatre is always a chance, how ever. The vaudeville show, to Tom, Dick and Harry, is a sure thing. It is tolerably certain that they will find something there that they like. It is not at all certain that they will do this at a regular theatre, even in the case of a success. I advise everybody to go and see "Chantecler," for instance, because it is a curio. But I have no illusions. Tom, Dick and Harry won't go, and in my heart of hearts I can't blame them. They will see a barnyard act in vaudeville that lasts for twenty minutes, or less, and they will be satisfied with that. It may not be a classic taste, but then everybody isn't born with a classic taste. If everybody had a classic taste, perhaps this would be a very stupid world, and we should all be as dull as ditch-water.

The vaudeville show gives the public a popular flavor, without a whole meal to float it. Even to get laughs in the average play you have to sit through long periods of dullness. You wade through explanations, introductions and tedious finales. In the vaudeville show the fun-makers come on, armed for the fray, get busy with a gusto, hand you your laughter without any beating about the bush, and—get off again. Then something else happens. Perhaps it is music. In the average musical comedy you have to wait till the orchestra has played the overture, till the merry-merries have trooped, singing "Tra-la-la, we are village maidens"; till the librettist has let himself loose according to the "station," and till the funny man has announced that he intends to be funny. Then you may get music.

In vaudeville you get it quickly if you want it. Without any setting at all, the prima donna comes down to the footlights and sings you three songs—without waiting for encores. She sings the songs she wants to sing, and knows she can sing, which is something. When she has finished she steps off and goes home like a nice little girl. No need to worry any further about her. She will not inflict herself upon you again. That is the real lovely thing about vaudeville—the thing that even I adore. No matter how bad—or how good—a performer may be, there is no more of him when he has done his stunt. Will there couldn't drag him on again. There is no anti-climax. He has done all he could do—or couldn't do—and it is finished.

The vaudeville lover appreciates this incessant change—this plunge from one mood to another. At the legitimate theatre this is impossible. A gray play is gray all the way through. A red play is red all the way through. One mood is played upon until it is exhausted. It may be the very mood that one is anxious to escape. What fun can there be for a State street man to wallow in such a play as "The Gamblers," or a politician to sit through a melodrama like "The Boss"? How can a chap with any wit in his soul devote an entire evening to musical comedy, or a fellow who wants to laugh endure all the preparations for laughter that are made in many farces?

I go to a farce because I've got to laugh—just as the Tennysonian lady had to weep—and I'm thankful if I get one. When there are several laughs I bubble with gratitude. I did that in the case of "Over Night." Nobody had told me that it was funny, and I discovered that it certainly was. Tom, Dick and Harry, who have one night to themselves, can't afford to take chances. They go to vaudeville because they are perfectly certain that there will be at least one funny act—which is about all they would find in any whole-evening farce.

The humor in the vaudeville show is usually not very subtle. It couldn't conceivably be that. It has to "deliver the goods"—presto, prestissimo. That is the way Tom, Dick and Harry want them delivered. They don't want to sit and stand while a playwright gets everything ready and arranges for the one laugh. They want it hot from the grill, while they wait.

"It is a tremendously long list he scans."

The popularity of vaudeville is at least intelligible, even to the densest mind. It is the "quick lunch" of the amusement world. You just go in and help yourself. You take a laugh from one counter, a "sensation" from another, a tear, perhaps, from a third, and a bunch of songs, for dessert, from a fourth. You know what you are getting. It is all spread out before you. It is never a case of "What is coming, who shall say?" There is no pig-in-a-poke method about vaudeville. It is labelled with obvious labels. At the theatre the labels are indistinct. Some of my heartiest laughs have been induced by melodrama; some of my dreariest and dingiest moments have been the result of farce.

Occasional moods have lured me to the vaudeville show—moods in which I felt that if I didn't get quick change I should go "nutty," and, of course, such moods affect "business" people much more frequently. They like the slam-bang of quickly changed acts, the reaction from one style to another and the impossibility of discovering monotony. These people are not analytic; they are not poetic; they are not idealists. Poor ones! They haven't time to be anything of all that. Life is not particularly beautiful to them. They are not hankering for precious thoughts. They clamor for self-oblivion. They want to escape from everything that gives them a chance to think. It is the fashion to believe that people who don't want to think are fools. The world is full of such fools. Nobody wants to think all the time. To think may be classic, but—it is often infernally uncomfortable.

The musical show is modelled on the vaudeville scheme. It gets nearer to vaudeville every day. Vaudeville artists are engaged in musical shows, and they usually furnish the most agreeable part of the entertainment. Yet even the musical show is not a patch on vaudeville, in the minds of Tom, Dick and Harry. It is a perpetual attempt to be funny. It usually tells a story that insults the intelligence—even of Tom, Dick and Harry. It has nothing to offer but the one style. It gives no variety. It is all pitched in one key, which becomes monotonous. The legitimate theatre-goer likes it because it is a change from drama. Tom, Dick and Harry prefer vaudeville because it gives them the gist of musical comedy, and it is only the gist that they want.

It is the very embarrassment of riches in the theatre of to-day that has made vaudeville so popular. What to see? The question is puzzling. To many people, particularly to those of limited means, it is a very important question. Vaudeville settles it. There is very little risk. There will probably be a few acts that jar, but they pass quickly and they are not insisted upon, and they do not return.

It is the finality of the vaudeville that would drive me to vaudeville—if anything could. The knowledge that no actor returns is ineffably gorgeous. You don't mind hating an actor for a quarter of an hour when you know that at the end of that time you'll see the last of him. But at the legitimate theatre you get an artist whom you despise throughout the entire evening, and that is the most exasperating experience. He does make an occasional exit—grudgingly—but he returns to his work of torture more fiendish than ever. Particularly is this the case in musical comedy with a "star." This "star" has everything; he monopolizes the stage; everything is whittled down so that he can loom. He is ever-present. If you dislike him, as it is quite on the cards that you will do, there is nothing else. He takes good care of that.

Later on, perhaps, this star goes into vaudeville. What a difference! His work of torture is prohibited. He is not allowed to make human beings miserable. He is told to do what he can do in fifteen minutes, and it is quite astonishing to find that the man you despised so acutely when he was spread over a three-hour entertainment isn't at all bad in homeopathic doses. He gets down to business. He has to make his effects without tedious preliminary. He is allowed no latitude. Nothing stands still for him. He says his little say, and off he goes. There is no suffering.

If we were all people of leisure the vaudeville show would have little chance of success. We are not. We are a hard-working, busy crowd, waiting to be served quickly. Great mistakes have been made in the legitimate theatres this season—vast and expensive mistakes, due to the idea that we had the leisure to assimilate the ideas of London and Paris. Some of the biggest successes in Paris have failed in America—just because they belonged to Paris and not to America. This community is now self-centred. It wants its own, because it hasn't the time or inclination to worry about others. The foreign plays have done more for vaudeville than anything else. It is up to the legitimate theatres to realize this, and to realize it quickly. Theatrical managers have played into the hands of vaudeville for a long time. But this season has already taught them many lessons. Vaudeville has probably come as far as it can go. That is certainly a long distance.

It is a growth, of course—a pimple on the drama. But it worries poor old drama a lot.

AGRICULTURAL experts have been testing the effect of "brain foods" on pigs. They report that pigs so fed become not only intelligent—nay, almost brilliant—but also yield better pork.

We can readily credit this statement. We know a great many hogs to whom the addition of a little brain food would result in a vast improvement from every standpoint.

But where will these theorists stop? If it requires brain food to produce a good intelligent ham sandwich, will it require a course in Euclid to produce a satisfactory dish of tripe?

Although we know it required a lot of learning to make Bacon, nevertheless to waste a college education on a pig head would be the height of pig irony.

DID you hear about the jury that examined the last bank looter?

They were asked if they considered him insane, and they proved their horse sense when they answered "Neigh!"

What a scream they are, these alienists!

As soon as they start to tell us, under oath, of the tests and symptoms of some rich criminal, they make Twain, Ade and Cohan look as funny as a trio of "bic jacets."

They make everybody laugh. The judge, the jury, the public, the attorneys, the defendant—in fact, the alienists themselves have to laugh. Well, considering the easy money they are getting, no wonder they can't help laughing.

When a "patient" is arrested and an alienist sent for, the first thing the expert says to the patient is:

"What kind of insanity do you prefer—emotional rheumatic, anaemic, epileptic, analytic or idiopathic? We have a large supply of every kind of insanity on hand. So you can order table d'hote or a la carte. We have some very classy Dementias and Delliriums left over from the last session of the Grand Jury, although our latest models in paranoias and monomanias are quite popular this season. Some of our best people are using them."

When the patient has picked out his insanity the alienist begins his examination. The first thing that he examines is the patient's pocketbook. If that part of the examination is encouraging he takes out his note book and enters these facts:

"The patient in very early childhood showed abnormal development of 'nerve' force. As a child he trimmed all his schoolmates by working a 'shell' game at recess, which proves that at that time he must have been 'nutty.' When asked if he ever felt a strange depression, the patient replied that he did feel this depression the moment he was arrested; this is a very significant symptom. Loss of memory—hopeless—patient cannot remember a single fact that the Prosecuting Attorney desires to bring out—this indicates a deplorable condition of the madulla oblongata, right next to the gastric nerve of the parabolic carbona.

"Nervous states—constant itching of the palms, coupled with a frenzied hallucination when he sees depositors' money that he must run away with it; pulse—beating regular—proving that he is a regular beat; a passion for buying automobiles and riding in them, proving that he has wheels; considerable signs of paralysis—he is very fond of champagne and other wines, so we may be prepared to discover that at various times he has been quite paralyzed. An X-ray examination of the patient's brain further reveals the presence of countless green-back-teria." In closing the examination the patient is asked if he knows where he is, to which he replies: "Oh, yes, I am in jail," which proves beyond a doubt that he must be crazy to get out. Q. E. D.

RUSSIA contemplates a new fleet of battleships to cost a hundred million dollars.

One would think that Russia's recent experience would teach her the folly of building expensive war vessels. From the way in which they conduct a naval battle, the very cheapest kind of scows would serve the purpose, and they would be wiser to invest this money in teaching their sailors how to swim, unless, of course, they would look upon this investment of a hundred million as a "sinking" fund.

THE entire world is accusing America of extravagance. This is not borne out by facts. On the contrary, we seem to be suffering from an epidemic of economy.

Look at the new president of the Steel Trust. His predecessor received a salary of a hundred thousand dollars a year. The new president will receive the paltry sum of fifty thousand dollars a year. The former president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society received eighty thousand dollars a year. The new president will have to struggle along on fifty thousand. Presidents of trust companies and banks are being ground down to salaries ranging from an infinitesimal thirty-five thousand to an insignificant fifty thousand a year. How these poor fellows are going to make both ends meet on these starvation wages is a serious problem. Something ought to be done about it. Think of the bank president coming home on pay night opening his salary envelope and handing over his measly monthly salary of four thousand dollars to his poor, hard-working wife. The next thing they will do will be to form a union to prevent their wages from being cut to three thousand.

Imagine what self-denial is needed for that poor family to keep the wolf from the door on such a pittance. It is almost impossible on such wages for bank presidents to keep body and soul together. However, most of them don't. They are satisfied with keeping their bodies together and letting their souls take care of themselves.

There is but one comforting fact for these poor fellows and that is that though their salaries are getting smaller, their rake-off is getting bigger all the time.

OUR public men are still refusing to dine with one another on the grounds of dishonesty. There is hardly a prominent politician who hasn't refused to eat with some other politician because he considered the other a crook.

They are all doing it—except Taft. He doesn't care who he dines with. You never heard of him refusing. The only way you can keep him away from a good meal is to fail to send him an invitation.

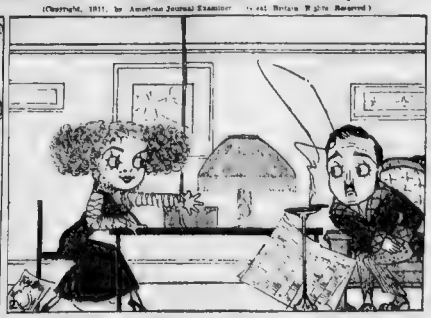
MRS. TRIXIE TRIX—Oh, John, there's the very gown I want. Let's get it!!

MR. TRIX—What! Pay that for one dress? I guess not! Why don't you make your own clothes? Mrs. Brown does and she looks swell.



MRS. T.—Six dollars, please. I want to subscribe to some fashion magazines. I'm dressmaking, you know. (Aside) Watch me get that $150 gown.

MR. T.—All right, but go as light as you can this month.

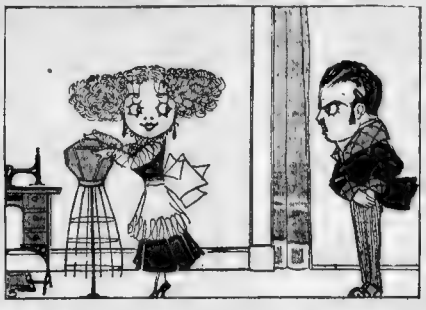
BOY—C. O. D. $40.00.

MRS. T.—Isn't it beautiful? Only $5 a yard, too.

MR. T.—A trifle loud and a bit expensive!!!

MRS. T.—You'd better leave me $36.00 for my adjustable dress form. It will come in this afternoon. And—oh, yes, $20 for trimmings.

MR. T.—Great Scott! What next?



MRS. T.—See how handy it is? Now let me have $8, dearie, for a woman to help me with the plain sewing, you know.

MR. T.—That dress is costing more than I pay for a dozen suits! It ought to be a beauty!

MRS. T.—This is the very latest, the "Harem Skirt." Doesn't it look sweet?

MR. T.—Sweet!! Is THAT the thing I have been paying good money for? Here, got that gown we were looking at and send that freak to a museum. (Aside) Women are certainly stupid! We even have to decide what clothes they are to wear!!

SOME SAMPLES OF IRENE FRANKLIN'S HUMOR

AT the age of four months I decided to become an actress (and I still hope). I was boarding with my parents in St. Louis at the time, and, thinking Chicago a better place to procure an engagement, I spoke to father thus:

"Daddy, the stage calls me. I must act. Let us go to Chicago, where there are agents waiting for me with loads of good parts. Onward to Chicago."

Of course, that is not exactly what I said, but—we moved to Chicago. In two months I had my chance. I was "me ch'ld" in "Hearts of Oak." I did not appear until the last act, when the heroine came in out of the snow (all heroines must be tramps, it seems to me, because they never come home in the Summertime), to be forgiven, and she brought me with her. The "entrance" worried me. I was not strong. In fact, I was wrapped up in a shawl and produced at the finale to kiss Grandpa or Uncle Ike, or someone. I had decided to be a tragedienne, and was going to play the part with "an infant of the world" air, combined with a touch of sadness. But when my stage-mother took the hateful shawl from about my head and shoulders something must have tickled my nose, for I sat up and smiled, and the audience, seeing a wild six-months-old baby with a mop of red hair and a cascade of fat chins rolling down her chest—a very blitken of a child—simply howled, and I became a comedienne.

AT the age of seven years my ambition in life was to play Lady Macbeth and do a toe dance. We were playing one-night stands in Texas at the time. We traveled every night. One night we all trooped down to the dreary, smelly waiting room to catch an "eleven-thirty" train that came in at four the next morning.

Entered to us a Bad Man, the first and only cowboy I have ever seen outside a theatre. He looked us all over and came over to me.

"Can I borrie the kid?" Mother was frightened to death, but said, "Yes."

"Come along, kid?" said he, and into the "lunchroom" we went. My friend looked around and seemed embarrassed. Finally he put me up on one of those high round stools and said:

"What'll you have?" I knew the answer to that one, after thirty weeks of "one-nighters."

"Ham sandwich," said I.

"What else?" quoth he.

"Hard boiled eggs," responded I. We had them wrapped up, and then went over to the cigar stand. Here he spied one of those long, lithographed boxes of chewing gum.

"Gimme the gum," he ejaculated. The man behind the counter said:

"What, all of it? Why, that's all I got."

"All of it!" he bellowed. He got it. Hanging on a hook was a stem of bananas.

"And the bananas, he added. These were wrapped up in a newspaper and we started back to the waiting room. He placed me on the seat beside mother, gave me a five dollar assortment of bananas, boiled eggs and gum, saying:

"There, and don't you never let me hear you say that Texas don't appreciate talent."

A Guide for City Dwellers--By Wex Jones

DUMBWAITERS—These are so called because they are not dumb and they are not waiters, except in the sense that they wait when you are in a hurry. Besides making a racket themselves, they are the cause of eloquence in others. The most striking peculiarity of a dumbwaiter is its ability to outguess any ordinary human being. For instance, when the thing appears jammed, and you poke your head into the shaft to see why it doesn't come up, it suddenly descends and raps you sharply upon the back of the head. So when you twist your head to gaze upward in search of the dumbwaiter the cunning contraption comes up with great suddenness and bumps you under the chin. Unlike vocal waiters, the dumbwaiter is impervious to tips.

DINNERS—It is extremely bad form for the C. D. to manifest his emotion in any way, except by a dinner. If the old boys of a school want to express their admiration for the principal the only way they can do so is by giving a dinner. The bachelor says good-by to his old pals at a dinner. If five people discover they lived in Ohio before they became C. D's, they give an Ohio dinner, not to boost Ohio, but to congratulate themselves that they are now living in the only place worthy of a dot on any map. If you are a Republican, you attend Republican dinners, or by eating your way through a long bill-of-fare you proclaim your Democratic principles. Prohibitionists don't seem to go in so much for party dinners. Perhaps there's a reason. Railroad men eat railroad dinners, and Harvard men proclaim their belief in Harvard by getting up simultaneous attacks on food. In short, there is no emotion whatever that the C. D. does not express by going out with some others and tackling more grub than he needs. And always after the dinner come speeches. The arrangement seems bad, for if the speeches came first hunger would make the speakers brief, unless they were mean enough to dine before they came, in which case they would crowd. It is proper for the C. D to look tremendously bored at a dinner, but the beginner need not practice this. It will come naturally.

CATS—To the city dweller the cat is usually known as a sort of nocturnal gramaphone, possessing explosive records that would do credit to a combination of heavy rifle fire and a torture chamber in the Inquisition. However, in the outskirts of the city—that is to say, in any place where people live in single or two-family houses, as distinguished from the proper city method of living in an apartment house at least seven stories high—in these outskirts the cat is still regarded as a protection against mice, and even in some cases as a pet. In this quality the cat is an awful joke to the C. D. He cannot imagine how the animal will sit in front of a mouse hole for hours on the off chance of a mouse being fool enough to run into its clutches. The C D thinks it lacks hustle, and that the cat should get busy and decoy mice by wholesale. However, it takes a lot to change a cat. Tabby used to take the softest cushions in the palaces of the Pharaohs, just as she takes the coolest corner of the lounge in a Commonwealth avenue brownstone to-day. She has seen many White Ways flare and fade, and unperturbed, will see many more.

CANARIES—These birds are very popular with city dwellers, and large numbers of them are sold every year. The usual procedure is to buy a nice brass cage, or, indeed, a mission cage, which is very cute and matches the morris chair so charmingly. In this is deposited the canary, together with some birdseed and a little cup of water. Three or four days later some one says, "I guess that bird's a fraud; he doesn't sing."

Investigation discloses canary lifeless on bottom of cage. "Wonder why he died?" They must have sold us a sick one." Various theories to account for sudden demise. Sherlock Holmes of family circle says, "Why, he's got no seed or water. Too bad. We must be more careful with the next one."

IMPORTED—This is a word that means everything to the C. D. His clothes, his drinks, almost everything must bear the label. If a dealer cannot sell a suit, he marks it "Latest importation" (which it is—from Devonshire street), and the C. D sees new merit in it at once. American furs are labelled "Russian sable," or "Persian wolf," or "Abyssinian antelope." On bills of fare the C. D. is confronted with "imported English Mutton Chops." Everything is called "imported," except the weather, and that often seems to bear the London stamp. Consequently the novice must be very careful never to indicate that he wears, eats, drinks or has anything whatever to do with any article known as "domestic."

HARVARD BRIDGE—You must always refer to this in a patronizingly jocular way. There are a number of standard wheezes, but the one referring to Boston as "the American slide" of the bridge is the safest. With this a man just in from Chicago may defy detection.

WEATHER—To pass as a true City Dweller you must never refer to the weather as affecting you directly. Suppose the snow is falling gently from a leaden sky. Remark, "Geo! this blizzard must be tough on those country guys." If it rains, say "Get you those farmers are kicking about this." Do not forget as indicated above, that three flakes of snow to the block constitutes a blizzard. In the event of snow, it is also permissible to refer to the Department of Street Cleaning, but of course only to roast it. Never fail to take a crack at the D. S. C.; nothing stamps you more distinctly as a Bostonian.

FATHER PROSPER VIAUD, Guardian of the Convent of the Annunciation, at Nazareth, has discovered what he believes to be the kitchen of the Virgin Mary, the identical place where she prepared the meals for the infant Jesus and for Joseph, the hard-working carpenter.

Father Viaud's excavations beneath the old Church of the Annunciation have already revealed the grotto of the Angel Gabriel and the place of the Annunciation, with its ancient altar, but neither of these discoveries perhaps appeal with such force as this more homely last one. Here is Father Viaud's own explanation of his discovery:

By R. P. Prosper Viaud, C. R. M.

Apostolic Missionary, Ex-Custodial Vicar, Guardian of the Convent of the Annunciation.

IN digging under the foundations of the Church of the Annunciation we found a stairway on the northern side, and turning to the left was a door leading into a grotto, dug out of the living rock. This place has been revered for centuries as "The Virgin's Kitchen." This is place has been revered for centuries as "The Virgin's Kitchen."

This is a local tradition purely, and no one can justly claim that it is absolute, but this chamber is just outside of the walls of the ancient Basilica, and did not communicate directly with the grotto beneath the church. It is to be remarked that it was entered from the western side, and the doorway seems to be much older than the Crusader-church there, going back to the earliest period.

Therefore the grotto itself is of that ancient time, and it is a notable fact that this ancient doorway has been preserved, pointing to the great reverence attached to this grotto.

This grotto being so very ancient—very probably contemporaneous with the Holy Family—acquires from this fact alone a right to our respect and veneration. It really formed a part of the home of the Holy Virgin, and was probably used by her. For this reason alone it must have long been visited by pilgrims, and the tradition of this being the Kitchen of the Virgin is very dear to the inhabitants of Nazareth.

If this was the Virgin's Kitchen, as traditions hold and as the ancient character of the remains would indicate, it is invaluable as a reminder of the humble duties which Mary had to perform in the household. Here, with the simple oven, as still used by the inhabitants of Nazareth, she prepared the bread for Joseph and the youthful Jesus, and here she ground up the cereals in a wooden mortar or turned the millstone for grinding wheat. Here, or in the neighboring chamber, she turned the spinning wheel, that Joseph and Jesus might be clothed.

Until 1908 it was not suspected that anything lay beneath the modern Church of the Annunciation. The marble tablets on the walls and floors suggested nothing of what lay below. Chance—or I prefer to think St. Joseph, head of the family that once lived here—put me on the track of the great discovery.

One day, while conducting a pilgrim through the building, who happened also to be a distinguished archaeologist, we noticed at the entrance of the inside stairway several stones, which looked like the lintel of a doorway. After he had departed I began to study these stones more carefully, and it seemed to me that the wall did not go straight, but described a slight curve. Digging into the wall, I found that there must be another wall behind it, and called some workmen. After a few days they brought

Why a Beauty's Face Turned into a Death's Head

One of the most peculiar physical afflictions ever recorded is described by Professor Hollaender in the Weekly Medical Review, of Munich, the leading medical publication of South Germany.

Lydia Bartenbach, a handsome young actress, suddenly lost all the flesh from her head and bust as a result of nervous shock, while her lower extremities retained their gracefully rounded form.

Eighteen months ago Miss Bartenbach, who was a beloved only child, saw her father brought home terribly injured and in a dying condition, while two hours before she had seen him in the best of health and spirits. At midnight of the day he was carried home he died.

His daughter was with him every minute until he died. Her grief was heartrending. She lay awake the whole night.

At daybreak it was seen that a remarkable change had taken place in Miss Bartenbach's appearance. Her face in the region of the eyes and temples had become emaciated to a startling degree. The flesh beneath the eyes had sunken away almost to nothing, causing the eyes to appear most unnaturally large and prominent. She had literally a "death's head."

In the course of a week the disappearance of flesh about the eyes and temples became more marked. Then the right cheek was attacked and after that the left.

The process kept gradually extending. At the end of the year there was nothing but skin left on the face and that was yellow, dead and parchmentlike. The adipose tissue on which even the thinnest flesh depends for a human natural appearance had entirely disappeared.

Gradually the neck and bust were invaded by the disease.

She did not experience much direct pain from the malady, but the hideousness of her appearance made her miserable and melancholy. When rouge and powder were no longer able to disguise her affliction and she could not appear in society, she became very melancholy.

This condition threatened her with grave mental disease, and it was to remedy this that Professor Hollaender decided to perform a new and interesting operation, hitherto unheard of in America. He filled out the wasted parts of the body with mixed human and animal fat. This is a substitute for the paraffin injection treatment which has caused numerous swellings. In his report, he says:

"The human fat used is procured during operations for the removal of lipomas and benign growths, and the persons from whom it is procured must otherwise be perfectly healthy. The fat must remain light yellow. After cutting it into small pieces, all tissue and fibrous matter must be carefully removed, and the remaining pure fat must be boiled for three hours. Two days later the substance, which remains in a liquid condition at a temperature of about 68 or 70 degrees Fahrenheit, is separated from the sediment which usually forms and is boiled once more. The pure fat thus procured may be kept for years in a bottle which is carefully sealed with sterilized paper.

"Before applying, the fat should be boiled once more. It should be at blood heat when injected, as it will then mingle most readily with the tissues and organs of the living body.

The disadvantage of this cosmetic method lies wholly in the fact that the human fat thus artificially supplied to the system is absorbed or disappears very rapidly. It would be interesting to ascertain experimentally what becomes of this considerable quantity of fat, that is, in what way it is absorbed.

"In order to avoid this rapid disappearance of the fatty substances, I have employed various mixtures of human fat and other fat, and I have finally determined that the best results are obtained with a mixture of human fat and fat taken from the sheep, which mixture, at blood-warmth, has the consistency of gruel. If sheep fat alone is used a disagreeable swelling is apt to appear in eight or ten days, similar to the tumors following paraffin injections, and almost as difficult to remove. They are, furthermore, apt to occasion a disagreeable contortion of the muscles. These swellings are very persistent, and sometimes remain visible for as long a period as a year and a half.

"The mixture described above, consisting of human and sheep fat, causes no contortions and barely any swelling. With this mixture I filled in the entire face of the patient whose case we are discussing. The injection is not painful, and has no deleterious after-effects of any kind. In using the mixture of human and sheep fat, a greater quantity must be injected than if sheep fat alone were used, as the particles of human fat contained in the mixture disappear rapidly, as explained above, while the more porous sheep fat remains behind and finally mingles organically with the flesh and muscles of the face.

"After the injection had been given the skin became healthy and pink, and the face assumed a normal aspect.

"The patient has been able to resume her occupation."

Several New York physicians, when interviewed, stated that the case described by Dr. Hollaender was the first they recalled in which nervous shock had produced emaciation of the head and neck alone, but they said that shock had caused many extraordinary physical results.

This case recalls those in which the hair is said to have turned suddenly white from terror. Present-day doctors do not believe that hair can turn suddenly white from root to tip in a single night or any shorter period, although they admit it may begin to turn white suddenly from shock.

The hair begins to turn white where it grows from the root. That which has already grown cannot lose its color, according to modern doctors. The doctors suggest that the idea that hair grows white suddenly may have arisen in the following way: The hair is growing white at the root, but as long as the ends have their natural color, there is no general appearance of whiteness. At last a time comes when the tips of the natural colored hair are cut off and then the whole head appears white.

In spite of what the doctors say, there are many records of hair having turned suddenly white, and intelligent persons will continue to assert that it is possible.

The most reliable historians state that Queen Marie Antoinette's hair became white within twenty-four hours, as a result of the shock following the decapitation of her husband, King Louis XVI. At the end of the fifteenth century Ludovico Sforza, Duke of Milan, was made prisoner by the King of France, and it is related that the grief and shock turned his hair suddenly white.

Byron has expressed the general belief in the phenomenon when he makes the prisoner of Chillon say:

"My hair is gray, though not with years
Nor turned it white in a single night
As men's have grown from sudden fears"

The sudden whitening of the hair, the emaciation of Miss Bartenbach's head and neck and other curious physical results caused by shock are explained in this way:

The shock suddenly removes the nervous control of the arterial system, and thus permits an embolism, or blood clot, to form in one of the arteries. The embolism stops the full flow of blood to a particular part of the spinal cord. This portion of the spinal cord and the nerves which it controls degenerate, and the sections of the body which they control suffer accordingly. Atrophy in some form is the consequence.

In cases where the hair turns white, the nerves which nourish the pigment or color cells of the scalp are injured.

There is a peculiar class of cases known as the "Charcot-Marie-Tooth" type—after the three doctors who first studied and classified them—where the disappearance of the flesh is confined entirely to the region of the arms below the elbow joint and the region of the leg below the knee joint. Sometimes only a single arm or leg is affected in this manner, sometimes one arm and one leg, and sometimes both arms and both legs.

"There is really no limit to the peculiar manifestations, both mental and physical, which follow sudden shock," declared Dr. William Hanna Thomson, the well-known New York neurologist and brain specialist, when informed of Dr. Hollaender's remarkable case. "It is by no means improbable that the symptoms found in the case reported by Dr. Hollaender were the direct result of the shock she sustained when she received the news of the death of her father.

"Some years ago a somewhat similar case came under my attention where the effects of the shock were even more amazing. Broadly speaking, the patient's blood turned to water. She was a young woman who had a very sick father, and she was his nurse. At stated hours it was her custom to give him certain medicines. One day, by mistake, she gave him a tablespoonful of some powerful poison (I forget now what it was) instead of the medicine, and the old man lay back and died.

"The shock to the devoted daughter was naturally tremendous, and it manifested its effect almost immediately in a general emaciated condition, which examination revealed was due to change in the composition of the blood. Nothing that was tried was sufficient to prevent the gradual transformation of the girl's blood into a thin, watery fluid which was entirely inadequate to nourish her system, and in a few months she died.

"When the bile-duct is affected by the shock, jaundice is the common manifestation. The patient's skin turns yellow. This may be localized, although in the vast majority of cases the symptom is general."

Kitchen of the Virgin Mary Found?

to light an entire chamber, a column and pilaster, showing the entrance to the grotto. It was not until last February that I was able to continue the work and ascertain what ruins lay here.

Reviewing all the church authorities, we may be certain that here was the house of the Virgin, and that during the fourth century it was covered by a church, just as was the case with the Sepulchre and the Tomb of the Virgin. There is, however, little still remaining of this earliest church. The later church erected by the Crusaders followed its lines more or less exactly, covering the various grottoes and chambers. Some of the columns of the older edifice were found, though much broken. What remains points to the same period of construction as the earlier churches over the Holy Sepulchre and at Bethlehem.

The Marquis de Vogue and I agree that the grotto of the Annunciation and the house of the Virgin are of the same date as the Catacombs and the same style. On studying the plans of early pilgrims we see how well they correspond with the plan which we may now draw from the ruins laid bare. The habitation lay to the northeast, and included two parts: First, a room, nearly square, with the back part dug out of the living rock. The inside wall was formerly hewn rock, some six feet high. The two other walls were of rock, hewn on both sides, like the wall at the southeast corner, and the entrance had been hewn out of the rock.

The second part was a grotto, the floor of which was two feet below the level of the floor of the other chamber, 6 feet high, 27 feet long, 17 feet wide. There was a rock shelf on the back wall, with a ring set in it.

All the walls are highly polished, showing long habitation, and the roof is covered with a patina, proving long use of the grotto and ancient date.

Here, then, was the traditional Kitchen of the Virgin, as reverenced by the earliest Christians and preserved by the building of one of the first of Christian churches.

HOW FRANZ MOLNAR (WHO WROTE "THE DEVIL") HAS PLAYED "THE DEVIL" IN REAL LIFE

Enriched by His Play, Like Its Hero He Makes Love to His Old Sweetheart, and Wins Her From Her Banker Husband—Just as His Stage Heroine Was Won.

What "The Devil's" Author Has Done.

AFTER years of poverty and obscurity as a newspaper writer he produced a play that made him rich and famous.

Then he sought out his old sweetheart, the wife of a Budapest banker, and—like the hero of his play—won her heart, trained her to be an actress, gave her a part in his new play and helped her to win success on the stage.

When the inevitable scandal eventuated he was first attacked by the banker-husband, and, after recovering from his injuries in a hospital, fought a duel with him. Now he is planning to marry the woman when divorce has freed her.

"The Devil s" Wicked Argument in Molnar's Play.

"I THOUGHT that I had found two strong souls daring to stand up before the world and defy it—two passions great enough, high enough, deep enough to risk all. I, too, saw your earthly paradise. I led you to its gates. I opened your eyes that you might see and know.

"Then came the reaction.' Honor, respect—Faugh! All the rigmarole of small souls that dare not rely upon themselves, that live only on the consent, the approbation of the weak-minded mob—two timid, weakly loves that put self above happiness, and hid their fear and their small egoism behind empty-sounding phrases.

"Thus shall you pass your lives, desiring, yet fearing; unhappy, but respected. Oh, yes, respected!"

Budapest, Feb. 2.

PLAYGOERS of two continents will feel an uncanny suggestion in the news that Franz Molnar, the distinguished author of "The Devil," has been playing the part of the artist-hero in real life, with the real life climax of a duel with the aggrieved husband of the heroine.

In New York and other large American cities "The Devil" has been presented in two separate adaptations from the original Hungarian—by Henry W. Savage and by Harrison Grey Fiske. It was the theatrical sensation of two seasons ago.

The real life parallel begins—as in the play—when the hero was poor and unknown. Franz Molnar, as a struggling newspaper man and short story writer of the old Hungarian capital, fell in love with Miss Varsany, whose wealth and social position placed her far above him. Though she returned his love, family influences prevented their marriage.

The situation in the play is the same—Sandor Tatray, the artist, is too poor to win for his wife the girl he loves, and who loves him. And so she becomes the wife of the magnate, Laszlo Voross.

While Molnar was still poor and unknown, Miss Varsany married the Budapest banker, Elias Szecsi.

In the play the artist-hero goes to Monte Carlo and loses the little he possesses at the gaming table. In the critical moment of his desperation, the Devil, in the conventional disguise of a gentleman, befriends him so successfully that he regains his losses and quits the tables comparatively rich. He returns to Budapest and sets himself up as a fashionable portrait painter.

To the studio comes the magnate, Laszlo Voross, with his beautiful wife to have her portrait painted, leaving her alone with her old lover.

It was much the same with Franz Molnar, writer of the play. When the play had been produced, and the rights were sought for all countries, he found that "The Devil" had done as much for him, personally, as for his hero. He was rich, and a power in the world of the theatre. Also, his old love, now wife of the banker, Szecsi, came to him — not to have her portrait painted, but to save herself from the ennui of loveless married life by becoming an actress.

Madame Elias Szecsi, Heroine of the Real Life Adaptation of "The Devil," Whom Molnar Will Marry When Divorce Has Freed Her.

The task of making an actress out of a society woman—according to the sworn testimony of David Belasco in a suit to recover the cost of training for the stage Mrs. Leslie Carter—is considerably greater than that of an artist in painting a portrait. During this process Franz Molnar and Mrs. Banker Szecsi had much of each other's exclusive society.

Molnar not only trained his old love as an actress, but saw that she had a good part in his comedy called "The Life Guardsman." According to Banker Szecsi's subsequent acts, developments during this time were not dissimilar to those between "The Devil's" hero and heroine.

Naturally, when she found herself for the first time alone with her old sweetheart—although on the innocent quest of lessons in acting—the banker's wife was agitated. The banker is now, perhaps, justified in reading again certain scenes from "The Devil," and in adapting them to the real life situation by changing the play names of Sandor and Jolan to the real names of Franz and Anna.

She shivered a little, as Franz had shivered earlier in the day.

"Sit down a moment by the fire, Anna," he said. "The drive may have chilled you."

"It is not that, Franz, for my hands are warm and my cheeks burn."

"Why should you feel that way? Your lessons will prove a very simple experience. When you are tired we will stop for the day."

"I know, Franz, but I feel so strange here—I ought to have brought my maid."

"Would your husband expect you to do that?"

"I do not know, Franz. I have often thought that he knew—well, of our friendship six years ago."

"He seemed so old of me then," mused Franz. "He was nearly fifty at that time. Ah, do you remember, Anna, that day he left us alone together?"

"He left us alone, Franz—it was the first time and the —st."

"And then we kissed each other—one timid, gentle kiss. I have never forgotten it. That same evening you accepted Szecsi. He was masterful, and he took you, a little girl, knowing nothing of life, as he would have plucked a rosebud. How could an awakening sentiment, hardly realized, how could one single, timid kiss have barred his way?"

Why is Anna weeping? Why has Franz fallen on his knees before her? Is it now that the evil genius of "The Devil" whispers to them both:

"Look into the work of the world's greatest masters. You will find in nearly every case that with their masterpieces is linked the name of the Beloved Woman. Her name may be unknown to the world, her identity an unsolved puzzle; she may share his glory only anonymously. But there she is.

"What was the inspiration of 'Tristan and Isolde?' The One Woman, the woman of temperament, who understands, who gives of herself freely. Instinctively, for his sake first of all, but if she be truly his mate, for the sake of his art as well.

"And if he has found her and she withholds herself from him because she places her name, her position, fancied duties and obligations above the mission for which she was sent into the world, she is his murderess, even though she return his love in the secret chambers of her heart."

Says "The Devil" uttering the sophistries that wreck lives:

"If she withholds herself from him because she places her name, her position, fancied duties and obligations above the mission for which she was sent into the world, she is his murderess, even though she return his love in the secret chambers of her heart."

The two figures—now seated on the lounge—have drawn closer together. Their hands are clasped. It is then that the evil voice of "The Devil" exclaims:

Well, perhaps this is enough of the banker husband's adaptation of "The Devil" to real life, with Franz Molnar as the hero and Mme. Szecsi as the heroine.

Plenty of people in the theatrical world of Budapest know how the affair progressed after the banker's wife had been given a part in "The Life Guardsman." The rehearsals showed that the brilliant dramatist and the beautiful wife of the banker were desperately in love with each other. In fact, they threw discretion to the winds and "made love" desperately.

Some of the stage people, knowing of the banker's love for his young wife and of his jealous disposition, predicted trouble for the lovers, and a public scandal. But the love making went on, along with the rehearsals.

The new play was produced with success, and Mme. Szecsi made a distinct success in her part. Then, suddenly, Molnar, the brilliant, feted author, disappeared. He who had been so assiduous in his attentions to the banker's wife, his protege in the play, no longer appeared in the audience, nor was he seen back on the stage. While the stage people were wondering, and Mme. Szecsi moved about behind the scenes pale and with compressed lips, a police report was published.

It was a laconic paragraph to the effect that, on account of a visit to Molnar by Banker Szecsi, the play wright had retired for three weeks to a private hospital.

This paragraph brought from the banker the statement that he had waylaid Molnar and horsewhipped him until he "begged for mercy like a dog at my feet."

Thereupon Molnar was goaded to retort with his own version. The banker, accompanied by no less than nine "women in his employ," had attacked him and dragged him into a dark and unfrequented street, where they beat him with sticks until he was nearly dead.

The scandal of all this publicity shattered the nerves of Mme. Szecsi. Her family took her from the stage to a sanitarium, where she is said to have made a promise to give up Molnar and her stage career, and be a good wife and mother—she has two young children.

But the real life parallel of "The Devil" was not to be so simply left incomplete. Having recovered from her attack of "nerves," Mme. Szecsi returned to her own private life. One evening of her return, Molnar, looking pale and ill, sat in a box with tearful eyes fixed on the woman he loved, and attracting the notice of all the audience with his applause.

The scandal was revived with a vengeance. Mme. Szecsi did not return to her husband's house, but went to her mother's home each night after the performance, and there Molnar was a constant visitor. Thus was the banker compelled to challenge the dramatist to a duel.

They fought with swords. It wasn't much of a "fight," since nobody was hurt. After a few wild passes, the seconds stopped the "combat," with the situation remaining as it was before.

Since that affair the police have been worried by the dramatist's pleas for protection from the murderous intentions of his "fiancee's" husband. Although a police bodyguard was supplied, and Molnar's devoted author friend, Alexander Brodi, always accompanied him on the street, the playwright's shattered nerves compelled him to return to the hospital.

It is all excellent advertising for "The Life Guardsman," with the interest continuous, as the banker's wife has sued for divorce, with the avowed purpose of marrying Molnar the moment she gets her decree.

Certain Budapest wits are suggesting a revival of "The Devil," producing enormous success with the added touch of realism given by Molnar and "Miss Varsany," respectively, as hero and heroine.

Ease Your Feet; Keep Your Temper

THOSE who suffer from tired feet after long walks, or after standing too much over household duties will be well advised to follow the primitive instinct of any well-regulated baby and kick off their shoes whenever they get an opportunity. The Summer time is the opportunity for more walking than is perhaps habitually indulged in, and weary feet are apt to generate an irritable temper, and to undo a great deal of the benefit which should be derived from the healthy exercise.

In any case, it is well to get rid of heated leather footwear whenever possible, if only for five minutes, which is only fully possible when shoes are worn instead of boots.

Bare feet, or those only covered by stockings, are, of course, only permitted to babies, other than in the privacy of one's own room but there are so many varieties of what used to be considered bedroom slippers only which are now fit for drawing room or library that it is well worth while to remove the outdoor shoes even for a quarter of an hour's later writing, or through luncheon, before setting out for another long tramp.

In the case of the busy woman, it is the greatest possible rest, for tired feet make a tired head, a fact not often enough realised. To change the shoes, even when there is no chance of resting for a spell, is as comforting as to smooth face and hands. Again, on a long Continental train journey it is quite worth while to unfasten the traveling shoes and put on loose slippers.

Real rest shoes should have little or no leather in their composition; certainly nothing more than the soles, the ideal being extreme emptiness and porosity such as is found in a man's cloth or embroidery slippers for the smoking room. Women, indeed, have a good deal to learn from men as to personal comfort. In this matter of shoes, however, if one goes to the right shops it is possible to find in "silk, satin and cotton"—never allowing the intrusion of "rags," of course—slippers every bit as dainty as patent leather for rest occasions, and all answering the purpose of comfort.

Ten minutes on a couch in stockinged feet, with a light coverlet thrown over, before dressing for dinner at night will often turn an otherwise haggard feeling into one of comparative brightness and comfort. Yet many women who would never omit to dress their hair omit entirely to do more than quickly recover and immediately cover once more their tired feet.

"HOW MARRIAGE HAS CHANGED SUSANNE!"

The Marquise de Charette, Once a Simple American Girl, Now an Intense Partisan of French Royalty, Her Vaulting Ambition Menaced by the Horrid Fact That Mamma Has Gone Into the Milk Business!

"HOW marriage has changed Susanne!"

That was the not unnatural remark of a New York society girl when she read that the former unaffected, sport-loving Susanne Henning had become a fierce and haughty partisan of French royalty.

For, sad to say, pretty Susanne Henning, like many other American girls who have married European noblemen, has deserted the pure republican ideals of her fathers and becomes an ardent supporter of monarchy.

At present there is a vigorous revival of royalism in France. Young men of title and fashion are leading it. There is a new organization of the younger royalists called "Les Camelots du Roy."

The royalist demonstrations have been so bold and numerous of late that the police of Paris have become alarmed and have made seizures of papers.

In these royalist activities the former Susanne Henning—now the Marquise de Charette—has been as active as a woman could be. Her husband, the Marquis de Charette, is a kinsman of the royalist pretender, the Duc d'Orleans, and a member of his pretended court.

The Marquise Susanne was one of the most conspicuous and, it must be added, attractive, figures at the recent services held in memory of the death of King Louis XVI and Queen Marie Antoinette. Not only did she attend the service held in behalf of the Bourbon family, but, with her husband, organized another and larger service at the Church of St. Germain l'Auxerrois, the bells of which gave the signal for the massacre of St. Bartholomew.

This service was made the occasion for a political demonstration in favor of the Duc d'Orleans.

The Marquis de Charette is a great-grandson of the celebrated Athanase de Charette, who raised the peasants of Vendee during the French Revolution and made a heroic and terrific fight against overwhelming numbers of republican troops. He was finally deserted by his royalist allies, taken prisoner and shot.

While the royal family was in exile the Duke de Berri, whose father later became King Charles X, married an English girl named Amy Brown. When the Bourbons regained the throne the Duke married the Princess Caroline of Naples without any dissolution of his previous marriage.

His two daughters by his first marriage were brought up with the royal family, and one of them married Baron de Charette, son of the celebrated Athanase. Young Marquis Antoine de Charette, who has married Miss Henning, is a grandson of this marriage. He is therefore directly descended from the decapitated King Louis XVI, and from Charles X, the last French monarch of the elder Bourbon line.

The Duke d'Orleans, who now unites the claims of all the French Bourbons, regards the Marquis de Charette as one of his most valued counsellors and partisans, and also treats him as a kinsman. The Marquis is a prominent member of the suite that waits upon the Duke and Duchess, and so is his American wife.

The Duke d'Orleans as most people know, lives in England, because he is not allowed to return to France by the Government of the Republic. Various French royalists take turns to go to England and do service as courtiers to the Duke and Duchess.

If the Duke d'Orleans should ever be put on the throne he would certainly give the Marquis de Charette a high position at a royal court. His American Marquise would enjoy a correspondingly high position.

She is quite willing to take it. She feels that she would look the part of "First Lady of Honor to the Queen" to perfection. Most people will agree with her. You can hardly imagine a more dainty, haughty patrician Marquise than Susanne Henning. You can quite imagine her asking why the people don't eat cake if they can't get bread. Without much doubt the Marquise Susanne has indulged in visions of herself as the first ornament of a court.

But a horrid reality has come to mar these visions. A rumor has been wafted across the Atlantic that the noble Marquise's mother is engaged in selling milk. This is, of course, a great shock to the court of the French Pretender. The aristocracy in these degenerate ages looks tolerantly upon some forms of labor, such as stockbroking and high finance, but the idea of selling milk, butter and eggs is, of course, shock ing to persons of noble and royal blood.

Mrs. James Williamson Henning, the mother of the Marquise, has gained the French aristocracy. She is carrying on the milk and dairy produce industry near Sheboyville, Ky. Mr. Henning, the father of the bride, who is a millionaire stock broker, associated with Standard Oil interests, still makes his headquarters in New York.

Mrs. Henning prefers to carry on her democratic business alone. No Standard Oil gold for her, but just the produce of the plain American hen and cow. She was formerly Miss Susan Meriwether, and was noted as one of the most beautiful and popular girls of the Blue Grass region of Kentucky. Her family was wealthy and prominent in the public and business affairs of the state. She is also known as the owner of one of the finest dairy stock farms in the State.

So there you have Mrs. Henning running a dairy business in Kentucky, Mr. Henning living like a patroon in New York and the young Marquise heading the royalists of France.

The wedding of the Marquis de Charette and Miss Henning was a romance. The young American girl had made a reputation as the most daring woman Alpine climber in Europe. She met the Marquis at Dinard, in France, near which his family estates are situated, and then immediately discovered that they were born for one another.

She announced her engagement to her millionaire father. It was called a runaway engagement. Papa immediately replied that it was not to be thought of, but a few arguments from Miss Suzanne changed his mind.

The formal engagement was celebrated at La Rasse Motte in Brittany, where the Marquis and his family live amid a loyal peasantry, as in the good old days before the Revolution.

Soon after that the Marquis came to New York, and he and Miss Henning were married at a grand wedding in St. Patrick's Cathedral. After that Mr. and Mrs. Henning went their own ways.

The Marquis derives his title from an uncle, while his father continues to bear the humbler title of Baron. The old Baron de Charette is one of the most picturesque characters in France. At one time he commanded the regiment of Zouaves in the service of the Pope. When the forces of United Italy advanced on Rome in 1870 he offered a spirited resistance to the Italian army.

At last he realized that further resistance to overwhelming forces would be an injustice to his men. But he wished to give signal proof of his devotion to the Pope, and so he fought a single combat with an equally valorous colonel of an Italian cavalry regiment in front of the assembled forces. The colonel was said to be the strongest man in the Italian army. They fought with sabres, and the Baron killed the Italian colonel.

After that Baron de Charette returned to France, where the Germans had a ready inflicted crushing defeats on the French army. The Baron put himself at the head of a body of volunteers, and with this half disciplined force inflicted a serious reverse on greatly superior numbers of the enemy. Gambetta, the radical leader, though of different political opinions, conferred the rank of General upon him for his services in the war.

The Baron married Miss Polk, daughter of Bishop Polk, of Tennessee, who was killed in battle in the American Civil War.

The former Miss Polk is an ardent royalist, like most of the American women who have married into the French nobility. Another prominent supporter of the royal cause is the Marquise de Martinpre, formerly Miss Drouillard, of Nashville, Tenn. The Duchesse de Dino, formerly Miss Symes, of Montreal, is also called upon to "serve at court" regularly. The Duchesse de Talleyrand, originally Anna Gould, and later Countess de Castellane, lends her weighty influence in support of the cause of monarchy.

It has been said that if all the French aristocracy had the spirit of the Charettes there would be no doubt about the restoration of the monarchy. Since the first revolution the aristocrats have never shown much disposition to fight for the King or Pretender to the throne. The wholesale use of the guillotine at that time has made them circumspect. The only fighting spirit has been shown by a small group of nobles in Brittany and Vendee, and to the group the Charettes belong.

The royalists now have new and unexpected allies. It seems likely that a number of lively and spirited American girls might overturn anything, even a republic.

But would "the King and his court" care to be restored by a Marquise whose mother is in the milk business?

Growth of the Once Lowly Peanut—Now a $36,000,000 Crop!

Once a Typical Southern Crop, Experiments Now in Progress Aim to Add It to the Farm Products of the North

ALTHOUGH peanuts are sold mainly by the nickel's worth, the annual consumption of this humble article in this country amounts to no less than $36,000,000 a year.

Hither to the cultivation of the peanut has been confined almost exclusively to the South and the West, where the climate is frost free, but such is the increased demand for the crop that the Government agricultural experts are now conducting experiments with a view of extending the production of the crop to the Northern and Eastern States as well.

It is hoped that by careful selection of the hardier varieties for the purpose, peanut plantations may eventually be introduced into New England.

Harvesting Peanuts on a Large Southern Plantation.

The Nutrition in Fifty Peanuts Is Equal to That in Four Bananas, and Ten Times as Great as That Contained in Three Apples.

Scientists have recently pointed out that the peanut, which in the past was not very highly regarded, is the only food staple that will at once nourish man, beast bird and fields. It is the most nutritious of the entire nut family—it is not a true nut—rich in tissue building properties—containing glucose and carbohydrates—and is the cheapest. It is cheaply and easily raised, the value of the plant as a food for cattle, or its utilization as a soil fertilizer, more than paying the entire cost of the production of the crop. Many Southern farmers are now utilizing the peanut in their regular system of crop rotation.

The cultivation of the peanut for commercial purposes has until recently been confined chiefly to areas in Virginia, Tennessee, the Carolinas and Georgia. During recent years the industry has become established throughout the South Atlantic States and Westward to and including California. The area is one within which the frost free season is comparatively long, and much of the territory has a soil containing a large percentage of sand or alluvial matter, making it easily cultivated and well adapted to the peculiar habits of the peanut plant. The climatic requirements of the peanut are a long season without frost, a comparatively light rainfall during the growing period, abundant sunshine and a high temperature.

To most persons the peanut suggests only the article as it appears for sale, whole or shelled and salted, but during recent years and ranges of peanuts have become numerous, and include a wide range of utility. The demand for peanuts for use in the manufacture of food products is constantly increasing. By-products of the peanut are now being employed extensively in the manufacture of feeds for farm stock and dairy cows, and the plant is being largely utilized as forage and as a soil renovator. Among the more important uses of the peanut for human food are the following: It is eaten from the shell, as salted shelled peas, as blanched peas, in the so-called peanut candies and brittle, in combination with popcorn and puffed rice, in the form of peanut butter, and as an ingredient of peanut and vegetable meats, peanut meal and salad oil. The use of the peanut for eating from the shell when roasted is most important and popular, but the quantity of shelled peas that are first roasted and then salted and sold by the pound is constantly increasing. A comparatively small quantity of the better grades of peanuts is first shelled and then roasted, and the thin brown covering removed, after which the halves of the peas are broken apart, the small germ removed, and the meats given a blanching process which renders them very desirable for table use.

During recent years great quantities of shelled peanuts have been employed for the manufacture of peanut butter. This butter is prepared by the ton in factories, is put up in bottles or cans and has become very popular as a part of the luncheon menu and for camping and cruising supplies. In the process of the manufacture of peanut butter the shelled peas are first given a medium roast, care being taken that the meats do not become overdone or scorched. The peas are then fanned and screened to remove the thin brown covering and the germs, after which they are ground to a pulp by means of a special grinder similar to those used for chopping meats. As the peanut pulp comes from the grinder it is fed through a tin tube into the bottles or tins and tightly sealed. Some manufacturers follow the practise of salting the peanut butter, while others leave this part of the process to the consumer, who can salt it to suit his taste.

The oil of the peanut belongs commercially in the same class as do cottonseed and olive oils. Peanut oil is said to be of a higher grade than cottonseed oil, and of somewhat lower value than first-class olive oil. Peanut oil is sometimes used for mixing with olive oil for the production of an oil that can be sold at a somewhat lower price than first-class olive oil. On the other hand, peanut oil is frequently mixed with cottonseed oil in order to improve the quality of cottonseed oil for special purposes. It is generally conceded that in order to make the manufacture of peanut oil profitable, good peanuts must be obtained at prices not exceeding forty cents a bushel. With the coming shortage of cottonseed oil in this country there is a great possibility of building up a peanut oil industry in the cotton belt of the United States. There are thousands of acres of land now lying idle that will produce fairly good crops of peanuts, and their growth will improve the land.

The peanut is also a valuable feed for use in preparing hogs for market, the usual custom being to turn the hogs into the peanut fields and allow them to clean whatever is left after harvesting. In some sections peanuts are grown primarily for feeding to hogs. Poorly filled nuts, broken peas, the germs and waste products generally are fed to hogs during the earlier part of the fattening period. A hog that is untrened exclusively on peanuts will not yield a desirable grade of meat or lard, as the meat will lack firmness and the lard be soft and oily. Toward the end of the fattening period the hog should be fed almost exclusively on corn. Hogs will eat considerable of the peanut tops when pastured on them.

After Peanuts Are Removed from the Soil They Are Stacked and Shocked to Cure.

MARY WASHINGTON MOROSINI, a dark-eyed, slender little girl of nine years, will be taken to Europe next month to be educated away, if possible, from "the queer streak" in her family. The child's mother, who was the beautiful Mary Washington Bond, is as sensitive as she is beautiful, and wants to place the child as far as she can from the possibility of inheriting any of the "queerness" that has made the family famous and picturesque.

Little Mary Washington Morosini is the last of those bearing the name. She is the only grandchild of the taciturn old banker who came to this country from Italy as a soldier of fortune in the retinue of the exiled Garibaldi. Logically she will inherit the fine estate hidden behind great armoire, and screened by evergreen trees at Riverdale-on-the-Hudson, the estate whose owners were of so strange tastes and habits that it became known in the neighborhood as "The Mansion of Mystery."

When, last month, the announcement was made of the marriage of Miss Giulia Morosini, who had long sustained the triple reputation of being an expert horsewoman, the most expensively dressed woman in New York and a local philanthropist, to Arthur Werner, the manager of her estate, and a former policeman, surprise was expressed, but people recalled the family history.

They recalled that when Giovanni Morosini—no longer following the fortunes of war and exile with his chief, Garibaldi—was a humble utility man in the office of the financier Nathaniel Marsh he saved his employer's life in a curious way.

A suspicious looking person entered the outer office and demanded an audience with Mr Marsh.

"Quite so," urbanely replied the former follower of Garibaldi. "Mr Marsh's office is on this side. Will you follow me?"

The suspicious person unsuspiciously followed until he was opposite the outside door. The young Italian, standing behind him, suddenly flung open the door and thrust the astounded visitor outside. A pistol shot, as the man tried to scramble to his feet, proved that Morosini had read aright the menace in eye and voice. Mr Marsh's life was saved.

Young Morosini's alertness was rewarded by promotion. Learning of the young Latin's sagacity and his skill in the difficult art of keeping a secret, Jay Gould employed him. Afterward he made him his partner.

The fortune of the house of Morosini was assured. Giovanni Morosini, from having lived humbly in an unfashionable quarter of New York, removed to fashionable Riverdale.

He practised the doctrine of repression and taught it to his children. Victoria, his second daughter, grew restive under it. She had a merry nature, and asked permission to attend the dances given and enjoyed by the young people in the neighborhood. Her father sternly refused.

Fe-tful of fortune hunters, he had resolved that his daughters should not marry. The money he had earned should be kept in the family, he declared.

The first romance fell upon him as a thunderbolt from a serene sky. Coming home from business one day, the banker became aware of unusual solicitude from the train conductor. Mr. Morosini looked up from his scrutiny of the stock reports.

"Do you wish to speak to me?"

"Excuse me, Mr. Morosini, but your daughter, Miss Victoria, went to town with me on my last trip." The black eyes scrutinized his face, but revealed nothing. The conductor floundered on in a morass of doubt. "Of course, it's none of my business, but the young coachman was with her, and I thought by the way they were talking——"

"That will do, my man! You were mistaken!"

The conductor, with flushed face, went on collecting his fares. The banker seemed buried anew in the stock reports, but it could have been observed by the attentive that his cheeks had grown as white as his hair. When he reached Riverdale-on-the-Hudson the coachman, Ernest Schilling, was not there to meet him. The banker trudged up the hill from the station alone, and when the doors of Elmhurst opened to him there issued from them the sound of weeping.

"Victoria has run away with Schilling," his invalid wife sobbed from her sick bed, then clasped her hands about her rosary and prayed.

Romance lived but briefly for Victoria Morosini after she became Mrs. Ernest Schilling. He was a conductor on a horse car and earned $2 a day. She, used to the luxuries of a millionaire's home, spent her share of the $2 a day "foolishly."

"That is the only reason for any trouble between us," Ernest Schilling said in his only statement, made twenty years after the elopement, nineteen years after his wife had made her debut in the chorus on the Casino stage, eighteen years after she had kissed him good-bye as he put her on a street car and had never seen her again.

Through agents, her father had induced Victoria to leave the stage, on which she had not been successful. Through agents, he had persuaded her, by promising her means of support, not to go back to her husband. She went to a convent at Rutland, Vt, where she studied, and has since been living quietly at the convent or in a boarding house. Never after her marriage did she see her father alive.

During his last illness she came from Rutland to see him. She saw, instead her sister, Giulia.

"Papa doesn't want to see you," said her sister.

At nearly the same time misfortune befell Amalia, the banker's youngest daughter. The child, sitting on the porch, rocking and playing with her doll, attracted the attention of a roving mongrel. The savage dog leaped the fence, dashed upon the porch and, growling, seized the child's face between its teeth, horribly mangling it. When the groom drove away the dog the girl's features were hideously mutilated. Mr. Morosini took his daughter to Europe and engaged some of the most skilful specialists to treat her.

Unfortunate Amalia came back to America as greatly disfigured as she had left it. Thereafter she was a hermit, housed in her own private suite at Elmhurst, wandering about the grounds heavily veiled by day, or driving forth in her own automobile with her chauffeur at night.

Giovanni, the elder son, who was never very strong, had inherited his mother's unambitiveness. He had no wish to enter in the lists of business. He remained at home willing to do his own part in his father's and his sister, Giulia's, bidding.

Attilio Pertinax Morosini resembled his father in body and mind.

He was handsome. He had the charm of manner of a courtier. He had initiative, for he forsook his father's banking house, sought employment elsewhere, and at last opened a brokerage office of his own. But in the matter of marriage Attilio was also impetuous.

He met at a charity ball Mary Washington Bond, the great grand niece of George Washington, and namesake of the beautiful Mary Ball, the Colonial belle, and relative of Dolly Madison. Instantly fascinated by the girl, whose miniature appeared among Peter Marin's collection of miniatures of famous American beauties, Mr Morosini paid devoted court to her.

It was while driving in Long Island with her one day that he urged his claims as against those of a wealthy elderly suitor, a famous architect who has since died, a widower with four children older than herself, but whose suit nevertheless, her family favored, that Mr Morosini induced the beauty to consent to an immediate marriage.

Papa Morosini liked the match and invited his son and daughter in law to spend their honeymoon at Elmhurst.

The last of the Morosinis, little Mary Washington, was born at Elmhurst.

Shortly afterward the Attilio Morosinis removed to Mount Vernon, where, because they led so quiet a life receiving only the friends who came to them from New York and Philadelphia and the South, they became known as "the exclusive Morosinis."

It was said that it was because of the small Mary Washington Morosini that her elders had moved from the Morosini estate and set up their own nest keeping. Miss Giulia brought to the table of the paternal home the flavor of the stables in her speech, so it was said, and Mrs. Attilio Pertinax Morosini loathed and feared the stables because in them two romances of her sister in law, Victoria, had had its beginning. Mary Washington Morosini is aught to avoid all persons who issue from stables or who talk thereof.

And now to the maternal injunctions addressed to the nurse guarding Mary Washington Morosini, a brilliant, receptive child, has been added another.

"Mary Washington, if mother sees you talking to, or even looking at, a policeman, she will — well, mother doesn't know what she will do. Policemen are all right in their place, but their place is not near us."

"Not near this branch of the family at any rate," she says in an aside which her husband fervently echoes.

For it was a sore trial to all the remaining members of the Morosini family that Giulia should have taken one of "de force" to its bosom. They say the elder Morosini would have driven the new manager from the estate had not the master been on his death bed when the policeman was installed. They openly and emphatically disapprove the choice of the heiress of the estate, who by this marriage, they say, proves herself to be the queerest of the queer Morosinis. It is enough to cause the banker to walk the earth again, a furious, moaning ghost, denouncing his daughter's marriage at fifty.

Misguided or careless prints have published the name of Miss Giulia Morosini, the policeman's bride, beneath photographs of the former Mary Washington Bond taken with her little daughter and namesake, causing Mrs Arthur Pertinax Morosini much embarrassment and her husband as near an approach to profanity as a gentleman ever permits himself.

Where Man and His Cow Came From

UNDER the title, "The Birthplace of Man," Professors Williston and Merriam, in the Popular Science Monthly, throw interesting light upon the question of the origin of the higher animals. Beginning with the domestic animals, they find that the genus bos, of which our indispensable cow is the noblest representative, "the most highly developed of the even-toed ungulates," began in the Lower Pliocene of India.

Asia was the origin and dispersive centre of the whole family of the cow kind, and to this day it is the home of the higher types, those of lower degree having made their way to Europe, Africa and America. From North America the camelids wandered to Asia. In Asia we find the true camels, the highest development of the family.

In the llama and the alpaca we see their lower development, and these possess an added interest from the fact that they have never been in touch with Asiatic environment. The horse, the elephant, the cat family, the ostrich, the jungle fowl, the peacock, the goose and the dove are all Asiatic.

The turkey is American and the guinea-fowl African in origin. The reptiles highest in organization and the majority of the domestic plants also hail from Asia. Are we to suppose that man is any exception among so many branches of vertebrate evolution?

Professor Williston tells us that we shall know for certain before long. If Pithecanthropus be a true hominid, he reminds us, then we have already evidence of his Asiatic origin.

"Be it as it may, I confidently believe that within a very few years the discovery of indubitable links in man's ancestry will be made in Central Asia, in China, or in Northern India."

Professor Merriam draws attention to the necessity of paleontological inquiry into the early history of the order of primates, and in particular to the development of the prominent characteristics of the human family. We have at present but one-tenth of the material that is requisite before we can pronounce with any certainty as to the transition from anthropoid to human or from pithecanthropoid to the Neanderthal type. His general conclusion as to American immigration is that it must have taken place after the period of the first great physical differentiation of the race, and so recently that the second period of physical differentiation had not yet had time to develop.

It is not yet clear if man arrived just before or just after the beginning of the present epoch, though it is most probable that the arrival occurred after the end of the last division of glacial time.

The Latest Charming American Girl to Join the British Aristocracy.

THE most interesting marriage of this year, and of several years, is that of Lord Decies and Miss Vivien Gould, the charming second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Jay Gould.

It is one of those social occurrences which interest a large part of our population, as did the Marlborough Vanderbilt wedding and the Roxburghe-Goelet wedding and the Bradley Martin ball.

A pretty and very accomplished American heiress, just eighteen years old, marries a distinguished Anglo-Irish nobleman and soldier, forty-five years of age. She will take a fortune of many millions with her.

In view of the unquestionable attraction that British lords exercise upon American heiresses it becomes interesting to know just what the rank of Lord Decies is in the British peerage, and what are the privileges and distinctions that little Vivien Gould may expect to enjoy at the British Court. On this page are set forth all the important facts bearing upon Lord Decies's position, gathered from "Burke's Peerage," that Bible of Britain's upper classes, and from other high authorities.

Lord Decies, whose position is to be made clear, belongs to a famous and ancient Anglo-Irish family, the Beresfords. He has had a creditable military career, having fought in the Boer War, in Somaliland and other campaigns. He holds the Distinguished Service Order, which is generally rated next to the Victoria Cross. He is a first-class all-round sportsman and a fine polo player. On account of his personal qualities alone, Americans would rank him higher than the ancient regulations of the British court do. He is a baron, the lowest of the five ranks of the peerage.

He is actually, according to Burke's Peerage, No. 473 in the entire list of British peers, who number 691. He has no seat in the House of Lords, because he is a peer of Ireland. The title was created in 1812.

He is entitled to two rows of ermine on his velvet robe, while a duke has four. He has the eight strawberry leaves are the distinguishing characteristic of a duke's coronet.

The royal dukes, i. e., the sons, brothers and nephews and grandsons of the king, form a special class by themselves, taking precedence of all the other dukes. At present there are only three of them—the Duke of Cornwall, who is also Prince of Wales; the Duke of Connaught, King Edward's brother, and the Duke of Albany, who is Queen Victoria's grandson.

The mantle of a peer is of the same length in each of the five ranks of the peerage, and the difference in rank is indicated by the number of bars of ermine in the cape worn over the shoulders. In the case of wives of peers, the difference in rank is indicated by the length on the ground of the train attached to the mantle. This varies from six feet in the case of a duchess to three feet in the case of a baroness, the rank held by the former Miss Vivien Gould.

The mantle of a duke is of crimson velvet reaching to the ground, edged with miniver, an ancient name for fur. Miniver in this sense is always white. Over this is a cape of miniver decorated, or "powdered," as it is technically called, with four rows of ermine running round horizontally. The ermine is a strip of black fur. Duchesses wear the mantles of dukes edged with pure miniver five inches broad and having in addition a train six feet on the ground. An excellent example of a duchess's train may be seen in the picture of the Duchess of Marlborough, the American peeress of highest rank, wearing her ducal coronet, her ducal mantle and her ducal train six feet long.

We now come to the next step down in the peerage—the rank of marquis. A marquis is styled on the outside of an envelope "The Most Honorable," and is officially addressed by the King as "Our Right Trusty and Entirely Beloved Cousin." Note that the word "right" is omitted before "Entirely Beloved Cousin," to distinguish the marquis from a duke. The marquis is also addressed on special occasions as "Most Noble and Puissant Prince." The coronet of a marquis consists of a circle of silver gilt, chased and jewelled, surmounted by four gold strawberry leaves and four silver balls alternately, the latter slightly raised on points above the rim of the coronet. This rests upon a cap of crimson velvet, turned up with ermine, having a golden tassel at the top.

The mantle of a marquis is the same as that of a duke, but with only three and a half instead of four rows of ermine on the cape. The marquis' wife, called a marchioness, wears the mantle of a marquis, edged with pure miniver four inches in breadth and having a train five feet three inches on the ground, as compared with six feet for a duchess.

An earl comes next in rank below a marquis. He is addressed on envelopes as "The Right Honorable," and in documents is addressed by the King as "Our Right Trusty and Right Well-Beloved Cousin." Note the delicate difference between this address and that given to a marquis. The earl is "Right Well Beloved," while the marquis is "Entirely Beloved." It will be seen that the King is rather careful not to hurt the earl's feeling by suggesting that he is very much less beloved than a marquis. The reason for this is that an earl was originally a little king in his way, as those who are familiar with Anglo-Saxon times will remember.

When dukes were first introduced some of the ancient earls were rather huffed. Then when the King introduced still another rank, that of marquis, ahead of them, he thought there might be more trouble. So he took pains to be uncommonly civil to the earls.

This also explains why the earl gets more strawberry leaves and more silver balls in his coronet than a marquis. The earl's coronet consists of a circle of silver gilt, chased and jewelled, surmounted by eight silver balls raised upon points with eight gold strawberry leaves between the points. This coronet is placed upon a cap of crimson velvet turned up with ermine and having a golden tassel on top. Here you see the earl enjoys eight silver balls and eight strawberry leaves against four strawberry leaves and four silver balls for the marquis, but the earl's strawberry leaves are much smaller than the marquis'.

The mantle of an earl is the same length as that of the other peers, but has three rows of ermine on the cape. The wife of an earl, called a countess, wears the mantle of an earl, edged with pure miniver, three inches in breadth, and having in addition a train four feet six inches on the ground, as against five feet three inches for a duchess.

Next comes the fourth grade in the peerage, that of viscount.

The viscount is addressed on envelopes as the "Right Honorable," and he is officially addressed by the king as "Our Right Trusty and Well-Beloved Cousin." Note that the word "right" is omitted before "well beloved cousin."

The coronet of a viscount consists of a circle of silver gilt, chased and jewelled and surmounted by sixteen silver balls. This rests upon a cap of crimson velvet turned up with ermine and having a golden tassel at the top. It should be noted that there are no strawberry leaves in the viscount's coronet, but he is consoled with the generous allowance of sixteen silver balls. No one below the rank of an earl is allowed golden strawberry leaves.

The mantle of a viscount is the same as any other of the peers, except that it has two rows and a half of ermine on the cape. A viscountess wears the mantle of a viscount, edged round with pure miniver two inches in breadth and having in addition a train three feet nine inches on the ground, as compared with four feet six inches for a countess.

And now we come to the fifth rank in the peerage, that of baron, which is held by 344 persons. This is the rank which will be shared by Miss Vivien Gould, as the wife of Lord Decies.

A baron is styled "The Right Honorable." He is addressed officially by the King as "Our Right Trusty and Well Beloved." This latter phrase is intended to signify the esteem in which a baron is held by the king. The word "cousin," given to all the other ranks of the peerage, is here omitted.

The coronet of a baron consists of a plain circle of silver gilt surmounted by six silver balls at equal distances. This is placed on a handsome cap of crimson velvet turned up with ermine, having a golden tassel at the top. The reader will notice that this coronet has no golden strawberry leaves such as are enjoyed by the three higher ranks of the peerage, and has six silver balls as compared with the sixteen which are enjoyed by a viscount.

The mantle of a baron is similar to that of the other peers, except that it has only two rows of ermine on the cape.

A baroness wears the mantle of a baron edged round with pure miniver two inches in breadth and having a train three feet on the ground. Every peeress occupies a space proportioned to her rank.

Every person in England having a title of nobility, or related to one having a title, or holding an office under the crown, has a certain fixed position in what is described by Burke's Peerage as "the scale of general or social precedence."

Everybody in this class has a number, is obliged to walk behind those whose numbers come earlier, and walk ahead of those whose numbers come after him. This order of precedence is invariably followed at public ceremonies and usually on private social occasions. Thus the most distinguished physician in the country, if he bore no relationship to a title, would have to walk in to dinner behind the younger son of a baron.

"The scale of general or social precedence

Pictorial Diagram Showing the Numbers of the Five Ranks of the British Peerage, Including the Royal Dukes, and Their Relative Nearness to the King and Queen.

1 Next to the King and Queen are three royal dukes—the Prince of Wales (who is also Duke of Cornwall), the Duke of Connaught and the Duke of Albany—who take precedence of all the other dukes.

2 The highest rank in the peerage is that of duke. There are 28 representatives of this class, in addition to the royal dukes. Dukes take the front place in all state ceremonies, after the royal family. The leading American representative of this rank is Consuelo, Duchess of Marlborough, who is No. 10 in the list, and after her are the Duchesses of Roxburghe and Manchester.

3 Next to the dukes in rank come the marquises, of whom there are 36. American peeresses of this rank are the Marchioness of Donegall and the Marchioness of Dufferin, while another peeress well known to Americans is the Marchioness of Headfort, formerly Miss Rosie Boote, the actress.

4 After the marquises come the earls, of whom there are 207. There are many American peeresses of the high rank, among whom are the Countess of Suffolk, formerly Daisy Leiter, and the Countess of Granard, formerly Beatrice Mills. The American actress, Anna Robinson, was Countess of Rosslyn.

5 Next to earls come the viscounts, of whom there are 73. The only American peeress of this rank is Viscountess Falkland, formerly Miss Mary Reade, while another well-known member of the order is Field Marshal Viscount Kitchener. A viscount is the lowest peer addressed as "Cousin" by the sovereign, and has sixteen silver balls in his coronet. The title of viscount is usually given to public officials of great distinction, and so there are fewer viscounts than earls, who are noblemen of large possessions.

6 After the viscounts come barons, the fifth and lowest rank in the peerage, of whom there are 344. Among these Lord Decies is No. 126—or No. 473 in the entire peerage—a rank shared by his wife, the former Miss Vivien Gould.

It is important to know that peers of the same rank take precedence according to the antiquity of their titles, except that peers of England are counted first, Scotland next of Great Britain next, of Ireland next and lastly peers of the United Kingdom, together with peers of Ireland created since the union.

There are at present 691 peers of all the various creations, this total including a few women who are peeresses in their own right. Of the total three are royal dukes, 28 plain dukes, 36 marquises, 207 earls, 73 viscounts and 344 barons.

Lord Decies is number 126 on the roll of 344 barons. From this it is easy to calculate that he is No. 473 on the entire list of British peers, because ahead of him there are 3 royal dukes, 28 dukes, 36 marquises, 207 earls, 73 viscounts and 125 barons of earlier creation than himself. He is, however, much lower than No. 473 in the scale of general precedence, because sons of peers of higher rank than himself are counted ahead of him.

The wife's position in the scale of precedence is naturally based on that of her husband, but she is moved somewhat further down the line by the fact that not only are wives of peers of higher rank than her husband's counted ahead of her, but also the widows of peers of higher rank.

It is interesting to note that a good many American women will take rank ahead of Lady Decies. There are twenty-seven American peeresses, and twenty-one of these rank higher than Lady Decies.

It is also curious to notice that a number of peeresses, who formerly adorned the stage, will take precedence of Lady Decies in the British peerage. Miss Rosie Boote, who was a favorite at the Gayety Theatre, in London, has become the Marchioness of Headfort, and performs the duties of her rank with great dignity. Her husband, the Marquis of Headfort, is No. 53 in the entire peerage. Miss Connie Gilchrist, who was also a popular favorite at the Gayety, but is now almost forgotten, married the Earl of Orkney, whose title was created in 1696

The sprightly American musical comedy actress, Anna Robinson, married the scapegrace Earl of Rosslyn. If she were still the wife of this earl she would outrank Lady Decies, but she preferred a divorce to high rank. There are several others in the nighthave-been class. May Yohe was formerly Lady Francis Hope. As the wife of the younger son of a duke, she would have greatly outranked a baroness.

British peers in spite of the progress of democracy, still enjoy many important and curious privileges, to describe which fully would require many volumes of type.

The most important privilege enjoyed by the peers is the right to be tried for treason and felonious offences by their fellow peers, instead of by a judge and jury like ordinary citizens. They voluntarily gave up their right some years ago to be tried by their peers for minor offences. This was spoken of as a concession to democratic sentiment, but the Lords probably felt that they would not like to be solemnly called together to try one of their number who was charged with assaulting a cabman or "painting the town."

The practice of trying a peer accused of a felony before the House of Lords is still in full force. A few years ago Earl Russell, who had married a second time after getting a divorce in America while his English wife was still suing him, was tried before the House of Lords for bigamy and sentenced to three months' imprisonment. Peeresses do not enjoy the privilege of being tried by the House of Lords.

There are also a great number of curious privileges attached to certain peerages. Lord Kingsale, whose peerage dates from 1223, enjoys the peculiar privilege of wearing his hat, or "remaining covered," as it is more elegantly termed, in the presence of the King. Another peer of ancient descent, Lord Forrester, enjoys the same privilege.

The Duke of Norfolk, who is the premier peer of England, is entitled to act as "Chief Butler of England" in addition to his almost innumerable other functions. The Chief Butler, it may be explained, has the privilege of serving the King with wine at his banquets. This office was of great importance in early times, because attempts to poison the King were feared.

The Duke of Newcastle has the right to provide a glove for the King and support his arm at the coronation; the Duke of Somerset to carry the orb; the Earl of Lauderdale to carry the King's ensigns of war; the Earl of Erroll to walk as Lord High Constable of Scotland and to have a silver baton tipped with gold; Lord Grey de Ruthyn to carry the golden spurs; the Marquis of Winchester to carry the cap of maintenance, and the Earl of Shrewsbury to carry a white staff as Lord High Steward of Ireland. Lord Decies has no special or peculiar privileges.

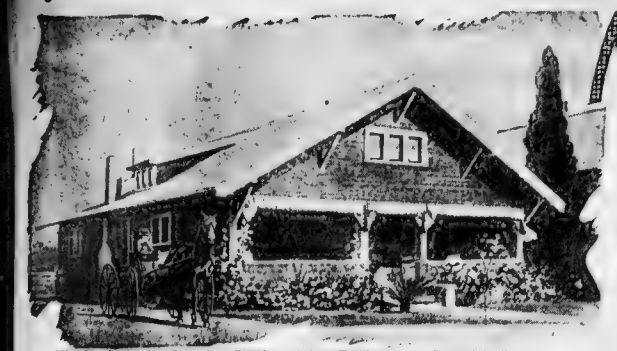
My Way of Earning Money—No. 1

How Miss Anne Southerland Became a Tramp, Sold Egg Crops and Out-of-the-Way Farms and Now Has Bought a Paying Chicken Farm of Her Own with the Money She Made



Miss Southerland's Bungalow, Bought with Her Earnings as a "Lady Hobo."

Miss Anne Southerland, Who Tells Here of Odd Money-Earning and My Uncomfortable Position.

Miss Southerland's New Chicken Farm.

By Anne Southerland

"My friends call me 'the lady hobo,' but I am not a real hobo, you know, because I really work. I pay for my food and lodging, and then, as you see, I am minus the tomato can. I believe all real true hobos find a tomato can indispensable. If you wish to know what I do for a living and why I adopted this means of earning it, I will be glad to tell you.

"We were a very large family at home, and as it was necessary for us all to help, just as soon as I could leave school I obtained employment in one of the large department stores in Chicago. I was cash girl there for three years, and then they put me in a dark, airless corner of the basement as a demonstrator of different kinds of silver polish. I became very ill. The doctor said my condition was most serious, and that to regain my health I must have plenty of fresh air and sunshine, and, to use his own words, 'live close to nature.'

"I read the want advertisements every day in the papers to see if I could find some employment which would give me an outdoor life.

"At last I obtained a position to solicit orders for photo enlargements. From morning till night, in all kinds of weather, I walked from house to house, climbed countless numbers of steep stairs, to have countless numbers of doors rudely slammed in my face. Oh, it was all inexpressibly horrid! At the end of one week I found that all my labor and humiliation had netted me just three dollars and forty cents! I returned the samples to the firm and resigned.

"One day, when all hope seemed to have deserted me, I overheard a conversation between two men on a street car. One of them was telling about a new line of business he had engaged in. He said he traveled for a real estate firm, listing chicken farms through the country which were for sale or exchange.

"I rode way past my destination drinking in every word of the conversation. He said he received a commission both from the farmers and the real estate firm, and that the venture had proved a paying one. He travelled through the Western States, remaining about a week in each town, to obtain information regarding the farms in the neighborhood. In answer to a question from his friend, he said he did not go into the country away from railroad connection, as it would cost too much for conveyances and take too much time to make any profit out of it.

It occurred to me that if these chicken farms were so far away from railway connection as to be practically cut off from the outside world a lot of fine fresh eggs must go to waste for want of an outlet, and that if a person were enterprising enough to look up such farms and make a market for their produce money might be made for every one concerned. The farmer would be willing to sell his eggs and other produce at a low price, and the wholesaler would be glad to increase his source of supply.

"Well, all that afternoon and night I thought over what I had heard, and I made up my mind to two things—first, that it would pay some one to go on a walking tour into the country away from the railroad and list the chicken farms, and, secondly, that I myself would be that some one!

"The next day I went to a real estate firm and told them what I intended doing. They looked me over—sized up my ninety-eight pounds and—well, laughed at me! But I wasn't discouraged, not a bit! I left my card and told them that they would hear from me.

"I took a train to a small town about forty miles from Chicago. I left my trunk at the hotel, and after making inquiries about the country I started out the next morning at 6 o'clock for the Holbrook farm, a distance of eleven miles. Was I tired? Indeed I was, most beautifully tired! But good luck was the reward for my long, hot walk, and so I was more than repaid. After I had enjoyed a hearty old-fashioned farm supper I told Mr. Holbrook my business. He was greatly interested and didn't seem to think there was anything at all out of the way in my visiting him.

He had been anxious to sell his place for some time, but like so many farmers living away from railroad connections he seldom went to the city or larger towns, and so knew little of the real estate firms, and was afraid to trust to the advertisements in the country papers. He placed the selling of his farm in my hands, and after we had settled about the price and my commission he hitched up and drove me nine miles across country to his cousin's farm. Here also I met with good luck, and at the end of the month I had sent in to the real estate firm in Chicago a list of forty-nine chicken farms in the State which were for sale or exchange.

I had also been able to make contracts with a number of farmers to buy their eggs at a low price, and corresponding contracts with wholesalers to sell them at a higher price, as a result of which I accumulated a modest few hundred dollars within a very short time.

"I worked up until the first of December, and then went home to rest till the first of March.

"Do I like the life? I love it! After I am at home for two weeks, in the noise and dirt and darkness of the city, I get restless. It is the Wanderlust, I guess. I feel the call of the woods and the sunshine and God's good, pure air. Of course, it has not been all sunshine and happiness for me. I have worked hard, and have some experiences far from pleasant.

"I remember one day in September, the first year I was out, I had walked five miles in a steady downpour of rain, and when I came to a farmhouse they would not let me come in. I suppose that they thought from my bedraggled appearance I was either a thief or an escaped lunatic. I tried to motion my good intentions to them through the window, but they only shook their heads wildly and jerked down the curtains. It was still raining, and I had turned cold; the next farm was four miles distance, and I was hungry and wet.

"I sat down on a rotten old bench until a rural mail carriage came in sight. I told the man my business and he told me to sit on a bench in the yard to eat, and then some one of the family watched me all the time to see that I did not take the bench or some other portable object.

"Two years ago I had a very unpleasant experience. I had arrived at a farmhouse at 6 in the evening. I did not tell them my business, as I knew the place was not for sale, and I only wished to remain there over night to break my journey to the next farm. After supper I went to the room they had given me and found a woman looking through the letters and other articles in my bag. I was angry and demanded an explanation, and she said, 'Well, I just allowed you was some of those show actors, and as we be good Methodists we don't want no one like you sleeping in our house, so you'd better git out!'

"I was too angry to explain, and after paying for my supper I took my bag and left. It was still light, and I knew it would soon be moonlight, but I felt nervous, for it was the first time I had ever been alone on a strange country road at night. By 9 o'clock I was almost hysterical from weariness and fright. There was not a house in sight, and the long stretch of lonely road seemed unending. About a half hour later I came to a small unfinished bridge, and saw a tiny tool house at the side of the road. I tried the door and found it unlocked. I crawled in, pushed aside the oil cans, picks and shovels, and—well, to tell the truth, I tried myself to sleep. However, it was a good sleep, and I did not feel a bit the worse for my experience the next morning.

"I must say that the really unpleasant experiences have been very few through these five years of my hobo life. I have been as far west as Kansas, as far south as Georgia, and have travelled through all of the Eastern States. As a rule, I have been treated with the greatest courtesy. Very often the good farmers would not accept any money from me for food or lodging. I can recall but very few occasions when the farmers passing me in their wagons did not offer to carry me to my destination.

"Yes, it has been a beautiful life. A life of freedom, of variety, of health. I have never known a sick day in all these five years. Financially it has been a success—more of a success than I ever dreamed it could be. My expenses have been small. The most I ever paid for three meals and lodging at a farm was seventy-five cents. Almost always they have only charged me fifty cents for the day, and then, as I said before, many times they would not let me pay anything at all.

"I have made and saved enough in five years to buy a farm of thirty-five acres in the southern part of Illinois, and have stocked it with chickens and other live stock, enough to bring in a more than comfortable living for our whole family. I have built a pretty bungalow on the place, with every modern convenience.

"I intend now to manage the place myself. My days will be too full of hardy, healthy labor to allow me time to be lonely. If I grow restless I can jump into the saddle and gallop out into the country with the feeling that my own loved ones, my own home are waiting for me at the end of the journey".

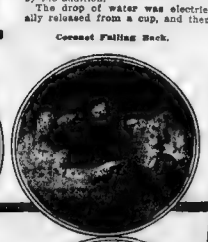
(Next week Miss Eva Landee will tell on this page how she got the idea of making expensive-looking hats out of cheap rice sacking; how, on a capital of a few dollars, she made the hats, and sold them at reasonable prices, and how she now has bought herself a real millinery shop with the proceeds. Her article will be illustrated with photographs showing in detail just how the hats are made.)

Studying Little Splashes to Show How Worlds Are Made

Drop of Water Falling Into Milk.

Coronet Effect Forming.

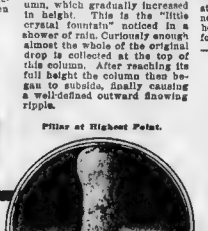
Coronet Rising Higher.



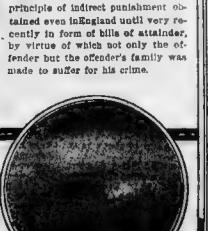
Coronet Falling Back.

Crater Pillar Forming.

Pillar Disappearing.



Pillar at Highest Point.



Pillar Vanishes Into Milk.

PROFESSOR ARTHUR MASON WORTHINGTON, of the British Royal Naval College, has made an interesting study of splashes of water, which he illustrates with instantaneous photographs.

These experiments show many remarkable things. They show that the splash caused by a smooth sphere dropping into water and a rough sphere were very different. A drop of water falling into water produced a still different splash.

These experiments help to explain how the universe in which we live was formed, as it is thought that it originally consisted of a mass of molten matter hurled around in drops and splashes. Some of the splashes show how a volcano with its crater is formed. In any case these experiments illustrate the general laws of mechanics in an entertaining way.

Well-polished marbles were dropped into a deep glass bowl full of water, and the spectators could see that they slipped in noiselessly with hardly any visible splash. The same spheres if wet, or roughened with sandpaper, or even if dusty, made a great noisy bubbly splash accompanied by the projection into the air of a tall jet of water whose summit rose even higher than the place from which the marble fell. In order to explain this astonishing difference each kind of splash was then followed in detail by means of the instantaneous photographs.

With the rough sphere the crater thrown up was curiously like that accompanying the splash of a liquid drop, and can be described as a "basket splash."

With a smooth sphere, on the other hand, the splash is totally different from the very first instant of contact, for the liquid instead of being driven laterally away is retained by the force of adhesion and guided over the solid surface so as to envelop it in a liquid sheath of exquisite thinness. Thus the sphere becomes covered with liquid before it is even below the general level of the surface.

The photographs given here were taken by Mr. Worthington with a specially-designed apparatus, the changes that take place in a splash being too rapid to be recorded by an ordinary camera shutter. The pictures were taken by means of a spark, the duration of which was less than three-millionths of a second, an interval of time which bears to a whole second about the same proportion as a day to a thousand years. One series illustrates the splash of a drop of water, rather over a quarter of an inch in diameter, falling about six feet inches into milk mixed with water. The object of adding milk to the water was to make the liquid light up better, and experiment showed that the character of the splash was not materially altered by the addition.

The drop of water was electrically released from a cup, and then as it fell it became elongated. Striking the water it threw up a little surrounding crater of liquid, from whose edge at pretty regular intervals little jets shot up. This crater increased gradually in breadth and height, reaching its greatest elevation in an eighth or ninth thousandth of a second. The original liquid of the drop was swept up the sides of the crater, this being evidenced by the little streaks of black, which are particles of lampblack brought down from the cup. For nearly a hundredth of a second the crater remained with little change of form; then it sank and widened when the rebound began. The bottom of the crater now began to rise in a column, which gradually increased in height. This is the "little crystal fountain" noticed in a shower of rain. Curiously enough almost the whole of the original drop is collected at the top of this column. After reaching its full height the column then began to subside, finally causing a well-defined outward flowing ripple.

Where Unfaithful Wives Are Punished in Effigy

TO punish an enemy by injuring an effigy of him would be but small satisfaction to most of us, and yet from the earliest times some such method has been employed in various parts of the world.

Thousands of years ago this sort of thing was practiced in India, Babylon and Egypt, as well as in Greece and Rome, and the same principle of indirect punishment obtained even in England until very recently in form of bills of attainder, by virtue of which not only the offender but the offender's family was made to suffer for his crime.

To-day, in Australia, the tribesmen punish their enemies by proxy, as it were. If a wife prove unfaithful, an effigy of her in clay is made, and fifty strong natives assemble around it and cast their sharp-pointed spears into it, as is shown in the illustration.

Spring's Odd New Trimmings

Elaborate Theatre Coats, Travelling Coats and Ostrich Plumes---And Two Gowns for Titled Ladies

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches and photographs of her own original models.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York City.

By LADY DUFF-GORDON

EVERY day now brings further revelations of the new modes created for the coming season, and a fuller realization, too, of their exceeding beauty. It is, in fact just as well that the knowledge of what awaits our choice and our wear should grow upon us gradually, as otherwise we should be somewhat dazzled and bewildered by the great beauty and the wonderful variety of our every article of attire.

For colorings are gorgeous—indeed, no other word can be rightly used; embroideries are more elaborate and more artistically contrived than ever before; and fabrics are equally exquisite, whether they be filmy semi-transparencies of ninon, in wonderfully shot effects of shadings, or rich tapestry brocades and velvets, which are being used for the fashioning of the latest theatre cloaks.

The first point to be noted about them is their practically universal possession of enormously deep collars, the sailor shapes having been almost entirely abandoned in favor of the which display points reaching almost to the waist, and there further lengthened by the addition of handsome and weighty tassels; others again forming a rounded curve which is faithfully followed by the cut of the coat at the hem.

This latter style I saw and admired greatly, as carried out in old blue and silver brocade, whose device was outlined and accentuated by a broidery of dull gold and silver Russia braid, sewn on edgeways, so that a raised effect was secured, and then lining this deeply curved collar with old rose satin (by the way, the same lovely color contrast was further emphasized by the coat lining), and furthermore, there was in evidence a tassel whose size and shaping were positively reminiscent of an old-fashioned bell pull!

Then again another new model for the Spring is carried out in dull, soft mauve satin, with a trio of corded loops and satin-covered buttons to fasten it on the left hip, where a narrow device wrought in gold is carried down to the hem and then and there continued as a bordering.

In this case the deep collar and big revers are of strongly meshed mauve net, wrought with fine gold braid. This scheme of decoration is used again on the big pocket-flaps which figure at either side, though, capacious as they are, they are destined for ornament only.

And next you may also like to hear of the newest creation in the way of a travelling or race coat, as built to tailor-made perfection in biscuit-colored face cloth, three big bone buttons banded broadly across with plain gold fastening the same number of curves far over at the left side, after which the straight line of the cloth is followed by several rows of stitching.

And, in addition to its cut, it is made notable by a rather deep, rounded collar and enormous pointed lapels of striped satin in beige and blue and russet red and leafgreen colorings, a bordering of stitched cloth giving firmness as well as finish. At the back a square panel effect is secured by means of stitched arrangings set with those new and very effective buttons, the whole thing indeed being of admirable style and as serviceable as it is smart.

But now I have to tell you of the new beauties of the ostrich feathers which are to adorn so many of the fare-extending hats. To begin with, subtle shot effects and definite color contrasts are to be almost as much in evidence in these feathers as in dress fabrics, a deep purple, for example, merging midway into pale turquoise blue, while then the deeper color comes again in the final feathery strands. More delicate and very delightful is a gray plume, shading through white to dawn pink, another artistic blending being that of the softest shades of gray, mauve and green.

These plumes are sometimes used to form an encircling ruche or band for a big hat, while then at the side will come an upstanding aigrette of ostrich tips, another forthcoming novelty being a veritable fringe of ostrich feathers, which falls from an upper ruche also entirely formed of the soft feathers.

Still again there has been contrived an ingenious representation of a gigantic chrysanthemum blossom—large enough to take a prize at any show and also to form the sole adornment of even the new and far-extending hats! The whole thing is made in ostrich feathers, shaded perhaps in mauve and yellow or pink, the "stem" forming the stalk and being either bordered at each side with cut strands of the soft plumage or else being entirely concealed by their curled softness.

But all this time the illustrations which must have already caught your eye are waiting to be duly introduced to you, and so I will stop my gossiping and inform you that the first and photographed model which is equally suitable for home, dinner or restaurant wear, is carried out in shot gray and green ninon over an underdress of flesh pink ninon and lace.

This latter fabric, being almost entirely used for the corsage, gives a somewhat fascinating suggestion of deshabille to the dress, whose further adornment is simply affected by means of a broad broidery and a final fringe of silver, in dull and bright shadings. Such a dress has—for all its apparent fragility—so many uses that it will be a sensible possession for any one of you, and after it has done its duty in the way of public appearances, it can end its career as a teagown for private wear at home.

Similar advantages also apply to a gown of delicate green and blue shot ninon, which I have just made for the Duchess of Manchester, a queer shade of red being introduced in the folded band which holds in the soft folds beneath the bust, where, too, there comes a peep of an Oriental broidery which brings many colors together, but blends them so closely that no one of them is actually distinguishable.

Next, for the sake of contrast, you may care to consider the unrelieved simplicity of a shooting costume for the Marchioness of Doure, the straight line of the coat being so faithfully contrived that here would hardly seem to be any break in the two garments. But for all its tautness and apparent seamlessness, the necessary freedom of movement is insured by the introduction at each side of the skirt of some closely folded pleats, this arrangement which is, in my opinion, always advisable, and which if more frequently followed would save us from some unpleasant and unseemly sights.

And finally as last week you had a picture of the costume which Lily Elsie wears as the leader of the feminine and fascinating orchestra in "The Waltz Dream," I am now sending you a sketch of the other dress in which, it seems, she is acting as a leader of fashion. The underdress is of fresh pink ninon, striped with silver tissue and banded about above the ankles and a transparent bordering of lace, with pale turquoise tinted ribbon. Over this again comes ninon in an equally delicate shade of pink appliqué, with panels of lace which are all outlined with pearls, while between their cobweb softness come broidered ornaments of pearls and clusters and circlets of wee flowers wrought in pale pink and blue and mauve and yellow ribbons.

Reading Your Heart by Its Own Electric Currents

AN instrument which records the heart beats and pulse of patients in distant wards has been installed at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. It is known as the "heart station," the establishment of which has been contemplated for some time by the directors of the institution. The wonderful apparatus, which was invented by Professor Edelmann, of Munich, is now in operation under the direction of Dr. G S Bond.

The purpose of the "Herzstation" or "heart station," is to determine the condition of a person's heart as an aid to the diagnosis of his disease.

It is a well-known principle of rent, and, consequently, the conducted by a non stationary medium through a magnetic field, the current and, consequently, the conductor, will be deflected in a direction at right angles to the course of the current. It has also been known in the medical world that as every muscle of the body generates a certain amount of electrical current in movement, so the heart generates a current in its movement.

As the Johns Hopkins Hospital is recognized throughout the world as one of America's foremost medical institutions, the results from the new acquisition of the "heart station" will be eagerly awaited by members of the medical profession and laymen throughout the country.

It is also known that an imaginary line through the body has on one side all the currents generated by one side of the heart, and on the other side the currents generated by the opposite side, so that by connecting an electrode to each side of the body, obliterating all other currents of the body by placing it as nearly as possible at rest, the physician has a current of the heart which he can measure and examine.

Working on this principle, scientists have been trying for years to devise an instrument to record the heart current. The most successful of these was a capillary electrometer, in which the non-stationary conductor was a small column of mercury. The difficulty with this, as with all others up to the present invention, was that the slowness of movement of the medium prevented an accurate record.

To eliminate this slothfulness in the conductor was the aim of H W Einthoven, the perfector of the machine that has been brought to Baltimore. His success is due to the use of a conductor of spun quartz or platinum wire of a diameter of one twelve hundred and fiftieth of an inch, one-half thickness of a red blood corpuscle, which cannot be seen with the naked eye. This wire is suspended in a magnetic field made by two powerful magnets.

From the "heart station" in the basement of the surgical building wires and a telephone run through each ward in the hospital. The patient is put at rest, one electrode is fastened to his arm and one to the opposite leg, and the current generated by the movement of the heart of the patient is conducted to the quartz wire suspended in the magnetic field which is deflected according to the amount of current flowing through it.

As ray light is thrown through a condensing microscope upon the moving wire, the shadow from which is thrown through another microscope which magnifies it 600 times and throws the shadow through a slit at right angles to the position of the wire upon the screen. Back of the screen is a camera with a rotating film, which takes a record picture of the movement on the point made by the intersection of the slit with the shadow of the wire. This picture is compared with pictures of perfectly normal heart currents, and by this method the physicians are often able to determine the nature of the patient's affliction.

The distance of the patients from the station is a matter of little importance—a hundred yards or a mile makes no difference. It would be possible for a doctor to sit in the station and feel the pulse of every person in Baltimore, provided the conditions were fulfilled.

There is only one other such "heart station" in America, but the one at the Johns Hopkins is looked upon as the most perfect of its nature in the world.

My Secrets of Beauty.

No. III—To Beautify the Hands

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

WHEN Mme. Lina Cavalieri speaks of the beauty of hands it is with the voice of authority, for her hands are famous for their beauty. They are slender, graceful hands, tapering exquisitely from the wrist. The fingers are slender and delicately pointed. The hand are exquisitely white.

Mme. Cavalieri gives advice about preserving the beauty, and developing the grace of the hands, that can be read with profit by everyone.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri

ARE you marring the beauty of your hands by bad habits?

A startling question perhaps but are you? For instance do you, consciously or unconsciously, clench them? While you read this article notice whether or not your hands are relaxed. Tightened, are they not, as though they were grasping an invisible something? So I thought. So, I have observed, are most hands most of the time.

If your hands have bad habits, break those habits. Cure them of the habit of clenching nothing and of gripping too rightly whatever they do seize. We waste a great deal of vital force through the hands.

Don't allow your cuticle to make inroads upon your nails. Press it back carefully every night when you wash your hands by using a soft towel. If the cuticle still adheres thrust the fingers into a jar of cold cream or I keep them there for twenty minutes or more or if you are too tired to "fix up with your hands" as it were rub cold cream vigorously around the nail before retiring.

Don't permit the knuckles to become enlarged. If you have already allowed to appear this ugly blemish of the hands, try to correct it by this exercise of rolling the fingers. Grasp the middle knuckle between the thumb and forefinger of the other hand and roll it twenty or more times back and forth between them. Finish with a stroke upward to the tip of the fingers and downward to where the finger joins the hand. Treat the knuckles of every finger of each hand this way daily, and improvement will be noted, especially if cold cream or oil is rubbed into the knuckles at the same time.

Do not allow the hands to form habits of awkwardness. An exercise that will correct awkwardness is this: Stand with the arms extended horizontally at the sides. Open the hands so that the fingers are stretched to their fullest capacity. Close them as though you were crumpling something in them. Then open suddenly again and repeat. Do this from twenty times to thirty or forty each day and you will find the stiffness and awkwardness of the hands disappearing.

An awkward wrist makes an awkward hand. Extend the arms at the sides as before, bend the elbows, raise the forearm and let the hand fall, as though it were too heavy for the wrist to support upright. Then raise the hand, bending it back as far as possible this will, if persevered in, give great pliancy to the wrists.

Don't let the hands grow too fat it destroys their symmetry, though a limit that a too fat hand is to be preferred for beauty to a too thin one. For making the hand thinner and more symmetrical use the glove stroke. The movement is like that of fitting a glove well to the hand. Press upon the back of one hand the fingers of the other, beginning with the finger tips and extending the stroke downward to the elbow. Twenty such strokes a day will soon give results in a more shapely hand.

A graceful pose of the hand is best described by a great artist. He said when a hand was most graceful it resembled a bird in flight. Playing ball is a good exercise for the development of grace of the hand and forearm. Hold a rubber ball naturally in the palm of the hand, with fingers bent, before tossing the ball, and you will see your hand in its most graceful pose and recall the artist's description.

A difficult but valuable exercise for developing the grace and pliancy of the hand is that of tossing the ball upward and receiving it as it descends on the back of the hand. Don't let the ball roll off to the floor, but lower the hand steadily to accommodate itself to the bouncing of the ball. Then reverse, bringing the ball to a standstill at the back of the hand.

Then try tossing the ball up from the back of the hand and catching it in the palm.

Another difficult exercise that makes the body flexible at the same time as the hands is catching the ball on the back of the hand, permitting it to roll off the backs of the fingers and, stooping, catch it before it falls to the floor.

An excellent exercise for hands and body is tossing the ball over the shoulder with one hand and catching it with the other. This being so difficult an exercise, five times are sufficient for the exercise until you have become accustomed and dexterous.

Never wear tight gloves. Loose ones are far more elegant. And the tight glove gives the hand a puffy, congested appearance.

"What remedy is there for gray hair?" asks an anxious New York correspondent.

None for which I can vouch. There is much belief in Europe just now in the efficacy of the pilocarpine remedies as preventives and, in some measure, as cures. Ask your druggist for one of the preparations. They are prepared by several firms, with varying proportions of the pilocarpine.

From a Pennsylvania town comes a request for a formula for a lotion that will soften and whiten the hands and arms.

Glycerine	1 oz.
Rosewater	1 oz.
Tincture of benzoin	1 oz.

Use almond meal instead of soap in washing the hands. Sprinkle into the water a half-dozen drops of benzoin. Use a heaping handful of the almond meal, at least, in each cleansing of the hands.

A Pittsburg girl writes of an obstinate case of cracked lips, and asks how to cure them. Do not bite the lips. Anoint them several times a day, and especially before going out, with this preparation:

Almond oil	1 oz.
White wax	½ oz.
Spermaceti	½ oz.
Oil of rose geranium	½ dram.

A Staten Island maiden writes: "Will you please publish on your page a good cold cream to use after steaming the face?"

Certainly, only I would steam the face seldom, if at all. It is my opinion that while steaming undoubtedly cleanses the skin, it makes it flabby and makes way for wrinkles. The Greeks used after the Turkish bath this delightful skin feeding mixture:

Pure olive oil	7 ozs.
Lavender oil	1 dram

This cold cream is admirable for use, especially when the pores are hungrily open.

Spermaceti, 1 oz., 400 grs. (av.); White wax, 1 oz., 370 grs. (av.); Expressed oil of almonds, 3 fluid ounces; Rosewater, 3 fluid ounces; Pulverized sodium borate, 33 grains.

A Milwaukee correspondent sends this inquiry.

"Could you tell me through the paper how to change a baggy looking appearance of the skin under the eyes? It is not due to ill health, but seems to be inherited from a parent. I would look ten years younger if this could be corrected. The skin seems to be quite loose there and the trouble spoils what would otherwise be termed good looks.

Such appearance is often caused by low vitality. But if you are sure you are perfectly well the cause may be what physicians term a "low grade of inflammation," which extends from the eyes, which it causes to be slightly reddened, to their surroundings, and relaxes the skin beneath the eyes. To treat the skin beneath the eyes it is best to treat the eyes themselves. Bathe the eyes several times a day and always on rising and retiring with this mixture applied with an eyecup:

Camphor water	2 ozs.
Borax	20 grains.

If the inflammation is so obstinate that it will not yield to this cure try the more heroic one of:

Distilled water	100 grams.
Quince seed mucilage	10 grams.
Water of cherry laurel	5 grams.
Borax	1 gram.

A Freeport, L. I., girl complains of a severe case of blackheads, and asks what is to be done for them. In so severe a case better steam the face well, then apply green soap with a complexion brush, rubbing vigorously until the blackheads are removed. Afterwards use a good cold cream for soothing the irritated skin. This is a good healing cream, but regularly applied might cause hair to grow on the face:

Almond oil	1 oz.
Red vaseline	1 oz.
Lanoline	1 oz.

Heat these well together and stir in a few drops of any perfume preferred.

If the blackheads do not yield to the first treatment try a second and third, being careful not to too greatly irritate the skin, which might be permanently injured.

"For making the hand thinner and more symmetrical use the glove stroke." Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

"An exercise to correct awkwardness of the hands."

"An awkward wrist makes an awkward hand."

"Press the cuticle back from the nails every night when you wash your hands."

This Little Girl Had Infantile Paralysis

Both legs were paralyzed as a result of Brain Fever. Her father brought her here for treatment. Read what he has to say:

Gentlemen: [illegible] when she was seven or eight years old she could not walk at all. We recently had her picture taken and sent one to show you how well she is, but unfortunately the picture does not tell the entire story, for one must see her run around to appreciate how well she is. She has many to your credit and I know some of them are sure you will try.

The Work Antidote for Brain Fag

DR. TOULOUSE, the well-known Paris physician and writer on medical topics, has created much wide comment by a recent article advocating different kinds of work as a preventive of brain fag. Here are some of his remarks:

"Not even the most lazy person, occupying herself with toilettes and teas, or the tranquil bureaucrat can escape the evil. I know a rich society man who has contracted grave nervous troubles by occupying himself too closely and injudiciously with a small collection of rare books.

"A work where creation is the important element often takes this turn; and this will surprise many persons who have a great respect for mental speculation. A great savant like Henri Poincare (the French mathematician) or a poet like Musset proceeds in this manner, without more restraint or fatigue than that.

That is why artists, savants, inventors and business men are capable of remaining so long at their work.

"Our second mode of intellectual activity is more a question of will power. The conscious attention is constant, and retains the mind on a straight road, which it cannot leave. An accountant represents this other kind of work. When the brain suffers from malaise, which diminishes its power of activity, a little sum in figures increases excessively the fatigue. Creation by effort of the will is very wearing."

The doctor concludes that work which is largely mechanical, neither intense intellectually nor muscularly, such as copying, sewing, folding, etc., depresses the energies to the point of rendering the effort painful.

Among other advice the doctor gives to avoid the symptoms of the fashionable complaint is to establish neutral zones in one's work—occupations of a less intensity. The society woman should read in between her fatiguing visits; in the professional world we are counselled to go out and buy something in a crowded shop, or to attend to a machine, when we are fatigued. And it is the pace that kills. Hasten slowly. When we have much to do, we are to go slower. And to the shop assistant he says: "Don't try to serve two people at once."

Finally, we are to know when we are doing too much by the quality of our sleep. If it is troubled by dreams of work, then it is time to put on the brake.

"Why I Buy a New Hat Every Week"

Billie Burke's New Language of Hats

"Pink Hats for Happiness.
"Black Hats for Stateliness.
"White Hats for Innocence.
"Mauve Hats for Pensiveness.
"Gold Hats for Extravagance.
"Green Hats for Intellectuality."

"I always wear a hat that shows at least part of my hair, no matter what the fashion."

Miss Billie Burke Who Has a New Hat for Every Week in the Year.

By Billie Burke

YES, I have a hat for every week in the year. Let me whisper to you a little secret. I have more. My hat bills range from twelve hundred to two thousand dollars a year.

But before you say "What a horridly extravagant girl!" let me justify my buying so many hats, if I can, and I think I can.

In the first place every one indulges his hobby if he is able, and my hobby is hats. Since my babyhood I have been a little mad about hats. From the time I could walk I preferred hats to dolls. Now I very much prefer them to dogs. The indulgence in a hobby, so long as it is harmless, is one of the rights granted us by the Declaration of Independence. It is included in the right to "the pursuit of happiness."

Secondly, I am moody, and the moody girl requires more hats than the one of even temperament. The temperamental girl wants hats to match her moods—black hats for her stately moods, white hats for her ingenue moods, gold hats for her extravagant moods, mauve for her pensive hours, and pink for her happy hours, and green for her intellectual phases.

I am really in earnest about this. I dress according to my moods, and as I have many moods, I have many hats. The girl who is of even temperament is content with a few and the same hats and she wears them out. Her hats, like her mood, go on almost forever.

There is another reason. Hats are like flowers. Both quickly lose their freshness. Literally they fade. Their delicacy of coloring withstands little wearing. Some hats I wear only a few times, others quite often during a season. But I never wear one after it has begun to fade.

A fourth reason for changing my hats often is that we change often in appearance. One day we are looking our best. Our vitality mounts high. Our spirits are at concert pitch. Our eyes are bright. Our hair is electric. Our step is high. We are like the mettlesome horses at on a brisk cold morning dash furiously past my little white apartment on Riverside Drive. Then we can wear our most trying hats, those of the most vivid color and most extreme shape.

But there are days when our vitality is low, when we are paler than usual, our eyes are listless, and half of our hair seems to have vanished in the night. That is the day when we must choose our most becoming hats, the hats that are as reliable as our oldest, most tried friends, that never fail us. But dress as carefully as we may there comes a time when we look into our mirror and know that a hat that was becoming when we bought it is no longer so. We may have changed the mode of wearing our hair, or the gown we are wearing that day is not perfectly in tune with the hat, or perhaps some subtle psychological change in us has taken place. Whatever the cause, we know that hat is no longer becoming and we bid it farewell.

Last while the amount I spend on hats during the year may seem extravagant I economize in other ways to save at least half that amount.

If I were asked to advise a girl of limited means how to dress I should say lay out your income or allowance into thirds—spend one-third for gowns, one third for boots, gloves, handkerchiefs, hats, etc., and underwear, but be sure to allow one-third for hats.

The hat is the frame for your face If you have ever taken a good picture to a shop to be framed you realized how difficult and important it is to so frame that picture as to bring out its best points. That is exactly what a hat should do for the face. The hat is as important a part of a woman's costume as her hair is to herself. No matter how good the gown, nor how well booted and shoed the woman, if her hat is not smart she looks dowdy in some degree. Sartorial murder has been done. As we often hear, the hat kills the costume.

Each choosing of a hat is like choosing a husband. Every choice is a new trial of individual taste.

Two rules I always follow. No matter what the fashion, I would never wear a hat whose brim reaches down upon the shoulders, hiding the neck. The hat that hides the neck and side of the neck is always a mistake. The most beautiful line of a woman's head is that which carries from the full back part of the head downward to the neck and down to the shoulder. Even a large hat need not hide this, for the brim can flare away from that line. Another rule, an invariable one with me, is to wear a hat that does not obscure the profile. The profile should always be shown, provided one has a profile worth showing.

Every woman should know how to buy the right hats for herself, but very soon she thinks every other consideration should be set at naught but the one with fitability. I tell my views of what other women should wear. I have noticed these facts, however:

That the thin-faced woman, especially the one with strong features—a big nose should shun the hat that has sharp corners or angular trimmings. So, for her is trimmed hats, no aigrettes or wings. For her there should be the round hat. The circles nature has given her should be subdued by surrounding curves. The round turban and soft toque or the poke would be becoming.

For the round faced woman, especially the short, stout one who is lacking in neck, the hat with angles is good. Being overgifted by nature with curves, she may have the aid of art in furnishing her angles. Aigrettes and wings and hats with sharp, sudden corners are here by inalienable right.

To the woman of any type, sisters all in hat choosing, I humbly tender the advice: "Never try on a hat while sitting." Milliners always give you a chair so that you may be comfortable. I always reject this offered chair and stand and walk about while trying on my hats, looking at them from every angle. We should choose our hats as much with regard to the figure as the face.

A small woman should never wear a large hat. It overwhelms her, swallows up her individuality, makes her absurd. In fact, I don't like to see any woman wear a very large hat. Small hats and medium sized ones are becoming and in better taste. Our hats should set us off, not we the hats. We should not be mere walking advertisements for millinery freaks. That is the sandwich man's business.

No woman should wear a hat setting up off the head, as though it had perched there by accident. A hat should look as though it belongs to the wearer.

A blonde fancies she should wear only black hats. She can wear hats in any color that she can wear in gowns. But some of the shades should not be next her face. These should be a dividing facing. For instance, a pink hat may be very becoming to a blonde and go very well with her pink gown, but if the hat is faced with black velvet or tulle or lace it will be much more becoming.

A brunette can wear a great many shades—violets and reds and yellows and blues and greens—but I like best to see her in black and white. Black and white can be worn by every woman, and every woman looks well in them. Given a black gown, a black hat with a touch of color on it, and a pair of white gloves and the woman is well dressed for any place or occasion.

The trouble in this country is that women go to extremes in hats. They wear very large hats that fall absurdly on their shoulders. Or they wear hard looking affairs with sharp corners and hard looking knots of trimming. Everything about a hat should be soft, or look soft.

Somebody should start a hat reform, and we should all join it.

"The hair should be to the face what the frame is to a picture"

Valentine Puzzle

$50, First Prize. $15, Third Prize.
$25, Second Prize. $10, Fourth Prize.

Do you recognize the outline of the jar within the heart? We say you will. Many advertising experts say you won't. They say that we make the contest too hard.

Come, clever and observing people! Come, amateur detectives! Prove you exist. There are rewards for the cleverest. Try this puzzle on your husband, wife or friend! Hold up this page before him or her and ask what product comes in jars of that shape, and what company made popular the following famous sentence:

"Don't envy a good complexion: use ——— and have one."

The Contest—Write on a sheet of paper a sentence of ten words or less. This sentence must contain the name of this cleansing massage cream, and said sentence must suggest its merits and benefits in a truthful, logical way. For the four best sentences, we will award the above cash prizes, totalling $100 to four persons.

Suggestions:—We like sentences such as these "Don't envy a good complexion: use ——— and have one." (C. F. Abt, of Denver, Colo., won $25 prize for that sentence in a previous contest we held.) Again: "——— clears the skin like a month in the mountains." ($15 to D. R. Frary, Philadelphia, Pa., for that.) Make your prize sentence simple, clear and truthful. Don't claim for this massage cream any virtues which we ourselves do not claim.

All Dealers, 50c, 75c & $1.

Note—This famous product is not a "cold," "grease" or "vanishing" cream. They have their use, but this invigorating massage cream is entirely different in purpose, uses and results. Remember, use cold creams for cold cream uses, but for an invigorating, cleansing massage, get ———

Will Your Cold Cream Thus Benefit Your Skin?

1. Will your cold cream get into the pores, and after a few moments of massaging roll out, laden with dust and other infecting matter which cause so many complexion ills? This cleansing massage cream will.

2. Will your cold cream bring a natural, healthy glow to the face? This invigorating massage cream will. It is so scientifically made that a slight invigorating friction induces the rosy circulation through your cheeks.

Briefly, will your cold cream change an unattractive skin into one that indicates the "clean-cut" man or the "deliciously clean" woman? This completely cleansing massage cream will.

Note.—The above jar shows a style of our product you may have seen although that style of jar is not bought much except by barbers and professional massage specialists.
